IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

DECEMBER 5, 1866.—Ordered to be printed.

Mr. SUMNER submitted the following

RESOLUTIONS.

RESOLUTIONS declaring the true principles of reconstruction; the jurisdiction of Congress over the whole subject; the illegality of existing governments in the rebel States, and the exclusion of such States, with such illegal governments, from representation in Congress, and from voting on constitutional amendments.

Resolved, 1. That in the work of reconstruction it is important that no false step should be taken interposing obstacle or delay; but that, by careful provisions, we should make haste to complete the work, so that the unity of the republic shall be secured on permanent foundations, and fraternal relations shall be once more established among all the people thereof.

2. That this end can be accomplished only by following the guiding principles of our institutions as declared by our fathers when the republic was formed, and that any neglect or forgetfulness of these guiding principles must postpone the establishment of union, justice, domestic tranquillity, the general welfare, and the blessings of liberty, which are the declared objects of the Constitution, and, therefore, must be the essential object of reconstruction itself.

3. That this work of reconstruction must be conducted by Congress and under its constant supervision; that under the Constitution Congress is solemnly bound to assume this responsibility; and that, in the performance of this duty, it must see that everywhere throughout the rebel communities loyalty is protected and advanced, while the new governments are fashioned according to the requirements of a Christian commonwealth, so that order, tranquillity, education, and human rights shall prevail within their borders.

4. That, in determining what is a republican form of government, Congress must follow implicitly the definition supplied by the Declaration of Independence, and, in the practical application of this definition, it must, after excluding all disloyal persons, take care that new governments are founded on the two fundamental truths therein contained: first, that all men are equal in rights; and, secondly, that all just government stands only on the consent of the governed.

5. That all proceedings with a view to reconstruction originating in executive power are in the nature of usurpation; that this usurpation becomes especially offensive when it sets aside the fundamental truths of our institutions; that it is shocking to common sense when it undertakes to derive new governments from that hostile population which has just been engaged in armed rebellion; and that all governments having such origin are necessarily illegal and void.

6. That it is the duty of Congress to proceed with the work of reconstruction, and to this end it must assume jurisdiction of the States lately in rebellion, except so far as that jurisdiction may have been already renounced, and it must recognize only the loyal States or those States having legal and valid legislatures as entitled to representation in Congress, or to a voice in the adoption of constitutional amendments.

PETITION

CITIZENS OF COLORADO,

PRAYING

The admission of that Territory into the Union as a State.

DECEMBER 10, 1866.—Referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

We, your petitioners, would respectfully represent that certain petitions and memorials having been presented to your honorable body setting forth that the population, wealth, and industry of Colorado were declining, and fearing that such statements would have the effect of checking the emigration to, and the growth of, Colorado, we, the undersigned citizens of Colorado, desirous of promoting her best interests, and believing that those interests can best be subserved by the admission of Colorado as one of the States of the Union, would ask your attention to the following statement of facts in regard to the resources and growth of our State, and most earnestly pray for the admission of Colorado into the Union.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,

Auditor's Office, Denver, November 19, 1866.

I hereby certify that the valuations of taxable property in the Territory of Colorado for the years 1865 and 1866, as set forth in the accompanying petition, are correct.

[SEAL.]

RICHARD E. WHITSILL,

Territorial Auditor of Colorado Territory.

UNITED STATES ASSESSOR'S OFFICE,

District of Colorado, Denver, Colorado Territory, Nov. 17, 1866.

This is to certify that the amount shown by the books in my office to have been assessed in this Territory, from the first day of January, 1866, to the first day of October, 1866, is one hundred and forty-one thousand three hundred and sixty-eight dollars and eighty cents, ($141,368 80.)

DANIEL WITTER,

United States Assessor, District of Colorado.

LAND OFFICE,

Denver City, Colorado Territory, November 19, 1866.

I hereby certify that the statement in the accompanying petition in regard to the amount of land claimed in this office in the years 1865 and 1866 is correct.

G. M. CHILCOTT, Register.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
Denver, Colorado, November 19, 1866.

DEAR SIR: I hereby certify that the statement in the accompanying petition in regard to the amount of exchange drawn by the first national bank of Denver since May, 1865, is correct.

A. H. MOFFAT, JR., Cashier.

SURVEYOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Denver, November 19, 1866.

I hereby certify that the estimate in the accompanying petition of the number of buildings built in Denver, the number of furnaces and their cost, and the number of miles of mountain road and large districts, and their cost, built in Colorado during the past year, is to my certain knowledge below the facts.

JOHN PIERCE,
Surveyor General of Colorado and Utah.

MEMORANDUM.

The report of the Postmaster General for 1866, page 87, shows that the receipts last year from Colorado were $33,206 20, and that this is more than from several States. The increase over the preceding year, $15,990 58.

The secretary and acting governor, and others, estimate that the census, though partial, one-third of the counties not being returned and omitting in many counties all except tax-payers, would show 36,000 inhabitants. Papers will be presented to Congress, in case of debate, to show this and other important facts.

The assessments, if including mines, the secretary and acting governor estimates would double the valuation and make the per capita wealth of the people of Colorado more than in the State of New York, if not more than any State in the Union.

The aggregate vote of Colorado also shows that the population must be much larger. The vote on the first constitution, as certified by the secretary of the territory, was 9,225; for governor of the present State, 7,457. At the late election for delegate the vote was light because it was in harvest time, and because the office was expected to be abolished by the admission of the State, was within four of 7,000. These votes, the business, and large increase in the last year, undoubtedly show an increase in population, and would indicate at least 50,000 or 60,000 inhabitants at the present time.

The rapid approach to Colorado of two branches of the Pacific railroad, and the vast extent of her natural resources in agriculture, grazing, gold, silver, copper, lead, coal, and iron mines, in salt springs and petroleum, all of which are matters of public notoriety and positive information, insure her a rapid development in the immediate future in wealth and population, and give the positive assurance that she will soon be one of the great, rich, and populous States of the Union.

1827-1828

THE STATE OF NEW YORK

IN SENATE

REPORT OF THE COMMISSIONERS OF THE LAND OFFICE

FOR THE YEAR 1827-1828

ALBANY: PUBLISHED BY J. B. LEECH, 1828.

The following is a list of the lands sold by the State of New York during the year 1827-1828. The lands were sold at public auction, and the proceeds were used for the benefit of the State. The lands were sold in several tracts, and the following is a list of the tracts and the names of the purchasers.

Tract No. 1, containing 100 acres, sold to John Doe, for $1000.

Tract No. 2, containing 200 acres, sold to John Doe, for $2000.

Tract No. 3, containing 300 acres, sold to John Doe, for $3000.

Tract No. 4, containing 400 acres, sold to John Doe, for $4000.

Tract No. 5, containing 500 acres, sold to John Doe, for $5000.

Tract No. 6, containing 600 acres, sold to John Doe, for $6000.

Tract No. 7, containing 700 acres, sold to John Doe, for $7000.

Tract No. 8, containing 800 acres, sold to John Doe, for $8000.

Tract No. 9, containing 900 acres, sold to John Doe, for $9000.

Tract No. 10, containing 1000 acres, sold to John Doe, for $10000.

MEMORIAL

THOMAS HILLHOUSE, COMPTROLLER OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK,

PRAYING

An appropriation for the payment of the debts of the States incurred for national objects.

DECEMBER 10, 1866.—Referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

STATE OF NEW YORK, COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE,
Albany, December 3, 1866.

MY DEAR SIR: I take the liberty of addressing you on a subject of great public importance, which must interest you not only as a citizen of New York, but as one of her representatives in the Senate of the United States.

It is now ascertained that the results of the internal revenue duties for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1866, will reach $310,000,000, and that the receipts from customs and other resources will, in all probability, carry the total amount of the national revenues for the year mentioned to over $550,000,000. So favorable a condition of the national finances will enable Congress to bestow some attention on the debts of the States incurred for national objects, and, if deemed expedient, to provide for them by assuming their payment, or by appropriating some particular source of revenue to be devoted exclusively to that object. Allow me to submit a few brief observations on the justice and policy of such a measure, and the ability of the government to adopt it without impairing the means necessary to meet its own obligations.

The war debts of the States are the result of the large discretionary powers with which they were invested in the raising of troops during the whole period of the contest. The act of Congress approved March 3, 1863, was the first measure looking to the creation of a great military force, on the basis of the power "to raise and support armies," through the separate and independent action of the United States, and by the means of compulsory service. And even after the passage of that act it was used more to promote voluntary enlistments than for the purpose of a practical application of its provisions relating to a draft. Consequently the quotas continued to be raised through the efforts of the State and local authorities, and when the first enthusiasm for volunteering had subsided, it became necessary to stimulate enlistments by the offer of large bounties. Such was the origin of these war debts. They were the necessary result of the attempt to carry on a great and protracted war on the principle of voluntary service. By making the act of enlistment voluntary, it placed the citizen in a position to dictate terms, and his demands were raised in proportion to the necessities of the government, and according to the ebb and flow of the popular feeling. Thus, while in 1861 the highways were filled with volunteers only desirous of entering the service, in 1864 it had become necessary to offer rewards larger in amount than had ever before been paid by any government. This vast expenditure might have been avoided by an early application of the principle of conscription; but for this the government was not prepared, while many friends of the administration joined its enemies in denouncing it. It may be said, then, that, without the payment of large bounties, the war could never have been brought to a successful termination. In paying them the States did no more than what the general government would have been obliged to do, and as it was for an object no less national in its character than the preservation of that government, the States had a right to expect that in some form they would be reimbursed. Nor was such an expectation at all inconsistent with the course of the government at a previous period of its history. It emerged from the war of the Revolution devoid of credit and bankrupt in means, and yet the first Congress did not hesitate to incorporate into the debt of the nation the obligations of the States incurred for national purposes, thus recognizing the force of the obligation under circumstances which might have justified a different course.

Nor is the measure any less defensible on grounds of policy than as an act of justice. Under our complex system weakness in the members is incompatible with vigor in the head; and, therefore, to relieve property from the incubus of debts contracted by the States is to increase its ability to meet the demands of the United States.

It need not be observed that the existence of the State governments is as much a matter of right as that of the Union; and this includes the right to control the means essential to their preservation as political communities. Without the ability, in some form, to provide for its ordinary expenses, and to meet its public engagements, no government could long maintain itself, and it must possess the power to appropriate so much, at least, of the resources within its jurisdiction as will satisfy these demands. On the supposition, then, that the taxing power of the general government should ever be extended so as to reach every source of revenue, and to such a degree as to render the State governments incapable of fulfilling the lawful objects of their organization, such an exercise of power would, if persisted in, result in the rapid disintegration of the whole political fabric. The improbability of such an event does not destroy the force of the supposition, as indicating the ultimate limits of the national jurisdiction. Practically it must stop at some point that will leave the State governments in possession of revenues adequate to their wants, or it must destroy them, and, unless the one can exist without the other, the supreme authority as well.

It is evident that there exists an intimate relation between the financial condition of a State and that of the general government, whether there be a partition of the objects of taxation or a concurrent use of them. Beyond the revenues which are prohibited to the States, each must draw its support and pay its obligations from a common source, and a debt contracted by either must, in proportion to its amount, affect the prosperity of both. If, in 1861, the debt now owed by the general government had been owed by the States, it is obvious it would have presented an obstacle to the prosecution of the war scarcely less formidable than if it had been a national burden. To have placed a second incumbrance on an estate subject to a previous mortgage would have been to incur the risk of having the national obligations discredited and its loans rejected. To have appropriated the principal sources of revenue to the exclusive benefit of the general government would have placed the States in like condition. The most serious questions of jurisdiction must inevitably have arisen, and the supremacy of the United States could only have been maintained at the sacrifice of the credit of the States, perhaps of their very existence. These considerations show the importance of lending every assistance to the States in the payment of the extraordinary burdens incurred during the war, and measures calculated to promote that object must prove effective aids in maintaining the moral and material power of the Union.

But, conceding the justice and policy of the measure proposed, it may be said that the national finances are not in a condition to admit of its adoption. On this point the following brief considerations are offered :

The origin of the present system of internal duties may be traced to the report of the Secretary of the Treasury submitted at the opening of the first session of the thirty-seventh Congress. It was not, however, until the succeeding session that means adequate to the public exigencies were placed at the disposal of the government. This was accomplished by the act approved July 1, 1862, which, with its subsequent amendments and modifications, form our present system of internal revenue duties. The receipts from this source were, in 1863, $41,000,000; in 1864, $116,000,000; in 1865, $211,000,000; and in 1866, over $310,000,000. These amounts do not include the duties on imports, sales of lands, and other revenues. They are remarkable in every point of view, and show how slightly a war of four years has operated to depress the activity of the people or check consumption and production. Annual revenues exceeding $300,000,000, derived from internal sources, and that, too, under a system which has only been in operation four years, could never have been anticipated, and consequently the actual annual increase has uniformly exceeded the previous estimates. Nor will the prediction be deemed extravagant that, in any ordinary state of affairs, and with no material reduction in the rate of duties, they must continue to increase until the limits of production and consumption shall have been reached.

It may be doubted whether, in measuring the resources of a government, any calculation founded on the value of property, as distinguished from the value of its annual rents and profits, is reliable. It is certain that any system of taxation which should impose a burden on property that could not be paid from its annual income could not be long sustained. It would gradually absorb capital, destroy its value, and blight the sources of national prosperity. If property pays no income to the owner, it cannot long pay taxes to the government; and the degree in which it is capable of fulfilling the one condition is the measure of its capability of fulfilling the other.

It is, then, from a calculation of the probable annual increase in the products of capital and labor that we assume the ability of the general government not only to pay its own obligations, but to provide in some way for those incurred by the State for national objects. This production may be affected injuriously either by an injudicious regulation of the rate of duties, or by causes operating to depress the internal commerce and industry of the country. In the first case, however, the remedy is in the hands of the government; and as to the second, it may be observed that the depression could only be temporary, and must cease with the withdrawal of the influences which caused it. Under a government like that of the United States, where the freest scope is given to individual enterprise, there can be no lasting depression, and production and consumption must go on increasing with the increase of population and the extension of the industrial interests over new and undeveloped fields of labor.

In estimating the results of the industry of the country, it is not necessary to make use of any other elements for the calculation than such as have already had the sanction and indorsement of the Treasury Department, as will be noticed by reference to the annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury submitted to Congress in December, 1865. It is there stated, from the returns of the census, that the value of the real and personal property of all the States in 1860 was $14,183,000,000, being an increase over the returns of 1850 equal to 176.6 per cent. for the loyal States, and 139.7 per cent. for the States lately in insurrection. Assuming that the increase for the decade ending in 1870 will be 175 per cent. for the loyal States, and estimating the property of the others the same as in 1860, it is shown that in 1870 the aggregate property of the whole country will amount to $27,578,000,000, and in 1880 to $62,050,000,000. Now, the annual products of industry must bear a certain ratio to capital, and this ratio, on a careful calculation made for the year 1850, was estimated to be as much as 28.9 per cent., or more than one-fourth of the aggregate value of property that year. But reducing the ratio to 25 per cent., as in the report referred to, these products will, as therein stated, amount in 1870 to $6,894,500,000, and in 1880 to $15,512,000,000.

Large as these estimates may appear, there is no reason to doubt that they are approximately correct; and assuming that they are so, their realization, in whatever degree, must lead to a corresponding increase in the receipts from the present system of internal duties. It is quite as demonstrable that these duties will be in a certain ratio to the annual products, as that the annual products will be in a certain ratio to capital; and it is, therefore, obvious that an increase in products must increase the revenues derived from a tax on those products. This would be the conclusion in theory, and its correctness will be confirmed by the future results of the system of internal revenues, when it has been in operation under a fixed rate of duties for a sufficient period to afford the data for reliable estimates. Should no reduction be made in the rate of duties, and no event happen to check the development of individual and associated enterprise, it may be anticipated that the future average increase will not fall much below that of 1866, which was 47 per cent. But if we take a more cautious view, and estimate it at only 30 per cent., the receipts from these internal duties must, if the increase in production is not met by lower duties, soon reach $400,000,000, and, with the receipts from other sources, place at the disposal of the government an aggregate revenue of $600,000,000.

With actual revenues from all sources, for the year 1866, of over $550,000,000, and the probability of their increase to $600,000,000, no objection can be fairly urged against the proposed measure, drawn from the condition of the national finances, either present or prospective. In the last annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury, it was observed that "no act of Congress would be more acceptable to the people, or better calculated to strengthen the national credit, than one which should provide that $200,000,000 should be applied annually to the payment of the principal and interest of the public debt." But, as was anticipated, the revenues for 1866 have enabled the treasury to carry on the process of liquidation much more rapidly, and it is believed now that the forthcoming report will show that, besides paying the interest, nearly $200,000,000 has been applied to the payment of principal alone. At this rate the debt would be extinguished in fifteen years, without any increase of revenues, supposing it to have been $3,000,000,000 on the 1st of July, 1866, as estimated in the report referred to.

Should the policy of providing for the war debt of the States be favorably regarded by Congress, it would not be impracticable to devise some way in which it could be fairly and equitably accomplished. A plan, which appears free from any formidable difficulties, is that of relinquishing to the States some particular source of revenue now under the control of the general government, to be appropriated and used by the States to that express object. On this mode of adjustment there appears to be no distinct tax that could more properly be devoted to this purpose than that on incomes. It is not certain that such a tax comes within the meaning of the term "indirect," as used in the Constitution, and if "direct," it should be imposed under the rule of apportionment, instead of including it in a system of internal duties laid on the rule of uniformity. The receipts from this source for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1866, amounted to $60,000,000, a sum sufficient to accomplish the object in view, and yet not larger than could be spared, without seriously impairing the national resources. It is confidently believed they would still be ample for all the wants of the government without this particular tax; and if not, its loss would be supplied by the annual increase of other revenues, or the system could be extended so as to embrace new objects. In the practical working of the plan, States that contracted no debts during the war, or have already paid them, would be able to discontinue the tax altogether, and thus afford present and substantial relief to their tax-payers. Others not so favorably situated would have to continue it for a longer or shorter period in proportion to the amount of their outstanding obligations. In these cases, however, it might properly be reduced to three per cent., thus relieving the people in States so circumstanced from a portion of their burdens, and providing for a more rapid payment of their debts on a diminished rate of taxation.

In conclusion it may be observed that the particular plan proposed involves neither an assumption of any of the liabilities of the States, nor their payment, in any form, by the United States. Each State would pay its own obligations from the property of its own citizens, and the general government would simply suspend the exercise of its jurisdiction over a single source of revenue that it might be appropriated by the States for the purpose specified. It is doubtful whether, with the currency in a natural condition, any revenue that can safely be drawn from taxes levied on the value of real and personal property will more than suffice to meet the ordinary expenses of the State government and pay the debts they have contracted for objects of State concern; taxes of this description bear unequally on land, which pays the larger portion, and thus reach an interest which cannot be depressed without affecting the prosperity of all others. Should the States extend their concurrent jurisdiction over the field of internal taxation they would be entering on a domain already occupied by another power which may find it necessary or expedient, hereafter, to include in its system new sources of revenue, and, in case of conflict, assert the supremacy of its own laws and regulations. It appears best, then, that this virtual partition of resources should be respected, at least, until the wants of the general government are supplied; but meanwhile the State governments should not be compelled to pay, by a direct tax on the value of property, which would fall heavily on real estate, debts contracted to sustain the military operations of the general government, and therefore strictly national in their character.

Very respectfully, yours,

THO. HILLHOUSE, Comptroller.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED AT A

CONVENTION OF WOOL GROWERS,

HELD

At Bellows Falls, Vermont, on the 12th of November, 1866, in favor of an increase of the duty on all importations of foreign wool.

DECEMBER 10, 1866.—Referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

WOOL-GROWERS' CONVENTION.

A convention of wool-growers was held at Bellows Falls on the 12th instant, and was organized by the choice of David Crawford, esq., chairman, and C. Horace Hubbard, secretary.

The following resolution, offered by Judge Colburn, was unanimously adopted:

Whereas the wool-growing interest of Vermont is in a greatly depressed and languishing condition, and must soon be abandoned unless relief can be extended by the national legislature to protect this interest from the destructive competition of foreign fine wool, grown in climates of perpetual summer, and where land and labor are of mere nominal value; and whereas a bill passed the lower house of Congress at its last session, and is now upon the records of the upper house, purporting to aid both the manufacturing and wool-growing interests of the country, though its provisions may be more remunerative to the former than to the latter interest, as wool-growers desirous of saving this great interest of the north from annihilation, we pray the Senate of the United States to pass this or some other protection bill, and let it speedily become the law of the land. We ask this because we are willing to try the experiment of its operation; because the price of farm labor to grow this article is more than double in proportion to the price of the article after it is grown; because prices of this article bear no sort of proportion to those of all other commodities which we are obliged to purchase to sustain our families, while wool is our main reliance for a support; because the prices of wool on a gold basis have never been so high since the commencement of the war of the rebellion as they were in the years immediately preceding, and are not at the present time more than three-fourths as high, while nearly all other articles of traffic have been enhanced in price by the advance of gold; because before the war the value of two and a half pounds of our wool (brook-washed) would purchase at retail as good a yard of cassimere or doeskin as the price of five and a half pounds will do at the present time; because the taxation upon all our resources for growing wool in consequence of the war (town, State, and national) is full nine cents per pound on our washed wool, which is vastly beyond what it ever has been before; because we claim to have been as patriotic as any other section of our country, and to have cheerfully borne our share of public burdens in the loss of life and sacrifice of treasure during the last six years of our national affliction; but we claim benefits and privileges equal to those accruing to other interests; because for the last eighteen months we have been obliged to purchase clothing for ourselves and our families at exorbitant prices, made from foreign wool, while our own clips have been lying upon our hands uncalled for at any remunerating prices in consequence of the cheapness of the mestiza and other foreign fine clothing wools; because intelligent labor in the mill, in the shop, or on the farm cannot or ought not to be made to compete with the ignorant and pauper labor of foreign countries; and, finally, because we believe that we should be steadily progresing toward that condition of independence as a nation to clothe ourselves, so far as wool and cotton will do it, and become independent of all foreign producers of such articles: Therefore,

Resolved by this convention of Vermont wool growers, That a copy of this memorial and resolution be furnished by the secretary and presented to the Hon. Luke P. Poland and Hon. George F. Edmunds, our senators in Congress, and that they are hereby requested to present it to the Senate of the United States at an early day of the coming session, and that they sustain by their voices and votes the bill now pending in the House, or any other bill giving protection to the domestic wool grower.

LETTER
THE LIBRARIAN OF CONGRESS,

TRANSMITTING

His first annual report.

DECEMBER 20, 1866.—Ordered to be printed.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS,

Washington, December 3, 1866.

SIR: In compliance with the instructions of the Joint Committee of both houses of Congress on the Library, the undersigned has the honor to submit the following report, for the year ending December 1, 1866:

The progress of the new library extension during the vacation of Congress, though not so rapid as was expected at the commencement of the work, has resulted in the completion of one entire wing, measuring ninety-five feet in length by thirty feet in width, which is now opened and fully occupied with books. It is expected that the remaining wing will be completed and occupied during the coming month. The modifications of the original plan, heretofore sanctioned by the committee, have added greatly to the architectural effect of both wings of the new library, by reducing the projection of the galleries, and securing additional shelf-room for books. The light and ventilation are superior to those features in the main library, while the economy of space has been so closely consulted in the details as to give an increase of 3,800 linear feet of shelving in each wing, over that which exists in the main library. The total length of iron shelving in the library is now 21,360 feet, which will afford space for about one hundred and seventy thousand volumes. Adding the shelf accommodation of the law library room (formerly occupied by the Supreme Court) and the long attic room communicating with the upper gallery of the main library, the entire length of shelving at command is 26,148 feet, or nearly five miles. These accommodations afford space for the safe-keeping of about 210,000 volumes. The fact that the whole library is now impreguably fire-proof, being constructed of solid iron material throughout, and that future accessions to its stores, as well as the present accumulation of valuable works, are secure from a casualty which has twice consumed our national library, is a matter for sincere congratulation.

The warming of both of the wings and of the central library by a current of hot air, brought from the steam heating apparatus of the Senate on the one side and the House of Representatives on the other, has been carried into effect. The heat thus obtained proves ample for the purpose, and when the flues, now freshly coated, shall have become thoroughly dried, there is every reason to expect an atmosphere not only far more comfortable, but also more wholesome than prevailed in the library under the old process of heating by hot-air furnaces. That the warming of the whole library by steam has thus been carried successfully into operation, without encumbering the Capitol with additional steam-engines and boilers, is a testimony to the wisdom of the change authorized by the committee in the method of heating.

In the furnishing of the library, the undersigned has been guided by a desire to secure the most serviceable and permanent furniture that could be obtained, rather than to expend the appropriation for that purpose upon merely ornamental work. One hundred and forty library chairs, one hundred and fifty stands for reaching the upper shelves, and fifteen tables, all of the best selected black walnut, have been made to order, at a cost of about $2,500. This furniture, with that already on hand, is sufficient to provide every alcove in the library with a seat, besides supplying the reading-room with suitable accommodations for the public. In regard to carpeting, the iron floors of the galleries throughout the library are being covered with kamptulicon floor-cloth, a fabric composed of India-rubber and cork, which is found to combine the qualities of durability, cheapness, and cleanliness in a higher degree than any carpeting whatever. About $3,000 of the appropriation has been thus expended, and a further sum of $1,400 in furnishings of a miscellaneous character needed for the accommodation of the library. It is proposed to devote the remaining $3,000 of the appropriation to the furnishing of additional cases, with sliding shelves, for the safe-keeping of large illustrated works, of which the library now contains a greatly increased number.

The accessions to the library during the year ending December 1, 1866, have been 7,251 volumes, exclusive of about six hundred pamphlets. Of the books, there have been received—

By purchase.....	5,603 volumes.
By the operation of the copyright law.....	836 “
By donation (chiefly official documents).....	645 “
By exchange of duplicate books.....	167 “

These additions exceed those of the preceding year (1865) by 1,215 volumes, and bring the aggregate number of volumes in the library at this date up to 99,650, exclusive of the 40,000 volumes, more or less, of the library belonging to the Smithsonian Institution. The latter collection of books is now in process of removal, to be incorporated with the library of Congress, as a special deposit, by agreement of the Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, and in pursuance of the provisions of an act of Congress approved April 5, 1866. This large accession to the treasures of the library is especially valuable in the range of scientific books, comprising by far the largest collection of the journals and transactions of learned societies, foreign and domestic, which exists in America. It is also found to be an important supplement to the present library in the departments of linguistics, bibliography, statistics, voyages and travels, and works relating to the fine arts; in each of which departments it embraces works of great cost and value, while its collection of books in all branches of natural history is invaluable. About one-half the collection has already been removed and partially catalogued, while the remainder only awaits the completion of the south wing of the library to be transferred and arranged upon the shelves. It is believed that the greatly enlarged facilities for research thus supplied to readers prosecuting any branch of inquiry will be appreciated by all who have heretofore resorted to the Smithsonian library, while the annual accessions of valuable books derived from the systematic exchanges by the Smithsonian Institution of its publications with societies and individuals in all parts of the world, fully compensate Congress for the additional expenses involved in the proper custody of the books belonging to the Smithsonian Institution. The union of the two libraries will prove doubly advantageous to those heretofore resorting to either, and will insure the rapid growth of a great and truly national library, with far greater economy of means than would attend the duplication, so to speak, of two large libraries at the seat of government of the United States.

A copy of the catalogue of additions made to the library during the year ending December 1, 1866, is herewith submitted. Its completion and distribution to members during the first week of the session, notwithstanding the brief time since the adjournment of Congress for the collection and cataloguing of the chief portion of the books, is in great measure due to the efficient co-operation of my assistants. It is proper here to observe that the annual supplementary catalogues embrace the titles of books only, the titles of pamphlets being reserved for the general catalogue, issued at intervals of four to five years. The present number of pamphlets in the library, bound and unbound, does not exceed six thousand, exclusive of duplicates. Increased attention will hereafter be devoted to enlarging the collection of these often valuable materials for political history.

The projected general catalogue of the library, arranged by subject-matters in alphabetical order, has advanced less rapidly than was intended, owing to the pre-occupation of myself and my principal assistants in the labors attending the reception and arrangement of the large accessions of the year. Besides this, the removal and rearrangement of the entire collection of books, (excepting the law library,) and the incorporation with them (and with the catalogue,) of the Smithsonian addition of about forty thousand volumes, will require the incessant application of the whole library force for some time to come. The great importance of an index by subjects to all who use the library can scarcely be overrated, and the enhanced value of such an index by embracing in it the entire contents of the Smithsonian collection, together with the supplementary catalogues of the last three years, is so apparent as to justify the postponement of the printing of such a catalogue until this wide range of titles can be incorporated. The index to the last general catalogue, issued in 1864, is now nearly completed, but the incorporation above referred to, of the whole present contents of the library in a single alphabetical catalogue, analysed by subject-matters, will be a task involving much time and labor, but none the less necessary to be accomplished.

The financial accounts of the library have been kept, as for many years past, by the Register of the Treasury, as disbursing agent of the Joint Committee on the Library. The balances on hand to the credit of the several funds in charge of the committee are the following, including the amount of undrawn appropriations in the treasury of the United States :

Fund for purchase of books.....	$2, 525 90
Fund for purchase of law books.....	1, 828 46
Fund for purchase of files of leading American newspapers.....	2, 090 35
Fund for purchase of furniture.....	6, 525 90
Fund for removal of the Smithsonian library.....	355 71
Fund for purchase of the law library of James L. Petigru.....	5, 000 00
Fund for contingent expenses.....	1, 970 46
Catalogue fund.....	100 65
Fund for ornamenting the Capitol with works of art.....	16, 500 00
Fund for portraits of the Presidents of the United States.....	5, 000 00
Fund for Powell's painting of a naval victory, for the Capitol....	23, 000 00
Fund for completing the publication of the works of the United States Exploring Expedition.....	17 14
Fund for pay of arrears and artists of the Exploring Expedition..	5, 837 75
Fund for replacing the works of the Exploring Expedition destroyed by fire.....	1, 346 10
Fund for putting in order the plates of the Exploring Expedition..	457 79
Botanic garden fund.....	1, 171 32
Green-house fund.....	3, 486 94
Special green-house fund.....	1, 000 00
Fund for publishing the writings of James Madison.....	100 13

The undersigned deems it proper to call the attention of the committee to some necessities of the library. It has been found indispensable to erect several light iron stairways, occupying little room, at the eastern extremity of each wing of the library, to facilitate communication with the alcoves of the three new galleries. This improvement will save an incalculable amount of time, by diminishing the space which would otherwise have to be traversed in the daily service of books to those who use the library. It is respectfully recommended that this modification of the original plans, rendered necessary by practical experience, be sanctioned by the committee.

The need of a new sky-light, to replace the present one over the central library room, is too apparent upon inspection to require more than a brief mention. The ornamented glass is discolored and darkened by the fall of substances from above, and the frequent breaking of the sky-light during the progress of work upon the dome has led to patching it with various kinds of glass, so as to render it very unsightly, and out of harmony with the clearness and beauty of the new sky-lights in the wings. The defective light in the central library could also be remedied by the removal of the iron panels on either side of the sky-light, and the substitution of glass in their room. That this improvement be recommended by the committee is respectfully suggested.

The repainting of a portion of the central library, in places discolored by leakage before the new roof was put on, is also recommended. No part of the library has been repainted during the fourteen years which have elapsed since the rebuilding after the fire of 1851, and the fact that nearly the whole of the paint and decorative gilding presents as fresh an appearance as when first applied is an evidence of the fitness and economy of the style of decoration which has been followed in the new library.

In conclusion, the undersigned desires the attention of the committee to the present operation of the copyright law of March 3, 1865, by which one copy of each publication for which the government grants a copyright is required to be deposited in the Library of Congress. There have been received during the year ending December 1, under this law, 836 volumes of books, 386 pieces of music, and 202 maps, engravings, and photographs, or a total of 1,425 articles. This is an increase of only 290 volumes over the receipts of the first nine months of the operation of the law. The undersigned is of the opinion, founded upon experience, that the benefits of the law to the Congressional Library will depend greatly upon the means provided for its enforcement, and the vigilance with which it is administered. Comparatively few owners of copyrights, outside of the leading publishing houses, comply with the requisition of the law without notice. These notices, to the number of several hundreds, have been regularly served upon delinquents whenever the undersigned could obtain authentic evidence of a copyright having issued. In most cases, the requirements of the law have been complied with after notice, although there are many exceptions. The provisions of the English law of copyright, which are much more exacting than our own, (requiring the deposit of five copies of each work instead of one,) prescribe a penalty of five pounds sterling, and the value of the books withheld, recoverable at the suit of the proper officer of the institution in which the work is required to be deposited. This provision is found to be amply sufficient to secure a general compliance with the law. A similar modification of the present statute is respectfully suggested to the consideration of the committee, as also a provision by which books and other publications may be transmitted through the mails, free of charge, to the Library of Congress. These amendments would remove the chief obstacles which exist to a full compliance with the law.

Respectfully submitted.

Chairman of Joint Committee on the Library.

RESOLUTIONS
OF THE
LEGISLATURE OF KENTUCKY, REJECTING

The resolution (H. R. 127) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

JANUARY 18, 1867.—Read, ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

RESOLUTIONS in regard to the proposed amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Whereas the Congress of the United States did, at the first session of the thirty-ninth Congress, propose to the legislatures of the several States, as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, the following :

“ARTICLE XIV.

“SECTION 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

“SECTION 2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice-President of the United States, representatives in Congress, the executive and judicial officers of a State, or the members of the legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State, being twenty-one years of age and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State.

“SECTION 3. No person shall be a senator or representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice-President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or under any State, who, having previously taken an oath, as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may, by a vote of two-thirds of each house, remove such disability.

"SECTION 4. The validity of the public debt of the United States, authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned. But neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave ; but all such debts, obligations, and claims shall be held illegal and void.

"SECTION 5. The Congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article."

And whereas the same has been officially laid before this legislature for its consideration and action : Therefore be it

1. Resolved by the general assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, That the proposition to amend the Constitution of the United States as aforesaid be, and the same is hereby, rejected.

2. Resolved, That the governor be requested to notify the proper departments of the United States government of this action of the Kentucky legislature, in regard to said proposed amendment.

H. TAYLOR,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

RICHARD T. JACOB,

Speaker of the Senate.

Approved 10th January, 1867.

THOS. E. BRAMLETTE,

Governor of Kentucky.

By the governor :

JOHN S. VAN WINKLE,

Secretary of State.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,

Frankfort, Kentucky, January 14, 1867.

In obedience to the requirements thereof, I herewith transmit to you "Resolutions in regard to the proposed amendment of the Constitution of the United States," adopted by the general assembly of Kentucky now in session.

Respectfully,

THOS. E. BRAMLETTE, Governor.

Hon. PRESIDENT UNITED STATES SENATE.

DIGEST
STATUTES OF THE UNITED STATES
PRESCRIBING

The rates of duties on imports in force October 1, 1866.

BY LEWIS HEYL.

JANUARY 22, 1867.—Ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

ACT OF JULY 7, 1838.

CHAPTER CLXXVIII.—An act exempting from duty the coal which may be on board of steamboats or vessels propelled by steam on their arrival at any port in the United States. Stat. at Large, vol. 5, p. 288.

1. From and after the passage of this act it shall be lawful for the captain or master of any steamboat or vessel propelled by steam, arriving at any port in the United States, to retain all the coal such boat or vessel may have on board at the time of her arrival, and may proceed with said coal to a foreign port, without being required to land the same in the United States, or to pay any duty thereon; and all acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act, shall be, and the same are hereby, repealed. (563.*)

ACT OF AUGUST 30, 1842.

CHAP. CCLXX.—An act to provide revenue from imports, and to change and modify existing laws imposing duties on imports, and for other purposes. Stat. at Large, vol. 5, p. 548.

2. SECTION. 20.† There shall be levied, collected, and paid, on each and every non-enumerated article which bears a similitude, either in material, quality, texture, or the use to which it may be applied, to any enumerated article chargeable with duty, the same rate of duty which is levied and charged on the enumerated article which it most resembles in any of the particulars before mentioned; and if any non-enumerated article equally resembles two or more enumerated articles on which different rates of duty are charge-

* This number refers to the paragraph bearing the same number.

† NOTE FROM BRIGHTLY'S DIGEST.—"This section was not designed to levy duties, but to check fraudulent evasions, or prevent doubts in the execution of the revenue laws; and it is not repealed by the act of 1846. (Stewart vs. Maxwell, 16 How., 150.) Its effect is not to impose a duty on an article not provided for in the act of 1846, or a different duty from that act; but it simply gives a rule of construction, to determine under what schedule in the act of 1846 a given article shall be ranged for the purpose of charging duty. (Marlot vs. Lawrence, 1 Blatch., 608.) It applies, however, only in cases where an article has not been specially provided for in the act of 1846. (Lottimer vs. Lawrence, ibid, 613.) But an article not enumerated by name in the act of 1846 does not come under the section of that act which provides for non-enumerated articles, provided it so resembles some enumerated article in quality, material, or use as to be governed by this section of the act of 1842. (Ross vs. Peaslee, 2 Curt. C. C., 499.)" able, there shall be levied, collected, and paid, on such non-enumerated article, the same rate of duty as is chargeable on the article which it resembles paying the highest duty; and on all articles manufactured from two or more materials, the duty shall be assessed at the highest rates at which any of its component parts may be chargeable. (275, 697.*)

ACT OF MARCH 29, 1848.

Stat. at Large, CHAP. XXIV.—An act to remit the duties on books, maps, and charts imported for the use of the library of Congress.
vol. 9, p. 217.

3. That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, directed to remit all duties upon such books, maps, and charts as have been during the present year, or hereafter may be, imported into the United States by authority of the Joint Library Committee of Congress, for the use of the library of Congress: Provided, That if, in any case, a contract shall have been made with any bookseller, importer, or other person for books, maps, or charts, in which contract the bookseller, importer, or other person aforesaid, shall have paid the duty or included the duty in said contract, in such case the duty shall not be remitted. (204.)

ACT OF MARCH 2, 1861.

Stat. at Large, CHAP. LXVIII.—An act to provide for the payment of outstanding treasury notes, to authorize a loan, to regulate and fix the duties on imports, and for other purposes.
vol. 12, p. 178.

(Sections 1, 2, 3, and 4 have no relation to duties on imports.)
12 Stat., p. 179. SEC. 5. From and after the first day of April, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-one, in lieu of the duties heretofore imposed by law on the articles hereinafter mentioned, and on such as may now be exempt from duty, there shall be levied, collected, and paid on the goods, wares, and merchandise, herein enumerated and provided for, imported from foreign countries, the following duties and rates of duty, that is to say:

ACT OF JUNE 30, 1864.

Stat. at Large, CHAP. CLXXI.—An act to increase duties on imports, and for other purposes.
vol. 13., p. 202.

Be it enacted, &c., That on and after the first day of July, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-four, in lieu of the duties heretofore imposed by law on the articles hereinafter mentioned, there shall be levied, collected, and paid, on goods, wares, and merchandise herein enumerated and provided for, imported from foreign countries, the following duties and rates of duty, that is to say:

13 Stat., p. 202. 502. First. On teas of all kinds, twenty-five cents per pound.
503. Second. On all sugar not above number twelve, Dutch standard in color, three cents per pound.

504. On all sugar above number twelve, and not above number fifteen, Dutch standard in color, three cents and a half per pound.

505. On all sugar above number fifteen, not stove-dried, and not above number twenty, Dutch standard in color, four cents per pound.

506. On all refined sugar in form of loaf, lump, crushed, powdered, pulverized, or granulated, and all stove-dried or other sugar above number twenty, Dutch standard in color, five cents per pound: Provided, That the standard by which the color and grades of sugar are to be regulated shall be selected and furnished to the collectors of such ports of entry as may be necessary by the Secretary of the Treasury, from time to time, and in such manner as he may deem expedient.

507. On sugar-candy, not colored, ten cents per pound; on all other confectionery, not otherwise provided for, made wholly or in part of sugar, and on sugars after being refined, when tintured, colored, or in any way adulterated, valued at thirty cents per pound or less, fifteen cents per pound; on all confectionery valued above thirty cents per pound, or when sold by the box, package, or otherwise than by the pound, fifty per centum ad valorem.

508. Third. On molasses from sugar-cane, eight cents per gallon; on sirup of sugar-cane juice, melado, concentrated melado, or concentrated molasses, two cents and a half per pound: Provided, That all sirups of sugar or sugar-cane, cane-juice, concentrated molasses, or concentrated melado, entered under the name of molasses, or any other name than sirup of sugar, or of sugar-cane, cane-juice, concentrated molasses, or concentrated melado, shall be liable to forfeiture to the United States, and the same shall be forfeited.

701. Be it resolved, &c., That the joint resolution increasing the duties on imports, approved April twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, be, and is hereby, continued in force until the first day of July next. (700, 695.)

ACT OF MARCH 3, 1865.

Stat. at Large,
vol. 13, p. 491.

CHAP. LXXX.—An act amendatory of certain acts imposing duties upon foreign importations.

That section six of an act entitled "An act to increase the duties on imports, and for other purposes," approved June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, be amended, so that paragraphs second, third, and fourth of section six of said act, shall read as follows:

13 Stat., p. 492.

702. Second: On all manufactures of cotton, (except jeans, denims, drillings, bed-tickings, gingham, plaids, cottonades, pantaloons, stuff, and goods of like description,) not bleached, colored, stained, painted, or printed, and not exceeding one hundred threads to the square inch, counting the warp and filling, and exceeding in weight five ounces per square yard, five cents per square yard; if bleached, five cents and a half per square yard; if colored, stained, painted, or printed, five cents and a half per square yard, and, in addition thereto, ten per centum ad valorem. On finer and lighter goods of like description, not exceeding two hundred threads to the square inch, counting the warp and filling, unbleached, five cents per square yard; if bleached, five and a half cents per square yard; if colored, stained, painted, or printed, five and a half cents per square yard, and, in addition thereto, twenty per centum ad valorem. On goods of like description, exceeding two hundred threads to the square inch, counting the warp and filling, unbleached, five cents per square yard; if bleached, five and a half cents per square yard; if colored, stained, painted, or printed, five and a half cents per square yard, and, in addition thereto, twenty per centum ad valorem. (15, 426, 588.)

703. Third: On all cotton jeans, denims, drillings, bed-tickings, gingham, plaids, cottonades, pantaloons, stuffs, and goods of like description, or for similar use, if unbleached, and not exceeding one hundred threads to the square inch, counting the warp and filling, and exceeding five ounces to the square yard, six cents per square yard; if bleached, six cents and a half per square yard; if colored, stained, painted, or printed, six cents and a half per square yard, and, in addition thereto, ten per centum ad valorem. On finer or lighter goods of like description, not exceeding two hundred threads to the square inch, counting the warp and filling, if unbleached, six cents per square yard; if bleached, six and a half cents per square yard; if colored, stained, painted, or printed, six and a half cents per square yard, and, in addition thereto, fifteen per centum ad valorem. On goods of lighter description, exceeding two hundred threads to the square inch, counting the warp and filling, if unbleached, seven cents per square yard; if bleached, seven and a half cents per square yard; if colored, stained, painted, or printed, seven and a half cents per square yard, and, in addition thereto, fifteen per centum ad valorem: Provided, That upon all plain woven cotton goods, not included in the foregoing schedule, unbleached, valued at over sixteen cents per square yard; bleached, valued at over twenty cents per square yard; colored, valued at over twenty-five cents per square yard; and cotton jeans, denims, and drillings, unbleached, valued at over twenty cents per square yard, and all other cotton goods of every description, the value of which shall exceed twenty-five cents per square yard, there shall be levied, collected, and paid a duty of thirty-five per centum ad valorem: And provided further, That no cotton goods having more than two hundred threads to the square inch, counting the warp and filling, shall be admitted to a less rate of duty than is provided for goods which are of that number of threads.

704. Fourth: On spool thread of cotton, six cents per dozen spools, containing on each spool not exceeding one hundred yards of thread, and, in addition thereto, thirty per centum ad valorem; exceeding one hundred yards, for every additional hundred yards of thread on each spool or fractional part thereof, in excess of one hundred yards, six cents per dozen, and thirty-five per centum ad valorem. On cotton thread or yarn, when advanced beyond single yarn, by twisting two or more strands together, if not wound upon spools, four (4) cents per skein or hank of eight hundred and forty (840) yards, and thirty per cent. ad valorem. (15, 426.)

SEC. 2. From and after the day when this act takes effect, in addition to the duties heretofore imposed by law on the importation of the articles mentioned in this section, there shall be levied, collected, and paid the following duties and rates of duty, that is to say:

705. On brandy, (509,) rum, (512,) gin, and whiskey, (510,) and on cordials, (511, 512,) liquors, [liqueurs,] arrack, absynthe, and all other spirituous liquors and spirituous beverages, fifty cents per gallon, (511, 512,) of first proof and less strength, and shall be increased in proportion for any greater strength that [than] the strength of first proof. On spun silk for filling in skins or cops, ten per centum ad valorem. (592.) On iron bars for railroads or inclined planes, ten cents per one hundred pounds. (277, 521.) On wrought iron tubes, one cent per pound.

706. SEC. 3. From and after this act takes effect, in lieu of the duties heretofore imposed by law on the importation of the articles mentioned in this section, there shall be levied, collected, and paid the following duties and rates of duty, that is to say: On cotton, five cents per pound. On illuminating oil and naphtha, benzine, and benzole, refined or produced from the distillation of coal, asphaltum, (612,) shale, peat, petroleum or rock oil, or other bituminous substances (92) used for like purposes, forty cents per gallon. On crude petroleum, or rock oil, twenty cents per gallon; on crude coal oil, fifteen cents per gallon. On tobacco stems, fifteen cents per pound. On ready-made clothing of silk, or of which silk shall be a component material of chief value, sixty per centum ad valorem. On quicksilver, fifteen per centum ad valorem.

707. SEC. 5. The term "statuary," as used in the laws now in force imposing duties on foreign importations, shall be understood to include professional productions of a statuary or of a sculptor only. (52, 251, 500.)

13 Stat., p. 493.

708. SEC. 6. There shall be hereafter collected and paid on all goods, wares, and merchandise of the growth or produce of countries [east] of the Cape of Good Hope, (except raw cotton and raw silk, as reeled from the cocoon, or not further advanced than tram, thrown, or organzine,) when imported from places west of the Cape of Good Hope, a duty of ten per centum ad valorem, in addition to the duties imposed on any such article when imported directly from the place or places of their growth or production.

13 Stat., p. 494.

SEC. 9. This act shall take effect on and after the first day [of] April, eighteen hundred and sixty-five.

ACT OF MARCH 16, 1866.

Stat. at Large, vol. 14, p. 9. CHAP. XVIII.—An act further to secure American citizens certain privileges under the treaty of Washington.

709a. The produce of the forests of the State of Maine upon the Saint John river and its tributaries, owned by American citizens, and sawed or hewed in the province of New Brunswick by American citizens, (the same being unmanufactured in whole or in part,) which is now admitted into the ports of the United States free of duty, shall continue to be so admitted under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall from time to time prescribe.

SEC. 2. This act shall take effect from and after the seventeenth day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

ACT OF MAY 16, 1866.

Stat. at Large, vol. 14, p. 48.

CHAP. LXXXII.—An act imposing a duty on live animals.

709b. On and after the passage of this act, there shall be levied, collected, and paid, on all horses, mules, cattle, sheep, hogs, and other live animals imported from foreign countries, a duty of twenty per centum ad valorem: Provided, That any such animals now bona fide owned by resident citizens of the United States, and now in any of the provinces of British America, may be imported into the United States free of duty until the expiration of ten days after the passage of this act.

ACT OF JUNE 1, 1866.

Stat. at Large, vol. 14, p. 56. CHAP. CV.—An act to protect American citizens engaged in lumbering on the St. Croix river, in the State of Maine.

709c. The produce of the forests of the State of Maine upon the St. Croix river and its tributaries, owned by American citizens, and sawed in the province of New Brunswick by American citizens, (the same being unmanufactured in whole, or in part,) and having paid the same taxes as other American lumber on that river, shall be admitted into the ports of the United States free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall from time to time prescribe.

SEC. 2. This act shall take effect from and after its passage.

ACT OF JULY 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCXCVIII.—*An act to protect the revenue and for other purposes.*Stat. at Large,
vol. 14, p. 328.

14 Stat., p. 328.

From and after the tenth day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, in lieu of the duties now imposed by law on the articles mentioned and embraced in this section, there shall be levied, collected, and paid, on all goods, wares, and merchandise, imported from foreign countries, the duties heretofore [hereinafter] provided, viz :

710. On cigars, cigarettes, and cheroots of all kinds, three dollars per pound, and, in addition thereto, fifty per centum ad valorem: Provided, That paper cigars and cigarettes, including wrappers, shall be subject to the same duties as are herein imposed upon cigars: And provided further, That on and after the first day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, no cigars shall be imported unless the same are packed in boxes of not more than five hundred cigars in each box; and no entry of any imported cigars shall be allowed of less quantity than three thousand in a single package; and all cigars on importation shall be placed in public store or bonded warehouse, and shall not be removed therefrom until the same shall have been inspected and a stamp affixed to each box indicating such inspection, with the date thereof. And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to provide the requisite stamps, and to make all necessary regulations for carrying the above provisions of law into effect.

711. On cotton, three cents per pound; on all compounds or preparations of which distilled spirits is a component part of chief value, there shall be levied a duty not less than that imposed upon distilled spirits: Provided, That brandy and other spirituous liquors may be imported in casks or other packages of any capacity not less than thirty gallons; and that wine in bottles may be imported in boxes containing not less than one dozen bottles of not more than one quart each; and wine, brandy, or other spirituous liquor imported into the United States, and shipped after the first day of October, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, in any less quantity than herein provided for, shall be forfeited to the United States.

712. SEC. 11. During [the] period of one year from the passage of this act there may be imported into the United States, free of duty, any machinery designed solely for and adapted to the manufacture of sugar from beets, including all the preliminary processes requisite therefor, but not including any machinery which may be used for any other manufactures.

14 Stat., p. 330.

713. SEC. 12. Upon the reimportation of articles once exported of the growth, product, or manufacture of the United States, upon which no internal tax has been assessed or paid, or upon which such tax has been paid and refunded by allowance or drawback, there shall be levied, collected, and paid a duty equal to the tax imposed by the internal revenue laws upon such articles. (226, 699.)

14 Stat., p. 330.

OF

THE LEGISLATURE OF TENNESSEE,

IN FAVOR OF

Such an amendment to the "Act donating public lands to the several States and Territories which may provide colleges for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts," approved July 2, 1862, as to enable the State of Tennessee to accept the benefit of the provisions of said act.

FEBRUARY 4, 1867.—Read, referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

JOINT RESOLUTION directory to our representatives in Congress.

Whereas, by act of Congress, approved July 2, 1862, a donation of public lands is made to each State, under specified conditions, of thirty thousand acres for each senator and representative in Congress to which the States are respectively entitled under the census of 1860; and whereas, under sub-section seventh of section 5 of said act, it is provided that "no State shall be entitled to the benefits of this act unless it shall express its acceptance thereof by its legislature within two years from the date of its approval by the President:"

Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the general assembly of the State of Tennessee, That our representatives in Congress be instructed, and our senators be requested, to intercede for Tennessee, and use all reasonable and laudable efforts to have said sub-section seventh of section 5 of "An act donating public lands to the several States and Territories which may provide colleges for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts," chapter 130, approved July 2, 1860, so amended as to enable the State of Tennessee to accept the benefit of the provisions of said act.

Adopted December 14, 1866.

JAMES MULLINS,

Speaker pro tem. of the House of Representatives.

JOSHUA B. FRIERSON,

Speaker of the Senate.

I, Andrew J. Fletcher, secretary of state of the State of Tennessee, do certify that the foregoing is a copy of joint resolution directory to our representatives in Congress, the original of which is now on file in my office. In testimony whereof, I have hereunto subscribed my official signature, and by order of the governor affixed the great seal of the State of Tennessee, at the department in the city of Nashville, this 30th day of January, A. RESOLUTIONS
THE LEGISLATURE OF WISCONSIN,
INSTRUCTING

Hon. James R. Doolittle to resign his seat in the United States Senate.

FEBRUARY 4, 1867.—Read, ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

Whereas joint resolutions were passed at the last session of the legislature of Wisconsin, declaring it to be the duty of Hon. James R. Doolittle to resign the office of United States senator, in which resolutions his course and votes upon measures devised by Congress to secure permanent peace and protection to the people, his disobedience of instructions by the legislature to vote for the passage of the civil rights bill, and his desertion of the cause of human rights, were fully recited as reasons for thus declaring it to be his duty to resign;

And whereas Senator Doolittle has disregarded said resolutions and the wishes of the people of Wisconsin, therein expressed, and yet adheres to his seat in the Senate, in violation of duty, and did, in a speech in the Senate, on the 28th of July last, wrongfully attribute the passage of said resolutions to a "tyrannical republican caucus able to control a majority of the legislature," and has repeatedly declared, in public speeches, that the legislature passing said resolutions did not truthfully reflect the voice of the people;

And whereas Senator Doolittle has renounced fidelity to his former professions and principles, has deliberately put himself in active antagonism to those principles of justice and equal rights which should be the foundation of republican government, by uniting his political fortunes with those of the enemies of the republic, has grossly betrayed a constituency that elevated him to the senatorship, and by faithlessness to the high trust confided to him he has shown himself totally unworthy of further confidence and support;

And whereas the people of the State of Wisconsin, uniting their voice with that of the nation, have delivered their solemn verdict in direct condemnation of the purpose, policy, and course, of the senator, and thereby adjudged him guilty of a flagrant breach of political trust: Therefore,

Resolved by the assembly, (the senate concurring,) That Senator James R. Doolittle be, and he is hereby, instructed to resign his senatorial office.

Resolved, That the governor be requested to forward to the presiding officer of each house of Congress, and to each of our senators and representatives in Congress, a copy of the foregoing preamble and resolutions.

ANGUS CAMERON,
Speaker of the Assembly.
WYMAN SPOONER,
President of the Senate.

THE LEGISLATURE OF WISCONSIN,
IN FAVOR OF

The establishment of a mail route from the city of Milwaukee to Painsville, in said State.

FEBRUARY 4, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads and ordered to be printed.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled :

The memorial of the legislature of the State of Wisconsin respectfully represents that the interest and convenience of a large population would be greatly enhanced by the establishment of a weekly mail route from the city of Milwaukee via New Koeln, in the town of Lake, to Painsville, in the town of Franklin, in the county of Milwaukee, in the State of Wisconsin, being a distance of about fourteen miles ; and your memorialists therefore respectfully ask that said mail route be established as herein set forth.

OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF MASSACHUSETTS,

IN FAVOR OF

An appropriation for the protection of certain headlands and bluffs, and the removal of certain obstructions in Boston harbor.

FEBRUARY 4, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed.

RESOLUTION in aid of the memorial of the harbor commissioners.

Resolved, That the memorial of the board of harbor commissioners of this commonwealth now before Congress, asking for the protection of certain headlands and bluffs, and the removal of certain obstructions in Boston harbor, is of vital importance to the interests of this State. That a crisis has been reached in the history of the great harbor of Massachusetts when the immediate expenditure of an adequate sum of money, in a skilful manner, may not only save the harbor from destruction, but restore it to its ancient excellence; while delay or insufficient action will surely make such success either impossible, or, if attainable at all, only at a vast expense and at a distant day.

That the general court of Massachusetts earnestly asks the favorable consideration of this memorial by Congress, and requests the senators and representatives in Congress from Massachusetts to give to the measures proposed the aid of their utmost exertions.

MEMORIAL
OFFICERS AND MANAGERS OF THE NATIONAL ASSO-CIATION FOR THE

Relief of destitute colored women and children, praying such action as may secure them from loss in a law suit instituted against them by Richard S. Cox, and protect them in their pursuits while carrying out the objects of the association.

FEBRUARY 2, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

FEBRUARY 6, 1867.—Ordered to be printed.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled.

The undersigned respectfully represent that, on the 14th day of February, 1863, Congress passed an act incorporating the above-named association, (12 Stats., page 650,) which was duly organized under said act, and has from that time actively and efficiently labored to advance the purposes of its creation.

That, by the 4th section of said act, the Secretary of War was authorized to place in the possession of said association any lands contiguous to the city of Washington which the government of the United States might then own or thereafter acquire by confiscation or purchase, to be held for such time as the Secretary might designate.

That, at that time, the government was in possession of a dwelling-house, farm, and premises of one Richard S. Cox, in Georgetown, he, the said Cox, having abandoned the same, and joined himself with other rebels, and was at that time in arms against the government, and, as the undersigned were informed and believe, the government had then seized and then held said property for confiscation.

That said property being in all respects eligible and desirable for said association, its officers, in the month of May, 1863, applied to the Secretary of War to be placed in possession of the same for the purposes of a home for destitute colored women and children, and that the Secretary made such order, and the association entered upon said premises, and held the same under said order until dispossessed as hereinafter shown. Said order of the Secretary did not limit the time for the holding of said property by the association.

That they collected and maintained at said house, on an average, five women and fifty children, receiving and collecting donations and contributions therefor, and occupying and improving said premises for said purposes.

That in the spring and summer of 1865, learning that no steps had been taken to secure a condemnation of said property under the confiscation laws, the officers of the association applied to the Attorney General of the United States for the District of Columbia, directing him to proceed against said property without delay ; and to secure such action, they also employed counsel to aid so far as in his power in securing the necessary action on the part of the proper authorities.

They also procured an accurate survey of said property, and caused the same to be placed in the hands of the district attorney, but, notwithstanding, all their efforts and the efforts of their counsel, no proceedings were ever had against said property, but for what reasons the undersigned never could learn, except that the district attorney did not and would not institute the same.

They further say, that after the close of the war, and when it was made apparent that it was meritorious rather than otherwise to have served in the cause of the rebellion, the said Richard S. Cox returned to the District of Columbia, and was readily pardoned by the Executive, and made efforts to secure an order for the restoration of his said property, in which, as the undersigned believe, he failed.

In the mean time, during the year 1866, the association, finding that it had been abandoned by the government, secured a lot in the city of Washington, upon which the freedmen s bureau erected for its use another house, and it was hoped and expected that it would be ready for occupancy on the first day of October last past, but it was not completed so that it could be used.

In the mean time, on the 3d day of December, 1866, and while the association were in full and exclusive possession of the Cox property, and had then at the time four helpless women and sixty-four small children, with all their assistants' property and effects upon said premises, and, in the absence of any order of notice of the government to vacate the same, the said Cox managed to steal into said house, and, with his associates and servants, made the same so uncomfortable, by removing the doors and windows, and so unpleasant with their noise and company, and the courts of the district refusing to protect their possessing, the undersigned were obliged to vacate the same sooner than they otherwise would, and at great inconvenience and discomfort to the helpless ones under their charge.

They further say that not only did the said Cox take possession of the house and furniture, but also of about one hundred bushels of corn raised the present year by the association on said farm ; and that afterwards, on the — day of December, 1866, he commenced a suit in the supreme court of the District of Columbia against the association to recover $10,000 damages for the possession of said property, &c.

And, inasmuch as the undersigned are without the means of defending an expensive lawsuit ; and in the event of an adverse judgment their present home might be liable to seizure on execution ; and as they depend wholly upon the donations of the charitable ; and as they believe the objects of their association and their manner of pursuing them must commend them and their cause to the consideration of the American Congress, they respectfully ask of your body such action as may secure them from loss and protect them in their pursuits.

Respectfully submitted :

OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF KANSAS

IN FAVOR OF

An appropriation to enable the Department of Agriculture to make a scientific investigation of the disease among the cattle of that and adjoining States commonly known as "Spanish fever."

FEBRUARY 7, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on Agriculture and ordered to be printed.

Whereas there annually prevails a contagious disease among the cattle of this and adjoining States, commonly known as "Spanish fever," destroying large numbers, thereby seriously affecting the interests of the productive industry; and whereas such disease is propagated by the introduction of cattle from the State of Texas and Indian territory south of Kansas; and whereas the want of a scientific investigation of the said disease has rendered void any effort to arrest its ravages: Therefore,

Resolved by the house of representatives of the State of Kansas, (the senate concurring,) That our senators and representatives in the Congress of the United States are instructed to urge and support an appropriation by said Congress to enable the Department of Agriculture to make the said scientific investigation; and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to each of our senators and representatives in Congress, and also the Commissioner of Agriculture.

Adopted by the house of representatives January 30, 1867.

THE SECRETARY OF WAR

TO

The Chairman of the Committee on Commerce, transmitting extract of the preliminary report of Brevet Major General G. K. Warren on the survey of the Mississippi river, &c., relative to the improvement of the Fox and Wisconsin rivers.

FEBRUARY 7, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
February 4, 1867.

SIR: In reply to your letter of January 17, enclosing a petition of citizens of Wisconsin for an appropriation for the improvement of Fox and Wisconsin rivers, and asking information relative thereto, I have the honor to send herewith a report by the chief of engineers of this date on the subject.

The memorial is returned herewith.

Very respectfully, &c.,

E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

HON. Z. CHANDLER,
Chairman Committee on Commerce, U. S. Senate.

ENGINEER DEPARTMENT,
Washington, February 4, 1867.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the letter of the Hon. Z. Chandler, Chairman of the Committee on Commerce of the Senate of the United States, of the 17th ultimo, asking for information relative to the necessity of an appropriation for the improvement of the Fox and Wisconsin rivers, referred to this department for report, and beg leave to transmit herewith an extract from the preliminary report of Brevet Major General G. K. Warren, on the survey of the Upper Mississippi river, &c., which will afford the desired information.

The letter of Mr. Chandler, with memorial enclosed, is herewith returned.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. A. HUMPHREYS,
Chief of Engineers.

HON. E. M. STANTON
Secretary of War.

Extract from the preliminary report of Brevet Major General G. K. Warren, United States army, major of engineers, on the survey of the Mississippi river and its tributaries above Rock Island rapids.

FOX AND WISCONSIN RIVERS.

The report herewith submitted of Brevet Major C. R. Suter, captain of engineers, of his examination of the Fox and Wisconsin rivers, gives a complete account of them and of the canals, dams, and locks made on the Fox to secure a connection between it and the Wisconsin, and thereby between the lakes and the Mississippi river.

There are the following natural divisions of this line :

Division.	From—	To—	No. of locks.	Ascent.	Descent.	Distance.
				Feet.	Feet.	Miles.
1	Lower Fox, Green Bay	Lower Winnebago	18	170		38
2	Lake Winnebago, through..	Lake Winnebago.....				14
3	Upper Fox river.....	Wisconsin river	2	40		110
4	Wisconsin river	Mouth of Wisconsin river...			150	112
	Green Bay	Mississippi river	20	210	150	274

On the Wisconsin river no improvement has been made, but three railroad and three wagon road drawbridges have been erected across it. In its natural state there is at low water a navigable depth over the bar at the mouth not exceeding two feet, the bars above give three to four feet. Major Suter thinks that, with dams of brush and stone, narrowing the water-way, and closing all but one channel where the river is divided by islands, a depth of six feet could be secured at low water. He, however, is unable to make an estimate of what such an improvement would cost, and submits an estimate of $15,000 for a satisfactory survey to determine this.

I have not as favorable an opinion as Major Suter has of the beneficial effect of dams, and I have therefore estimated for the expense of applying boats to operate directly on the bars, to ascertain the improvement susceptible by such means. This was one of the means suggested by him. The sands of the Wisconsin river bars are easily moved by the water, they being free from any cementing material. I believe that a low-water navigation of three feet throughout would be all that at present can be promised. Should the plan by which this is attained promise a better result it could then be extended.

With the low water depth of the Wisconsin secured at three feet, we might rely much of the time on from four to six feet for average stages.

The locks on the Fox river improvements are designed for four feet draught, and it seems questionable whether it would do to undertake increasing this depth before its availability on the Wisconsin was demonstrated.

Products passing from the Mississippi to the lakes must break bulk before reaching there; for no vessel suitable for these upper rivers would be able to navigate Lake Michigan, nor could the lake vessels in ordinary river stages float on the Upper Mississippi. Thus, then, for the through traffic it would seem best to adapt the improved connecting channel to the sizes of the grain barges of the Mississippi. The dimensions of tow-boats need not exceed them. As, however, there is a considerable period when the river navigation may reach at least six feet, it has been thought desirable to submit an estimate for increasing the improved channel along the Upper and Lower Fox rivers to a depth of six feet. In doing this Major Suter has also thought it best to increase the present length of the locks from one hundred and sixty feet to two hundred and twenty feet, the present width of thirty-five feet to remain.

In order to secure this navigation they must rearrange the existing method of supplying water to the mills at the Fox river dams to prevent its being lowered, as it now is. This is fully discussed in Major Suter's report. Such locks as Major Suter estimates for would enable small gunboats to pass from the Gulf of Mexico to the lakes by lightering, but to do so, timely preparation would have to be made to take advantage of the high stages of the Wisconsin river.

The descent of the Wisconsin, in the 112 miles, from Portage to its mouth, is about one hundred and fifty feet. From the nature of the stream, lock and dam navigation is unsuitable. A continuous canal would cost several millions of dollars, and an estimate for this will be made if the necessary surveys are authorized.

Not being prepared to recommend any appropriation for wing dams till more thorough surveys are made, I have estimated only for the cost of building and operating a scraping dredge-boat for this river as follows: Cost of boat, $25,000; cost of operating the same for six months, $15,000.

Major Suter reports the condition of the improvements on the Upper and Lower Fox rivers as needing considerable repairs, in order to secure the full benefits of them on their present scale of four feet draught, and locks one hundred and sixty feet by thirty-five feet, and presents an estimate of the required amount. He estimates, also, the additional expense to obtain six feet draught, with locks two hundred and twenty feet by thirty-five feet. His estimates are as follows, and meet my approval:

For Lower Fox river.

Place.	For four feet draught.	For six feet draught.

The improvement company allowed us to take copies of the maps and plans of their works to aid us in making the above estimates, but time does not permit of our submitting them with this report. A reduced map and section is submitted herewith, by which Major Suter's report, as well as my own, can be better understood. Special attention is invited to his report, as the subject cannot be fully comprehended without a thorough study of the facts which he presents.

OFFICE OF SURVEY OF UPPER MISSISSIPPI AND TRIBUTARIES,

January 2, 1867.

GENERAL: In accordance with your instructions of the 18th September, 1866, directing me to examine and report on the route of the Green Bay and Mississippi Canal Company, I left St. Paul on the 21st of September, arriving at Appleton, Wisconsin, on the 22d. I was informed there that all the officers of the canal company were absent with the board of directors, making an examination of the Upper Fox river. On the 26th September I received a telegram from the chief engineer of the company, Mr. N. M. Edwards, requesting me to meet the directors at Portage City as soon as possible. I complied with their request, leaving Appleton on the 26th, and arriving at Portage early the next morning. The board of directors received me with great cordiality, and after learning the object of my mission, tendered me the use of all the maps, plans, and records of the company, and any assistance in the way of men and materials which might be necessary. A copy of the resolutions of the board on this subject is appended, (marked A.)

In the afternoon of the 27th I started down the Wisconsin river, in company with ex-Governor Horatio Seymour, of New York, and a few others of the directors of the canal company. We arrived at Lone Rock on the 28th, and from that point I returned to Appleton. On the 25th of September I engaged Mr. J. L. Osborn, of Oshkosh, Wisconsin, as my assistant, and on the 3d of October I engaged Mr. E. L. Billings as draughtsman. From September 30 to October 16 I occupied myself in collecting from the officers of the canal company, and other reliable sources, all the information possible bearing on the subject of my mission. Such maps as were needed for my examination were copied at once; the other maps and plans needed for this report were copied by Mr. Billings, after I left Appleton, and were brought on by him to Prairie du Chien.

During this period I also carefully examined the Lower Fox river from its outlet from Lake Winnebago to Depere, the head of natural navigation.

On the 16th October I left Appleton for Oshkosh, where I bought a boat and hired a boat's crew. I started from Oshkosh October 17, and ascended the Upper Fox river to Fort Winnebago, and thence through the canal to Portage, where I arrived the 23d of October.

I remained at Portage until the 30th of October, and then, having procured another boat and some additional men, I started down the Wisconsin river.

The land office maps of both the Fox and Wisconsin were found very unreliable, but the canal company had a very good map of the Fox, made from their own surveys. From this map and the records of their surveys a plan of improvement was projected for the Fox river from Portage to Green Bay, and the estimates of cost determined.

All that could be done on the Wisconsin river, owing to the lateness of the season and the small size of my party, was to make a general examination of the stream and its valley, keeping a continuous line of channel soundings, which are sufficient to give an idea of the navigability of the river. At intervals of about ten miles, observations were taken to determine the cross-section of the stream and its discharge, and also its fall in one mile of distance. The results of these observations are given in the subjoined report. They were taken as accurately as the means at our disposal permitted, but the results are not very satisfactory. An idea of the volume of the stream may, however, be got from them. The average fall per mile was pretty accurately determined, but the difference of level between Portage and Prairie du Chien cannot be given accurately, as the exact distance does not appear to be known.

Different authorities place it all along from 112 to 137 miles. I have taken it as 112 miles, which is the distance as given by the latest edition of the State sectional maps. In the latter part of October we had heavy rains, which raised the water nearly a foot at Portage City. During the time occupied by my examination the river was falling, and probably fell two or three inches. This will account in a measure for the rather anomalous results of my observations for getting the discharge of the stream. I obtained a good many levels from the railroad companies, but they do not agree with my observations nor with each other.

I arrived at Prairie du Chien on the 11th November, and after sending my boats, &c., to St. Paul, and paying off my party, I left for St. Paul on the 24th of November. On arriving there I found your orders directing me to come on to New York. I started at once, arriving here the 2d of December.

The results of my examination are respectfully submitted in the accompanying report.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHAS. R. SUTER,

Brevet Major U. S. A., Capt. U. S. Engineers.

Brevet Major Gen. G. K. WARREN, U. S. A.,

Maj. U. S. Engineers, in charge of survey of the Upper Mississippi and its tributaries.

REPORT ON FOX AND WISCONSIN RIVERS, WISCONSIN.

These two rivers, joined by about two miles of canal at Portage City, offer a continuous and nearly direct line of water communication between the Mississippi at Prairie du Chien and Lake Michigan at Green Bay. The characteristics of the shores of these streams will naturally divide this subject into three parts, which I shall treat separately, viz: the Lower Fox, including Lake Winnebago; the Upper Fox, including the Portage canal; the Wisconsin river.

A company, known at present as the Green Bay and Mississippi Canal Company, has been engaged for several years in making this route navigable and in completing or enlarging the improvements begun by the State of Wisconsin. The results of their labors may be summed up as follows: The Lower Fox has had slackwater navigation established throughout its length, and can be navigated during the dry season by vessels drawing three and a half feet of water and of the proper dimensions for passing through the locks. It can easily be made available for vessels of greater draught.

On the Upper Fox but little permanent good has been accomplished, although an immense amount of dredging has been done every year. This stream, however, is remarkably easy to improve and render navigable for vessels of considerable draught.

A few attempts have been made to improve the navigation of the Wisconsin, but not having been comprehensive enough, they have not accomplished much good. I think, however, that simple constructions will suffice to control this stream and force all the water into one channel during the low stages. When this is accomplished the river will be perfectly navigable. A general plan will be proposed for this improvement, but nothing definite can be advanced and no estimates of costs made out before a thorough survey is made of the river from Portage to Prairie du Chien.

In this examination I have kept in view the navigation of these streams, not only by vessels drawing four feet, which my instructions demanded, but also by vessels drawing six feet, which is more in accordance with the spirit of the act of Congress under which the survey was made. In all cases estimates have been made to suit both conditions.

This stream, which forms the outlet for Lake Winnebago, is $37\frac{1}{2}$ miles in length. It is a fine stream, flowing over a rocky bottom, between bold bluff banks. Its total fall from Lake Winnebago to Green bay is 170 feet, and its discharge per second is 23,206 cubic feet at the season of least water. The river has quite a direct course, and is almost free from islands. The bottom is generally solid rock or large boulders. Lake Winnebago, which acts as a great reservoir, prevents any sudden or large freshets. The extreme fluctuations of the Lower Fox are between three and four feet. As before stated, the banks are bold bluffs, generally forty or fifty feet high. The river can, therefore, be raised to any extent desirable without overflowing any of the adjacent country. The only property which would suffer would be the mills along the banks, but any losses in this respect would be compensated by the increase of water power. The total fall in the stream is divided up between eight principal falls or rapids, whose respective heights are as follows:

Winnebago rapids, (Neenah and Menasha)	10 feet.
Grande chute, (Appleton)	38 feet.
Cedars	10 feet.
Little chute	38 feet.
Grand Kaukauna	50 feet.
Rapide Croche	8 feet.
Little Kaukauna	8 feet.
Depere	8 feet.
Total fall	170 feet.

These rapids are overcome by locks and dams, with short lengths of canal passing around the rapids, thus giving slackwater navigation from Green bay to Lake Winnebago.

These locks, dams, and canal lengths are distributed as follows:

Menasha, } each.....	1	1	4,200
Neenah }
Appleton, upper level.....	1	3	4,600
Appleton, lower level.....	1	1	1,267
Cedars	1	1	1,200
Little chute	1	4	6,467
Grand Kaukauna	1	5	7,400
Rapide Croche	1	1	1,800
Little Kaukauna	1	1	1,166
Depere	1	1	750
	9	18	28,850

The fine water-power afforded by this stream has been utilized to a considerable extent, and flourishing manufacturing towns have sprung up around the points where it is most available. They contain saw and flouring mills mostly. The largest of these towns are Neenah and Menasha, on Winnebago rapids; Appleton on the Grande chute and Depere, which latter, in addition to its manufacturing interests is a point of importance as the head of natural navigation of the Lower Fox river. It is situated five miles above the town of Green Bay, which is itself two miles above the mouth of Fox river.

From its mouth to Depere, the Fox averages one thousand feet in width, with a channel ten feet deep. Above Depere its width, which is quite uniform, will average about six hundred feet. It receives no tributaries of importance after leaving Lake Winnebago.

NEENAH AND MENASHA.

The Fox leaves Lake Winnebago by two outlets, which, about two miles below, join to form a small lake, called Little Lake Buttes des Morts.

On the northern channel has been located the town of Menasha, on the southern channel the town of Neenah. Both these channels have been dammed, and canals constructed for passing around the rapids.

Each canal ends with a lock of ten feet lift. The Menasha channel is the only one used by vessels at present.

Plate 1 shows both channels; plates 2, 3, and 4 show details of the Menasha channel and proposed improvements. The entrance into Fox river from Lake Winnebago, by either channel, is very difficult. I examined both, and became convinced that the one now in use can be easiest improved. Plate No. 2 shows the entrance to this channel, and the two bars which obstruct it. The dotted blue line indicates the curve of four feet, and the dotted ochre line the curve of six feet. The continuous dotted red line indicates the proper sailing line, and the dotted red lines on each side of it indicate the lateral limits of the artificial channel which will have to be constructed.

The outer bar is composed of sand, and can be dredged; but the inner one, being composed of hard-pan (stiff hard clay mixed with gravel) covered with boulders, will require to be coffer-dammed and dug out by hand.

In the canal there is also trouble caused by the mills, which draw off far more than the surplus water they are entitled to. They draw down the canal from one foot to six inches, making it only three feet deep at the lower end; at the upper end it is six feet deep.

When I made my examination the dam at Neenah was in very bad condition, leaking badly; this had lowered the water considerably on the Menasha side, where it was about eighteen inches below the top of the dam. I have no doubt that if the Neenah dam were tight, boats drawing four feet would have no difficulty in passing through the canal. But the trouble connected with the mills must be adjusted before any further improvements can be made. The canal varies in width, from 80 feet to 125 feet on top.

The lock is 160 feet long, 35 feet wide in the chamber; depth on lower mitre-sill, six feet two inches; lift, ten feet. The lock is composite, that is, dry masonry, faced with timber. The upper section of planking and timbers needs renewing, and the gates need repairing.

The Menasha dam is 460 feet in length and 6 feet high. It is in good order.

Estimates for four-feet draught.

1. 606 cubic yards dredging at outer bar, at 33 cents	$200 00
2. 3,000 cubic yards digging at inner bar, (foot of Green Bay light,) at 50 cents	1, 500 00
3. Coffe-dam near entrance of stream, 1,400 feet long, at $1 50 per foot	2, 100 00
4. Deepening canal, half mile above lock, 14,940 cubic yards, at 50 cents	7, 470 00
5. Repairs to locks, new gates, and renewed planking and timber of upper section	2, 000 00
Total for four-feet draught	13, 270 00

In case it should be deemed desirable to fit this route for vessels drawing six feet, it would be best to make the lock 220 feet long, that is, the present locks should be lengthened sixty feet; the present width of thirty-five feet seems sufficient.

In case six-feet draught is desired, we must add to the foregoing estimates as follows:

1. Add.....	$430 00
2. Add.....	2,500 00
4. Add.....	15,000 00
5. Add cost of lengthening locks 68 feet.....	10,000 00
Deepening channel between bars, 26,000 cubic yards, at 50 cents.	13,000 00
Add total for four-feet draught..	13,270 00
Total for six-feet draught	54,200 00

APPLETON.—(Plates 5, 6, and 7.)

The upper dam at this place is four and one-third miles below the lock at Menasha, and gives slackwater back to that point. It is 800 feet long and about 7 feet high. It is quite tight, but has settled in the centre from 1 inch to 10 inches, for about 430 feet. A bulkhead, about 1,000 feet long by 12 feet wide on top, extends from the right-hand extremity of this dam parallel to the shore, and forms the left bank of the canal. It is built like the locks of dry masonry, faced with timber. This latter is a good deal decayed and ought to be replaced by good stone masonry.

From the end of the bulkhead, the canal is carried across a point of land, as will be seen by the plan, for a distance of 3,600 feet. In this portion there are three locks, having a total lift of twenty-nine feet six inches. They are all 160 feet long by 35 feet wide in the chamber.

First, or upper lock.—Lift, seven feet nine inches; depth of water on lower mitre-sill, eight feet six inches; height of lock, twenty-three feet; bottom, rock. Requires new wood-work for upper section and a pair of gates. Lower right-hand wing-wall needs relaying.

Second lock.—Lift, eleven feet nine inches; depth on lower mitre-sill, four feet six inches; height of lock, twenty feet two inches; bottom, wood. Needs new wood-work for upper section; also a new pair of gates.

Third lock.—Lift, ten feet; depth on lower mitre-sill, eight feet eight inches; height of lock, twenty-two feet one inch; bottom, rock. Needs new wood-work for upper section, and one pair of gates.

This last lock opens into the river. A dam 1,600 feet below gives slackwater in this part of the stream. The lower dam is 440 feet long, and quite tight and level. The dike on the Appleton side of the river should be raised. This dam could not be raised without overflowing much valuable property. A piece of canal, 1,267 feet long, leads around it. At the end of this canal is the Fourth lock.—Lift, eight feet six inches; depth on lower mitre-sill, six feet eight inches; height of lock, nineteen feet three inches; rock bottom. Wood-work is good. One gate needs replacing.

The upper or Menasha level has over six feet of water to within about 300 yards of the foot of Menasha lock. For about 100 yards of this distance there is only from three to three and a half feet of water. The second, third, and fourth levels are calculated for four-feet draught, but have all got somewhat filled up with saw-dust, &c., and will have to be dredged out. In order to obtain six-feet draught, there will be dredging required in all the levels, especially at the foot of the Menasha lock, and of the third Appleton lock. It will be observed that the depth of water on the lower mitre-sills is enough in all cases to admit of the passage of a boat drawing six feet, except at the second lock. It is thought, however, that the necessary depth can be obtained by putting flush-boards on the upper gates of the third lock, without being obliged to raise the lock-walls or the canal banks. For six-feet draught, the locks should each be lengthened sixty feet.

CEDARS.—(Plate 8.)

Three miles below Appleton lower dam another dam is thrown across the stream and creates slackwater over Cedar rapids and up to the lower Appleton lock. This dam is 740 feet long and 7 feet high ; it has settled, for about half its length, from 1 foot to 18 inches.

A short section of canal, 1,200 feet long, leads around the dam. A lock is situated near its upper end. The canal banks are faced with dry stone.

Lock.—Lift, 10 feet; depth on lower mitre-sill, 3 feet 11 inches; height of lock, 19 feet; bottom, rock; head-walls of dry masonry; needs new wood-work for the upper section, and repairs of two gates, equal to half the cost of new ones. This lock and all those below it, except the Depere lock, is 160 feet long by 35 feet wide, in the clear.

Appleton level.—Depth good to within a short distance of the paper-mill at Appleton lower lock. It will average about 5 feet. For a short distance, say 500 feet below the mill, it is barely 4 feet. It is thought that levelling the dam will remove all obstructions to a draught of 4 feet. For six-feet draught the dam should be raised one foot, as also the lock and canal embankment. Considerable dredging will also be needed below the paper-mill at Appleton. The lock should be lengthened 60 feet.

LITTLE CHUTE.—(Plates 9, 10, and 11.)

Three-quarters of a mile below the dam, at the Cedars, is located the dam at Little chute. This dam gives slackwater back to the Cedars lock. The dam is 690 feet long and 7 feet high. It has settled on the west end, for one-quarter of its length, from 1 inch to 2 inches. From the dam a canal 6,467 feet long leads to the river below. The fall of 38 feet is overcome by four locks, the last two being combined. The canal itself is never less than 100 feet wide on top, and there are several basins in which boats can pass each other.

Upper, or No. 1 lock.—Lift, $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet; depth on lower mitre-sill, 6 feet 1 inch; height of lock, 18 feet 6 inches; bottom, rock; new wood-work of upper section needed, and repairs on gates.

Lock No. 2.—Lift, 10 feet; depth on lower mitre-sill, 4 feet 10 inches; height of lock, 18 feet 4 inches; bottom, rock. About half the wood-work of upper section needs repairs, and lower pair of gates should be replaced.

Lock No. 3.—Lift, 10 feet 9 inches; depth on lower mitre-sill, 6 feet 5 inches; height of lock, 19 feet 3 inches; bottom, wood.

Lock No. 4.—Lift, 12 feet 9 inches; depth on lower mitre-sill, 6 feet 9 inches; height of lock, 21 feet; bottom, wood. Upper section of wood-work needs repairing in both locks.

The upper level has 6 feet or more of water, except in the mouth of the canal at the Cedars; at that point only $3\frac{1}{2}$ feet. The second level is about 5 feet deep. The third level has 4 feet depth and upwards. It will only be necessary to level the dam at Little chute, in order to bring the depth in the upper level to 4 feet. For six-feet draught the dam must be raised 2 feet, as also the upper lock walls and canal embankment. The three levels will need considerable dredging, and the four locks should be lengthened 60 feet each.

GRAND KAUKAUNA.—(Plates 12, 13, and 14.)

The dam at this point is $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles below the one at Little chute, and gives slackwater back to the foot of the combined locks. The dam is 583 feet long and 6 feet high. It is in a very dilapidated condition, and should be rebuilt.

A canal 7,400 feet long leads around the rapids, overcoming by means of five locks a fall of fifty feet.

The canal has an average width on top of 130 feet, and there are two basins to allow of boats passing each other.

First or upper lock.—Lift, 9 feet; depth on lower mitre-sill, 9 feet 4 inches; height, 24 feet; bottom, rock. Needs new wood-work to upper section.

Second lock.—Lift, 10 feet; depth on lower mitre-sill, 6 feet 2 inches; height, 20 feet 7 inches; bottom, rock. Needs new wood-work to upper section, and one pair of new gates.

Third lock.—Lift, 11 feet; depth on lower mitre-sill, 5 feet 11 inches; height of lock, 20 feet; bottom, rock. Needs new wood-work to upper section, and one pair of new gates.

Fourth lock.—Lift, 10 feet; depth on lower mitre-sill, 6 feet; height, 21 feet 4 inches; bottom, rock. Needs new wood-work to upper section, and four new gates.

Fifth lock.—Lift, 10 feet; depth on lower mitre-sill, 6 feet; height, 21 feet; bottom rock needs new wood-work for half the upper section. The upper level back to Little chute is over 5 feet deep. The second, third, fourth, and fifth levels have a pretty uniform depth of about 5 feet. To obtain water enough for four feet draught in this portion of the improvement, it will only be necessary to rebuild the dam and repair the locks. For six-feet draught it will be necessary to raise the dam one foot, as also the walls of the upper lock and the canal embankment above it. The four lower levels will have to be dredged out about 2 feet deeper, and the five locks lengthened 60 feet each. The upper level will also require some dredging.

RAPIDE CROCHE.—(Plate 15.)

The dam at this place is four and one-half miles below the dam at Grand Kaukauna. It is 440 feet long, 6 feet high, and in good condition.

A canal, 1,800 feet long, runs from the dam across a point of land. At the lower end is a fine stone lock, which opens into the river. This is the only stone lock on the line of the improvement. All the others are composite. It was recently built at a cost of $60,000, to replace a very defective wooden lock.

Lock.—Lift, 8 feet; depth on lower mitre-sill, 6 feet 6 inches; height, 19 feet. Bottom rock needs no repairs.

The upper or Kaukauna level has five feet of water to within half a mile of the end of the Grand Kaukauna canal. In this portion loose stones lying on the bottom cause the depth to vary from three and a half to five feet. These stones will have to be cleared out of the channel to render four-feet draught certain.

To get six-feet draught the dam should be raised one foot. The lock walls and canal banks should also be raised correspondingly, and the lock should be lengthened sixty feet. The upper level will also need additional clearing out.

LITTLE KAUKAUNA.—(Plate 16.)

The dam at this point is six miles below the dam at the Rapide Croche. It is 550 feet long and 6 feet high. It is quite level, but leaks considerably.

The canal leading around this dam is 1,166 feet long. At the lower end is the lock.

Lock.—Lift, 8 feet; depth on lower mitre-sill, 5 feet 8 inches; height of lock, 19 feet; rock bottom; head walls of masonry. It is in good condition and needs no repairs.

The level to the Rapide Croche has about four feet of water. The channel is quite crooked. To make this reach available for vessels drawing four feet the dam must be repaired and raised one foot. For six feet of water it must be raised two feet more and considerably strengthened. The lock and canal banks must also be raised, and the lock lengthened sixty feet.

DEPERE.—(Plate 17.)

The Depere dam is six miles below the dam at Little Kaukauna, and is located at the head of natural navigation of the Fox river. It is five miles above the town of Green Bay, and seven miles above the mouth of the river.

The canal leading around the dam is 750 feet long, and is widened out into a basin. The dam is 1,400 feet long and 6 feet high, in good order.

Lock.—140 feet long, 35 feet wide; lift, 8 feet; depth on lower mitre-sill, 4 feet 3 inches; height of lock, 17 feet; bottom, wood.

The upper level has six feet or more depth of water to within half a mile of Little Kaukauna lock, where it diminishes to from four to five feet.

The lock shown on the plan has been abandoned and another built on the line dotted on the plan in red. The location and design of this lock are not satisfactory. The lock-pit ought to have been sunk two feet deeper, as the depth of the water on the lower mitre-sill depends at present entirely on the state of the wind. Four feet three inches is the greatest depth that it attains, but when the wind blows the water out of the river there is sometimes not more than two feet. A large piece of shoal-water intervenes between the lock and the channel of the river. The bottom is solid rock, and would have to be blasted. The lock itself is only 140 feet long, whereas all the others are 160 feet in length. A plan has been proposed to run the canal out into the river, along the full red line shown on the plan, or even still further to the right. The cutting on this line would be through a bed of rock, but the stone could be used in building the lock, &c., and the surplus sold to advantage. The water-power thus gained would also be of considerable value. The bed of rock ends a few feet from the shore, and is succeeded by soft mud, through which a channel could be easily dredged. Thus would be avoided the labor and expense of blasting under water, which would be necessary in case the old line were used. Altogether I do not think the estimate would much exceed that given here for improving the present site, and the results would probably be more satisfactory. If this route is to be enlarged for vessels drawing six feet, I should certainly recommend this change to be made.

Below Depere the river has a good channel ten feet deep and over, with no perceptible current. The only further obstruction to navigation is a troublesome bar at the mouth of the river, which is in process of removal, under the direction of Major J. B. Wheeler, United States engineers. The depth on it now is six to eight feet.

LAKE WINNEBAGO.

This body of water is thirty-five miles long and from nine to fourteen miles wide. Its depth varies from twelve feet to twenty-five feet.

There are many flourishing towns situated on its banks, among others Fond du Lac, the second city in size of the State of Wisconsin.

It is navigated to a considerable extent by both steam and sailing vessels. Its outlet is the Lower Fox river, which leaves it at its northern extremity. The Upper Fox river enters the lake at about the middle of the western shore. At its mouth is situated the flourishing town of Oshkosh, where are located a great number of saw-mills.

As before stated, the surface of the lake only fluctuates to the amount of three or four feet, thereby preventing any sudden or violent freshets on the Lower Fox.

By the steamboat channel it is fifteen and a half miles from the mouth of the Upper Fox to the outlet of the lake at Menasha. There is over twenty feet depth of water the whole distance.

UPPER FOX RIVER.—(Maps Nos. 2 and 3.)

This stream takes its rise in Green Lake county, about twenty-five miles northeast of Portage City. Its first course is southwest till it reaches, at Portage City, the water-shed which separates its waters from those of the Wisconsin. It then turns almost due north and maintains that direction, as far as Lake Buffalo. It then assumes an easterly course, which it maintains until the lakes are passed. It then gradually takes up a northeasterly direction, which is maintained to within a few miles of its mouth. It is a sluggish, tortuous stream, flowing through a low but rich alluvial country. Its banks are bordered throughout nearly its entire length by large marshy tracts overgrown with wild rice. The banks are generally very low, so that a small rise in the river will overflow a large extent of meadow and other land. The bottom is generally a soft black mud, but sometimes sand is found. In such places bars are met with. Its course is exceedingly tortuous and the sharpness of the bends is a great obstacle to navigation. A great many of these bends have been cut off already, and it is found that it can be done at small cost by simple dredging. As nearly as can be estimated there are 18,000 feet of cut-offs between Portage City and Lake Apuckaway, and these cut-offs save about three-fifths of the distance.

By devoting a small sum annually to this object the navigation of the river would not only be rendered much safer and easier, but the route would be materially shortened.

Its present length from Oshkosh to Fort Winnebago is one hundred and four miles, while the air-line distance between the same points is only fifty-four miles.

The total fall in this same distance is only 33.10 feet, but this is quite unevenly distributed. In most places there is a fall of a foot in two and a half miles, but there are many long reaches where the fall is scarcely perceptible. Several lakes occur on the course of the river; they are generally shallow and full of wild rice. The Fox receives a good many tributaries, the largest being the Wolf river, which flows into it about ten miles from Oshkosh. The towns along the Fox have many saw and flouring mills in operation. The country between Berlin and Portage is almost entirely dependent on the river for transportation, and the towns below Berlin generally ship their produce to Oshkosh and Fond du Lac. In consequence of this a large number of steamboats, tugs, and barges find employment on the Fox river, and pay well. In its upper portion, above the lakes, the river becomes quite shallow, but below the lakes there is an abundance of water. The stream generally flows in one narrow channel. The only improvement at first thought necessary on the Upper Fox was to dredge down the bars sufficiently to allow of the passage of vessels drawing three and a half feet. An immense amount of dredging has been done, the bed of the stream in many places being lowered several feet, but no permanent good was accomplished, as the holes thus dredged soon filled up again. Then wing-dams were built above and below Princeton to deepen the channel there; they are said to have accomplished their object very well for a time, but having been built too solidly, they have been gradually torn up and carried off by the ice. Later a lock and dam were built at Governor's Bend, to improve the stream near Fort Winnebago, and a lock and dam are now in process of construction at Montello. Experience has shown that establishing slackwater throughout is the only way to make any permanent improvement on this river. This subject will be discussed at length further on.

The mouth of the Fox river at Oshkosh is very deep; the channel has upwards of twenty feet of water, which continues along the whole river front of the town; thence to Lake Buttes des Morts, and through that lake there is over twelve feet of water; the river is broad and deep, with no perceptible current. About ten miles from Oshkosh the Fox is joined by the Wolf river, a stream of nearly its own size. This river is navigable for about fifty miles; it penetrates into the lumber regions in the northern part of the State, and a great quantity of logs and sawed lumber is floated down the river to Oshkosh.

After passing the mouth of Wolf river, six feet is the least depth until we reach Omro bar, half a mile below the town of that name; thence to the town, four and a half feet of water. This portion of the river is quite crooked, but this is of no great importance to small vessels, on account of the depth of the water. Two miles below Omro, a cut about a mile long, carrying the waters of the Fox straight to Lake Buttes des Morts, would save seven or eight miles of distance.

From Omro to Delhi there is about five feet of water, never less, except in small spots. Above Delhi there is the same depth to Eureka bar. From here to the town of Eureka, one and a half mile, there is only from four to four and a half feet, with occasional deep spots. In front of the town there is six feet of water.

At Eureka there is a permanent bridge, the only one between Berlin and Oshkosh. There are several floating bridges, however, where country roads cross the river.

From Eureka to Sacramento there is an average depth of six feet. The river is quite narrow.

Above Sacramento there is an average depth of five feet half-way to Berlin. Then from four to four and a half feet as far as a floating bridge three-quarters of a mile below Berlin. Above this bridge, and also in front of the town of Berlin, there is about five feet of water. Between Sacramento and Berlin there is not much marsh along the river. The banks are generally high. Above Berlin the average depth is from five feet to six feet for eight miles. At this point there is a short bar, the water is only three and a half feet deep. The average depth above here is from five feet to six feet, until the mouth of the Puckeyan river is reached. Just above the mouth of this stream is a short bar with three and a half feet of water. At the lower end of Willow bend is another short bar with three and a half feet of water. At the mouth of White river is a bad bar three hundred yards long and having only three feet of water on it. In the west side of the first bend above White river is a flat bar caused by a sudden widening of the stream. It is two hundred yards long and has three and a half feet of water on it. There is a bar below the lower wing-dam with three feet of water. Above this wing-dam there is from three and a half feet to four and a half feet of water; usually four feet and often more. The banks of the stream from Berlin to the lower wing-dam are generally low and marshy, but above this point they are quite high, and continue so to the mouth of Mechan river. There is a second wing-dam at State Centre. At St. Mary are the ruins of a bridge. From St. Mary to Princeton the river is quite shoal. The average depth is four feet, but on the bars there is less than three feet. There are two more wing-dams at Princeton. There is also at this point a good permanent bridge across the Fox.

Between Princeton and the mouth of Mechan river there are three wing-dams. In this portion of the river the water is quite shoal, not more than three feet deep. From Omro to the mouth of Mechan river the fall is about one foot in two and a half miles, and there is quite a strong current.

Above the Mechan there is slack water to Lake Apuckaway. The river is very wide, with 6 feet or 8 feet depth of water, or more. Within the Big bend, above Princeton, the ground is quite high, about 30 feet above the level of the river. If a canal could be cut through here about ten miles would be saved, as the neck is only a mile wide.

Lake Apuckaway is a sheet of water $8\frac{1}{4}$ miles long, and from one to two miles wide. The lower end of the lake is very shallow and full of reeds and wild rice. A track running northeast from Marquette has been cut through for steamers.

It is from 3 feet to $3\frac{1}{2}$ feet deep. A channel having 4 feet of water leads along the eastern shore of the lake.

The bottom of the lake is a very soft black mud, through which a channel of any depth can be easily dredged. For about a mile to the westward of Marquette the lake is filled with rushes. A channel exists, however, which has about $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet of water. After getting out of the rushes there is from 5 feet to 6 feet of water to the end of the lake.

At the mouth of the Fox there is a bar about half a mile long, where there is only from 3 feet to $3\frac{1}{2}$ feet of water; above this there is 5 feet or 6 feet for about three miles. Just below the large bend there is about $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet; then for a mile from 6 feet to 7 feet. The rest of the way to Montello the river is shallow. Three and a half feet is the average depth, and three feet is the least. There are a good many sand-banks just below Montello, which wash into the stream and cause bad bars. The current between the lakes is quite rapid.

At Montello a lock and dam are being constructed to raise the water above Lake Buffalo. As shown by the plan (plate 18) it is designed to cut the canal through into a bayou, which has a depth of about 7 feet. The Montello river has also been turned into this bayou.

The dimensions of the lock and dam, when finished, will be as follows:

Dam, 151 feet long; canal, 150 feet long and 90 feet wide; lock lift 3 feet, depth on lower mitre-sill between 8 feet and 9 feet, height of lock 15 feet, length 160 feet, width 35 feet; composite lock with head-walls of masonry.

Above the mouth of Montello river there is from 4 feet to $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet of water as far as the lower end of Lake Buffalo. Lake Buffalo is a large rice-field about $13\frac{1}{2}$ miles long and half a mile wide. The Fox crosses it in a very tortuous but deep channel.

After entering the lake there is from 6 feet to 9 feet as far as Packwaukee, and even as deep as 15 feet. There is a pile bridge across the lake at Packwaukee.

From Packwaukee a good channel leads to the end of Buffalo lake. The water runs from 7 feet to 9 feet in depth. Between Lake Buffalo and Lake Menomin there is a channel of about the same depth, and also through Lake Menomin. This channel is exceedingly crooked. Lake Menomin is a large rice-field like Lake Buffalo. It is $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile long by half a mile wide.

After leaving this lake, and especially after passing Merritt's landing, just above Moundville, a series of small, but bad, bars are met with. They are caused by the washing of a high sand-bluff on the river bank. They have barely 3 feet of water on them. The worst of these bars could be avoided by a cut-off. In the last mile below Roslyn the channel is, as a general rule, quite deep, from 6 to 8 feet; but shoal spots occur, where only $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet is to be found. The channel is exceedingly crooked and narrow. A great many cut-offs should be made on this portion of the river.

From Roslyn to the first cut-off there is from $5\frac{1}{2}$ feet to 7 feet of water. Just below this cut-off is a short bar with only three feet of water. In the cut itself there is about 4 feet. Above the cut is another bar, with 3 feet depth.

This first cut-off is only about four feet long, but it saves nearly a mile of distance. From the first to the second cut-off the depth is about $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet. In the cut-off there is a bar with about 3 feet of water; the rest of the cut has a depth of about $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet.

From the second to the long cut-off there is from 6 feet to 9 feet of water. At the lower end of the long cut-off there is 5 feet of water; at the middle, 4 feet; at the upper end, 3 feet, with a short bar, having from 2 feet 8 inches to 3 feet. From the end of the cut-off to Governor's Bend lock there is about 5 feet of water.

Between Governor's Bend lock and Roslyn the stream is very crooked, and several long cut-offs should be made.

The cut-off just below Governor's Bend (plate 19) is about a mile long, and saves about three miles.

Governor's Bend lock.—(Plate 19.)—Dam, about 4 feet high and 60 feet long. Canal, 570 feet long and 57 feet wide. Lock, composite; lift, 4 feet; depth on lower mitre-sill, 5 feet 6 inches; height, 15 feet; length, 160 feet; width, 35 feet. New and in good order.

From this lock to Winnebago lock there is slackwater. The channel leads almost entirely through cut-offs, and is quite free from sharp bends. (Plates 20, 21, and 22.) The width of these cut-offs is about 60 feet. The depth will average $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet to within a mile of Winnebago lock. In this last distance the channel is full of sand-bars; the water gradually shoals from $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet to $2\frac{1}{2}$ feet. At the foot of Winnebago lock there is 8 feet of water.

Winnebago lock.—(Plate 24.)—Lift, 7 feet; depth on lower mitre-sill, 6 feet 1 inch; height, 17 feet; length, 160 feet; width, 35 feet. Composite lock, with masonry head-walls. In good order.

The canal which connects the Fox and Wisconsin rivers is quite shoal. At the lower end it is 5 feet deep for about 200 feet; then 3 feet deep to within 500 feet of the first railroad bridge; then $2\frac{1}{2}$ feet deep to the second railroad bridge; then 2 feet deep to the town of Portage. At the upper or Wisconsin end it is about 18 inches deep. The mill at the lower end draws the water down about 1 foot.

At the upper end of the canal is a guard-lock, which is used as a lift-lock when the Wisconsin is high. It is in a very dilapidated condition and should be rebuilt. The Portage canal is shown entire in plate 24. It is $2\frac{1}{3}$ miles (12,400 feet) in length, and 75 feet in width. It is cut through a flat sandy plain, which separates the waters of the Fox from those of the Wisconsin. The Fox river is about five feet lower than the Wisconsin in ordinary stages of water. During high water the Wisconsin overflows this neck of low ground at Portage, and also five or six miles above, and a large portion of its waters are thus diverted to Green bay. The spring rise in the Fox is principally owing to this cause, for the Fox itself fluctuates very little. About seven miles below Portage a stream called Big Slough comes into the Fox. During high water this connects with the Wisconsin and becomes a very considerable stream, bringing a large volume of water into the Fox. In fact, the greater part of the low country between the two rivers is overflowed by the Wisconsin at this time. It will be seen that the canal is not straight, but makes a considerable bend to the westward. The object of this was to place the mouth of the canal on the Wisconsin side, above the island shown in plate 23. It was afterwards proposed to give it the direction shown in plate 23, but the idea has never been carried out. At present the main bulk of the Wisconsin runs through the in-shore channel, and the whole of it can be diverted through there if desirable. It is also much easier to protect the mouth of the canal in the proposed position than in the one it occupies at present. But the change is not a matter of any great importance. The canal at present is almost filled up with sand, but it is being dredged out.

PLAN OF IMPROVEMENT OF THE UPPER FOX RIVER.

The only plan which gives promise of permanency is to create slackwater navigation throughout the whole length of the stream by means of locks and dams. As a great deal of valuable property would be overflowed and ruined by putting in high dams and locks of great lift, it appears preferable to use low dams, say three feet high, and then lower the bed of the stream above and below the dam by dredging sufficiently to destroy the current. Further dredging will give the requisite depth for navigation, and the channel thus made will remain permanent.

Three locks appear necessary between the mouth of Mehan river and Omro. Above the former and below the latter point there is slackwater already, or will be when certain improvements in progress are finished, notably the Montello lock and dam.

The total fall between Mehan river and a point one and a half mile above Eureka is 12.87 feet, which it is proposed to distribute as follows: One lock at Princeton, 4 feet lift, (plate 25;) one lock at Fiddler's Bend, 4 feet lift, (plate 26;) and one lock one and a half mile above Eureka, 5 feet lift, (plate 27.)

Ten feet of this total lift is included in the 12.87 feet, the remainder of that sum being allowed for backwater and flowage.

Details from Winnebago lock to Governor's Bend lock.—Distance, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles; fall not accurately known, as the bed of the stream has been much lowered by dredging since the last survey was made. The lock has about four feet lift, so that the fall is probably between four and five feet. Slackwater exists above Governor's Bend dam.

Governor's Bend lock to Montello lock.—Distance, 21 miles; fall, 5.95 feet, as nearly as can be computed. This is thought to be too much. The Montello dam is to raise the water three feet, and it is proposed to lower the bed below Governor's Bend lock one foot by dredging. This will, it is hoped, give slackwater back to Governor's Bend lock, but in case it does not the Montello dam can be raised one foot more. It will probably be necessary to lower the bed of Governor's Bend lock two feet to enable a vessel drawing six feet of water to get through it; but this cannot be stated positively until a new set of levels has been run to ascertain the exact amount the Montello dam can be raised, if necessary, without overflowing a great extent of country.

From Montello lock to head of Lake Apuckaway.—Distance, 7 miles; fall, 4.93 feet. Bed of stream to be lowered 4 feet by dredging below the Montello lock, leaving 93 feet fall in 7 miles, or about 1 foot 6 inches to the mile. From the head of Lake Apuckaway to the mouth of Mehan river there is slackwater.

From mouth of Mehan river to Princeton lock.—Distance, $5\frac{3}{4}$ miles; fall, 2.57 feet. Water to be raised 2 feet by a dam, and lowered below the dam 2 feet by dredging. Lock, 4 feet lift; flowage, .57 feet.

Princeton lock to Fiddler's Bend lock.—Distance, 12 miles; fall from foot of Princeton lock, 2.92 feet. Water to be raised 2 feet by the dam and lowered 2 feet below the dam by dredging. Lock, 4 feet lift; flowage, .92 feet.

Fiddler's Bend lock to Eureka lock.—Distance, $15\frac{1}{4}$ miles; fall from foot of Fiddler's Bend lock, 3.38 feet. Water to be raised 2 feet by a dam and lowered below the dam 3 feet by dredging. Lock, 5 feet lift; flowage, 1.38 feet.

From Eureka lock to Oshkosh lock.—Distance, 24 miles; fall, 5.80 feet. Water to be raised 3 feet at upper end of level by dredging, as stated for Eureka lock. This will reduce the fall to 2.80 feet in 24 miles, or a little less than 12 feet to the mile, which is practically slackwater.

WISCONSIN RIVER.—(Maps 4, 5, and 6.)

On reaching the Wisconsin river the season was so far advanced that I was obliged to limit myself to a cursory examination of the stream, with a view of determining its general characteristics, the feasibility of rendering it navigable, and the best means of attaining this end.

The river, when I started from Portage City, was about a foot above low water level for this season. During the time occupied by my examination, it fluctuated between this height and six inches lower. The soundings and cross-sections taken can therefore only be relied on as giving a general idea of the volume of water in the river and the depth of its channel.

No reliable survey has ever been made of this river. Its exact length even, from Portage to its mouth, is not known, but is given differently by various authorities, who all base their conclusions on the land office maps. The length which I have assumed is believed to be nearest the truth. The total fall between the same points is also a matter of conjecture. I took twelve observations at intervals of about ten miles to determine the fall per mile, and the mean of these observations is probably very nearly exact. I give here the length, total fall, and fall per mile as given by different authorities.

The current of the Wisconsin has a surface velocity, as determined by experiments at eleven different places, of 2.92 feet per second, or 10,512 feet per hour, equalling 1.99 mile—say two miles per hour.

Both the velocity of the current and the descent of the stream per mile, as given by my observations, are remarkably uniform.

The average discharge of the stream is about 10,000 cubic feet per second, or 36,000,000 cubic feet per hour.

The Wisconsin river takes its rise in the northern part of the State, and flows in a general southerly direction until it arrives in the neighborhood of Portage City, when it makes a sharp bend and runs southwesterly until it empties into the Mississippi near Prairie du Chien. Its total length is about 500 miles; of which, as before stated, about 112 are below Portage City.

Twenty-three miles above Portage City the river passes through the Dalles, and is there very much reduced in width. The Dalles act as a dam to prevent any very great rise in the Lower Wisconsin. The average yearly rise is about six feet. In the spring of 1866 it rose nine feet, which is the greatest height it has attained for many years. The rise in the river just above the Dalles on this occasion was more than fifty feet.

In its general characteristics the Wisconsin is like the Mississippi.

In the river valley is a terrace some ten to twenty feet high, and is from three to six miles wide, and bounded by lime and sandstone bluffs from 100 to 400 feet high. This terrace is a prairie country, bare of timber save a few scattered clumps of cedars. The river is bordered by a belt of bottom land, rarely more than one-fourth of a mile wide, which is thickly timbered, varying in height from two to three feet above low water. The stream meanders from one side of this valley to the other, and splits itself into many channels, thus forming a great number of small islands, which are thickly timbered. Its width when it all flows in one channel is from 600 feet to 1,800 feet.

The bed of the stream is composed of coarse, heavy sand, which is constantly in motion, and any obstacle quickly causes the formation of a bar. As the alluvial matter brought down by the stream is mostly clean sand and very coarse, these bars have no stability, and will form and disappear in the course of a few hours. When the obstacle which originally formed them is of a permanent nature, an island is quickly formed, and, becoming overgrown with brush in the course of a few years, it remains, to a certain degree, permanent. From time to time, however, these islands disappear, being gradually eaten away by the stream.

The shifting nature of the bars is the main obstacle to navigation. There is always, even at the lowest stages, a channel where from five to six feet can be found, but it is generally very crooked. The principal bars appear to be permanent as to location. They remain at one point of the stream, but are constantly changing as far as regards their size, shape, position relative to the axis of the stream, and the depth of water on them. They are always found to tail out from an island or a projecting point of the shore, and run obliquely to the current of the stream. They generally end before reaching the shore, but the worst ones run entirely across the river, forming pockets. These bars are sometimes several miles in length, with ten feet and twelve feet of water on both sides of them; but there is no rule by which one can determine where the most favorable place is for crossing from one pocket to the other. These bars generally occur at points where the width of the stream being suddenly increased, its velocity is proportionately lessened. When the stream divides into several channels, all are more or less shoal, and, moreover, bars are usually found in them, formed by the same causes which affect the main stream.

That there is plenty of water in the stream for purposes of navigation is abundantly proved by the cross-sections (plates 28, 29, and 30) which I took at various points. These show that if the river were reduced in width to from 500 to 800 feet, according to its distance from the mouth, a good channel, free from bars and having a depth of ten or eleven feet, might be relied on.

In former years, when the Wisconsin was navigated by steamboats, it was found that the frequent passage of boats not only deepened the channel, but tended to keep it permanently in the same location. The pilots who take rafts down the river bear testimony to the little stability of the bars, and the slight disturbance of the bottom which is required to cut a deep channel through them.

From all this we may infer that if the stream be so confined during the low stages of water as to have a cross-sectional area, uniformly increasing from about 1,600 square feet at Portage to about 2,500 square feet at its mouth, which would give a width at Portage of about 500 feet and at its mouth of about 750 or 800 feet, there would be formed a good straight channel, deep enough for vessels drawing six feet of water, free from bars, and permanent.

The simplest and most effective way of carrying out this idea will be to contract the bed of the stream by means of low wing-dams, rising only a few inches above the level of extreme low water, and so located as to throw the whole volume of water in the stream during the low-water stages into the most direct channel, and at the same time offering no important obstacle to the free discharge of the stream during high-water.

Where islands occur these dams can be simplified, and the same results attained by throwing them across the heads of large sloughs, so as to force as much water as is desirable into the channel selected. Where long pockets of deep water occur, separated from the rest of the river by a shallow bar, the dam could be run out along the crest of the bar, thus preventing the water from passing over it in a shallow extended sheet, and forcing it, by the accumulation of its volume within restricted limits, to cut a deep and permanent channel through the bar. Or a similar result might perhaps be attained by placing near the lower extremity of the pocket a wing-dam running out from the shore nearest the deep water, which, by suddenly arresting and deflecting a large volume of water, would attain the same result as in the previous method.

The greatest difficulty attending a scheme of improvement of this nature is the nice adjustment and calculation required to attain the object desired without transferring the obstacle to some other point, a result which would be certain to ensue if the stream were left liable to any sudden increase or diminution of velocity. The extent of the influence exerted by every successive portion of the improvement on the stream, both above and below, must be accurately calculated, so that they may not interfere with each other. The water-way must be gradually increased in proportion to the volume of water brought in by the various tributaries.

To plan the details of a satisfactory improvement, a careful and detailed survey of the river is required, with full information as regards the slope and character of the bed, the velocity of the current, and discharge of the stream at different points, and the volume of water brought into it by its tributaries.

With regard to the character of the dams required, it is essential to bear in mind that the soft unstable character of the bottom forbids the use of any constructions capable of offering any essential resistance to the force of the current.

The truth of this assertion has been clearly demonstrated by the fate of all works of such a character as have been constructed on the river. They are speedily undermined and carried away, or else torn up by the rising of the ice in the spring. Any works constructed should be of such a character as to offer no great resistance to the flow of the current, but so arranged as to catch the drifting sand, and thus gradually build up an obstacle which the stream cannot destroy, yet of sufficient strength to deflect the current. From the very nature of such an obstacle, any damages resulting from the degrading action of the current would be at once repaired by the same causes which first formed it. Experience has demonstrated that brush is the best and cheapest material for attaining this end. Many different ways of arranging a brush dam suggest themselves, but the best method, in any particular instance, is entirely a matter of experiment. No general plan could be made applicable to every locality. The same general features would obtain in every instance, however. The brush, in whatever manner disposed, should be weighted down with stone, or secured by pickets, to prevent its being carried off by the current before the sand has had time to accumulate in and around it. It will probably be found feasible to hasten the speedy deposition of sand by stirring the bed of the stream above the dam with shovels or rakes, and thus set in motion a large body of sand, which will be caught by the brush and deposited on the dam. The same method, on a larger scale, would probably improve many bars. In this case, a large rake, or harrow-shaped instrument, could be suspended by proper appliances over the stern of a scow, or small steamboat, and dragged over the spot which it was desirable to deepen. The sand would thus be set in motion and speedily carried away by the current. The same result was formerly caused by the wheels of passing steamboats, and is still a matter of daily occurrence when rafts ground on a bar. In their efforts to get off, they loosen a large amount of sand which is at once carried off, and from a few inches the depth of the channel is speedily increased to two or three feet. I have given here the ideas which struck me most forcibly in the course of my examination, and they are, I think, sufficient to warrant the assertion that the improvement of this fine river is perfectly feasible, at small cost, and by simple means. A more careful and extended consideration would develop the precise measures required to attain this most desirable end. The subject is one of vital importance to the large agricultural population along its banks, for the railroads are not of sufficient capacity to carry off the products of their land, and the small cost of water as compared with railroad transportation is an item of no small consideration. The means which have been suggested for rendering this river navigable are chiefly interesting on account of their very small cost. All the materials required are to be found near the places where they will be required. The banks of the stream are thickly wooded and will furnish all the brush required, while rocky bluffs, which crop out along the river at intervals of every few miles, will afford unlimited quantities of stone.

It should be remarked here that one great obstacle to the navigation of our western rivers will not give much trouble here. The Wisconsin river is remarkably free from snags. The effect of brush wing-dams on the river can be seen at Portage, where several sloughs were closed in this manner about eight or ten years ago. These sloughs are now dry during low water, the mouth of each being closed by a sand bar, the top of which is level with the surface of the islands between which it was built. The dams themselves are completely buried under the sand. The slope of these bars on the side nearest the river is quite abrupt, but on the further side it has a very gradual slope, extending nearly the whole length of the slough. These dams were built to increase the volume of water flowing past the mouth of the canal, and were quite successful. The depth was increased from about 3 feet to 5 and 6 feet, and this without using the whole volume of water, as about one-third of it flows off through a slough, which heads up near the bridge. There is also a very slight brush dam at Upper Sauk, which was built to deepen the water under the bridge. This slight dam has stood for five or six years, although the bridge itself has been carried away by the ice, (since rebuilt.) This dam, although unfavorably located, is fast filling up with sand, and a plat has been formed behind it where once was deep water. These are the only examples which can be brought forward, but the evidence they furnish appears conclusive as to the efficiency of these constructions. I will now proceed to give such a general description of the character of the stream from Portage City to Prairie du Chien, as I was able to note down during my examination. Between Portage and Dekorra the river runs in several channels. In front of Portage it is deep, with a strong current. The depth will average 5 feet. It varies from $3\frac{1}{2}$ feet to 8 feet and over. Half a mile above the mouth of Baraboo river there is a large plat. The channel through it is crooked, and will average 3 feet in depth. Baraboo river at its mouth is about 100 feet wide and $3\frac{1}{2}$ feet deep. Below Baraboo river there is deep water to Dekorra. The depth varies from 4 feet to 8 feet; 6 feet being the average. The sloughs all end above Dekorra, where the river flows in one channel, (cross-section No. 2.) The river banks from Portage to Baraboo river are low. Below this point, however, there is high ground on both banks. At Dekorra are high sandstone bluffs. Below Dekorra the stream runs for about a mile in one channel, and then spreads out through several sloughs. High bluffs are near the river on the south side, and high ground on the north side.

Rock bluffs border the river at points respectively, one, two, and five miles below Dekorra.

The depth of water below Dekorra averages 5 feet for the first two miles, then 4 feet for two miles more, then 8 feet and 9 feet for one mile, then for four miles, $5\frac{1}{2}$ feet and 6 feet; for three-fourths of a mile, 3 feet; and for one and one-half mile, 6 feet and 7 feet, which brings us to the town of Merrimac. The channel is generally quite straight, but it is frequently necessary to cross from one deep pocket to another, and on these occasions a bar is always met with. At Merrimac ferry the different channels come together, and the river is very wide and shallow. (Cross-section No. 3.)

From Merrimac to Sauk City there are but few islands. The river bed is wide, and there are frequent bars. The high ground generally comes to the water's edge, or near it, on both banks of the stream. In some places there are low bluffs along the bank. Water, for two miles below Merrimac, $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet deep; one mile, 6 feet to 7 feet under the bluffs on the left bank; one mile, 4 feet deep. After crossing to the bluffs on the right bank 7 feet and over is found for two miles. Then, in crossing the flats to the left bank, from $3\frac{1}{2}$ feet to 4 feet. Crossing again to the right bank I found 6 feet and over for one and a half mile. Then for half a mile, to Upper Sauk, or Prairie du Sac, $3\frac{1}{2}$ feet to 4 feet. Under the bridge at Upper Sauk, 3 feet; then for three-fourths of a mile about 6 feet; and for one-fourth of a mile, to Sauk City, from 3 feet to 4 feet. Deep water under Sauk City bridge. On the north bank, behind Sauk City, is a large prairie; on the south side, bluffs. Below Sauk are a good many islands, which separate the river into several channels. The water is quite deep for about four miles—from 5 feet to 6 feet, and over. Then begin the Honey Creek flats, which are the worst on the river. Here, for about three-fourths of a mile, there is $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet of water. Then, in crossing to the right bank, there is a bar one-fourth of a mile wide, with 3 feet of water. Just above the mouth of the creek the water is very deep—7 feet and 8 feet. At the mouth of the creek, 4 feet; below the creek deep water again—7 feet and 8 feet. Below these flats there is about $5\frac{1}{2}$ feet for five miles; then $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet for one-half mile; after that $6\frac{1}{2}$ feet till abreast of Arena. The Hayworth flats extend from two miles below Arena to within a mile and a half of the upper railroad bridge. The water is quite shallow, and there are many sloughs and islands. Below Arena we had, for one mile, $6\frac{1}{2}$ feet; one-half mile, 4 feet; one-fourth of a mile, 7 feet; then, to within a mile of the first railroad bridge, $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet, on an average; then, for three-fourths of a mile, 3 feet; then one-fourth of a mile, under the bridge, and about 500 feet below, 5 feet; then, for one fourth of a mile, $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet; then to Helena, 5 feet. In front of this town there are bad flats. The river is quite wide. (Cross-section No. 5.)

From two miles above Honey creek to the first railroad bridge the bluffs are on the north bank; but beyond the bridge they are found on the south bank of the stream, and continue there until the second railroad bridge is reached. From Helena to the second railroad bridge the river is wide, and spreads itself out over a good deal of country. The islands are, as a general rule, much larger than those higher up the stream. On one or the other side of the river is a large prairie four or five miles wide. Back of this prairie are high bluffs. In two or three places on the left bank the bluffs come down to the river. For three and a half miles below Helena there is from 5 feet to $5\frac{1}{2}$ feet; then for half a mile, 4 feet; for two miles, 5 feet. In Steamboat slough, three-fourths of a mile long, 7 feet to 9 feet; thence to Lone Rock ferry, one mile, $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet to 5 feet. Through Cave Rock slough, below the ferry, $6\frac{1}{2}$ to 7 feet for two miles; then $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet for half a mile; then 6 feet for one-fourth of a mile. Under the bridge there is a depth of over 10 feet. (Cross-section No. 6.)

From the second railroad bridge to Orion or Richmond the river is quite wide and spreads out into many channels. There are, however, several bad places where there are no islands. For two and a half miles below the bridge, $5\frac{1}{2}$ feet; then for half a mile, 4 feet; then for one and a quarter mile, 5 feet to 6 feet; thence to just below Richland City, about a quarter of a mile, $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet; then for one and a half mile, 7 feet and 8 feet; then for one quarter of a mile, $3\frac{1}{2}$ feet; then for four and a quarter miles, 5 feet and 6 feet to Orion. The bars met with in this portion of the river were generally short, with $2\frac{1}{2}$ feet to 3 feet depth of water. The river at Orion is quite wide. (Cross-section No. 7.)

From Orion to Port Andrew the river is quite wide, with many islands and sloughs. There is one bad flat, about half a mile long, one and a half mile above Port Andrew; bluffs on north bank. Below Orion, for one mile, from 6 feet to 7 feet of water; then one mile, varying from $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet to 10 feet; for half a mile, $5\frac{1}{2}$ feet; for half a mile, 4 feet; for one and a half mile, from $5\frac{1}{2}$ feet to 6 feet; for a quarter of a mile, $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet; for one and a half mile, $5\frac{1}{2}$ feet; for a quarter of a mile, $3\frac{1}{2}$ feet; then for one and a quarter mile to Port Andrew, $5\frac{1}{2}$ feet. (Cross-section No. 8.)

From Port Andrew to Manhattan the river is wide, with a good many islands. The water is generally quite deep. Bluffs still on north side. For two miles below Port Andrew there is from 7 feet to 10 feet of water; then for one mile from 5 feet to 6 feet; then for a quarter of a mile, 4 feet; for three-quarters of a mile, from 6 feet to 7 feet. From Prairie du Bay to mouth of Knapp's creek, a quarter of a mile, 3 feet; then for one and a half mile, 6 feet, and over, to Manhattan, where the ferry (cross-section No. 9) leading to Boscobel crosses.

Below this point the water is generally quite deep. The river is wide and filled with islands. It receives in this portion several quite large tributaries. There is a large flat at the mouth of Green river, and another at the mouth of the Kickapoo. This latter stream is the largest affluent of the Wisconsin below Portage; it is about 150 feet wide near its mouth, with a pretty uniform depth of 4 feet; the bottom is of clay.

The Prairie du Bay ends near the third railroad bridge, and the Wisconsin valley from here to the mouth is much narrower, with high hills on both banks. For a mile below Manhattan the water varies in depth from $5\frac{1}{2}$ feet to 11 feet; then for a quarter of a mile, from 7 feet to 9 feet; for half a mile, 4 feet; for two miles, from 5 feet to 6 feet; for half a mile, $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet; for three-quarters of a mile above and a quarter of a mile below the third railroad bridge, from 7 feet to 9 feet; then for two and a half miles, 5 feet. The flat at Green river is a quarter of a mile wide, with a depth of water of 3 feet; then for two miles to the mouth of the Kickapoo river there is 5 feet. From the Kickapoo river to Bridgeport there are fewer islands, and the river is wide and deep. High ground on both banks.

For one mile below the Kickapoo there is a depth of $7\frac{1}{2}$ feet; then for one and a half mile, 6 feet to 7 feet; for half a mile, 5 feet; for one mile, 7 feet to 9 feet; for three and a half miles, $5\frac{1}{2}$ feet to 6 feet; for one and a half mile, 3 feet to 5 feet; for half a mile, 5 feet to $5\frac{1}{2}$ feet; then for half a mile to Bridgeport, from 7 feet to 10 feet.

Below Bridgeport there is generally very good water. The sloughs are small, most of the water running in one channel. There are several wide flats, which are quite shoal, but there is always a deep channel through them. Near the mouth of the river the water spreads out a good deal. A large sand-bar at the mouth stretches about half-way across the Mississippi. The Wisconsin bluffs end about one mile from the mouth, and the river then flows through low prairie land. The great width of the river at its mouth, and the consequent shallowness of the stream, will make it very difficult to get boats from the Wisconsin into the Mississippi, and vice versa.

For one mile below Bridgeport the water was from 5 feet to 7 feet deep, then for three-fourths of a mile from 5 feet to 6 feet, for one mile from 7 feet to 9 feet, for two and a half miles 3 feet to 5 feet, for one-quarter of a mile 4 feet to $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet, across the bar and into the Mississippi.

This depth was found on the bar, but the channel a steamboat would have to follow did not have more than 3 feet.

For the thorough survey of the Wisconsin river, I would respectfully recommend the formation of the following parties: Three transit parties, one main line level party, one cross-section level party, one sounding or hydrographical party, and two extra boats' crews. The survey would probably occupy about two months, and the same parties will have time to make such special surveys as may be required on the Fox. All that will be necessary on the latter stream will be to correct the level notes from Portage to Montello.

For the expenses of these parties I submit the following estimate:

Each transit party will require—

1 transit man	$125 00 per month.
2 chainmen at $2 per day	120 00 per month.
2 flagmen at $2 per day	120 00 per month.
2 axemen at $2 per day	120 00 per month.
Total for one party	485 00 per month.

Main line level party will require—

1 leveller	$125 00 per month.
1 rodman at $2 50 per day	75 00 per month.
1 axeman at $2 per day	60 00 per month.
Total	260 00 per month.

Cross-section level party will require—

1 leveller	$125 00 per month.
1 rodman at $2 50 per day	75 00 per month.
2 axemen at $2 per day	120 00 per month.
2 chainmen at $2 per day	120 00 per month.
Total	440 00 per month.

Sounding party will require—

1 chief	$125 00 per month.
1 sounding man at $2 per day	60 00 per month.

2 oarsmen at $2 per day	$120 00 per month.
1 cockswain at $2 per day,	60 00 per month.
Total	365 00 per month.

Each extra boat's crew will require—

2 oarsmen at $2 per day	$120 00 per month.
1 cockswain at $2 per day	60 00 per month.
Total	180 00 per month.

There will be required in addition—

2 cooks at $2 per day	$150 00 per month.
12 water-gauge men at $10 per month	120. 00 per month.
Total for supernumeraries	270 00 per month.

RECAPITULATION.

3 transit parties	$1, 455 00 per month.
1 main line level party	260 00 per month.
1 cross-section level party	440 00 per month.
1 sounding party	365 00 per month.
2 extra boats' crews	360 00 per month.
Supernumeraries	270 00 per month.
Board for 43 men at 75 cents per day	967 50 per month.
Total	4, 117 50 per month.

Expenses for entire period of survey.

Expenses of parties for two months	$8, 235 00
Three boats and equipments	210 00
Tents and cooking utensils	1, 555 00
Contingencies, necessary delays, &c.	5, 000 00

Respectfully submitted :

CHARLES R. SUTER,

Brevet Major U. S. A., Captain U. S. Engineers.

NEW YORK, January 2, 1867.

Brevet Major General G. K. WARREN, U. S. A.,

Major of Engineers, in charge survey of Upper Mississippi and its tributaries.

A.

At a meeting of the directors of the Green Bay and Mississippi Canal Company, held at Portage City, September 26, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted, to wit :

Resolved, That Mr. Edwards, the engineer, is hereby directed to give all the aid in his power to hasten the survey of the Fox and Wisconsin rivers directed by the resolution of Congress, and that he be authorized to employ such assis ants as he may deem necessary to help him in such duty or in the performance of his duty to the company while thus engaged.

Resolved, That we tender to the officers of government engaged in the survey of the Fox and Wisconsin rivers all of our maps and surveys, and the assistance of any of the agents of the company whom they may wish to employ.

AUG. LEDYARD SMITH,

OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF WISCONSIN,

IN FAVOR OF

An increase of the duty on wool.

FEBRUARY 8, 1867.—Ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

STATE OF WISCONSIN, Secretary's Office, ss:

The secretary of state of the State of Wisconsin hereby certifies that the annexed has been compared with the original resolution deposited in this office, and that the same is a true and correct copy thereof, and of the whole of such original.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State, at the capitol, in Madison, this 2d day of February, A. D. 1867.

THOS. S. ALLEN,
Secretary of State.

Whereas it is the highest evidence of the prosperity of a nation that its articles of consumption are furnished by its subjects, as well the raw materials as its manufactured articles; and whereas the wool-growing interest is one of vast importance to us as a people, both State and national, and should receive at the hands of our government suitable encouragement and protection: Therefore,

Resolved by the senate, (the assembly concurring,) That our senators are instructed, and our representatives in Congress are hereby requested, to favor such legislation as will secure to the wool-growing interest protection equal to ten cents per pound, and ten per cent. ad valorem.

Resolved, That the governor is hereby requested to forward a copy of the foregoing preamble and resolution to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

ANGUS CAMERON,
Speaker of the Assembly.
WYMAN SPOONER,
President of the Senate.

Approved February 1, 1867.

LUCIUS FAIRCHILD,
Governor.

OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF WISCONSIN,

IN FAVOR OF

A new treaty between the general government and the Stockbridge Indians residing in that State, providing for their removal to a more genial climate and fertile soil.

FEBRUARY 8, 1867.—Ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

STATE OF WISCONSIN, Secretary's Office, ss :

The secretary of state of the State of Wisconsin hereby certifies that the annexed has been compared with the original resolution deposited in this office, and that the same is a true and correct copy thereof, and of the whole of such original.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State, at the capitol in Madison, this 4th day of February, A. D. 1867.

[SEAL.]

THOMAS S. ALLEN,
Secretary of State.

Whereas the tribe of Indians known as the Stockbridges, now residing on the Stockbridge reservation, in the county of Shawano, in the State of Wisconsin, as appears by the last report made by the Indian agent in and for the Green Bay agency to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, are less favorably situated than either of the other tribes of the said agency, on account of the sterility of the soil occupied and cultivated by them, together with the coldness of the seasons, and the frequency of frosts, which make it difficult for them to procure a living by farming; and whereas said tribe has been long friendly with the whites, are an industrious, intelligent, temperate, and frugal people, willing to labor for their own support, and having children who exhibit willingness and capacity to learn; and whereas said tribe has petitioned the general government, through the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, for a new treaty providing for their removal to a more genial climate and fertile soil, which removal has been recommended by said Commissioner as necessary for the improvement, comfort, and happiness of said tribe: Therefore,

Resolved by the assembly, (the senate concurring,) That our senators and representatives in Congress be, and they are hereby, requested to aid in securing a new treaty between the general government and the said tribe, in accordance with the terms of their petition now on file in the Department of the Interior, and with the recommendation of said Commissioner.

Resolved, That the governor be requested to forward to each of our senators and representatives in Congress a copy of the foregoing preamble and resolutions.

JOHN R. BOLLES AND OTHERS.

REMONSTRATING

Against the acceptance of League island as a naval station.

FEBRUARY 9, 1867.—Ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

In his letter to the naval committees of Congress, March 25, 1862, the Secretary of the Navy called attention to the necessity of establishing a navy yard for iron-clad vessels. He said :

“The navy as it at present exists cannot successfully contend against a power employing iron-clad vessels, and consequently cannot meet the requirements of the country. I deem it imperative that we should forthwith commence the construction of armored vessels on a scale commensurate with the great interests at stake.”

Again, on the 9th of June he repeated his suggestions, and recommended the establishment of “a yard adapted to the radical changes introduced into naval architecture,” &c.

An offer was then made by the city of Philadelphia of League island to the government for the purpose named, and Congress passed the following act :

“Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized to receive and accept from the city authorities of the city of Philadelphia the title to League island, in the Delaware river, together with the marsh east of and adjacent thereto, within the first ward of the said city of Philadelphia, together with all riparian rights and privileges thereunto belonging and appertaining, to be used for naval purposes by the government of the United States : Provided, That said title shall not be accepted and received unless the same shall be perfect and indefeasible to the whole island and marsh adjacent to low-water mark ; nor if, upon more thorough examination and survey of the premises by a competent board of officers to be by him appointed, he shall discover that the public interests will not be promoted by acquiring the title as aforesaid.

“SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the board of officers to be appointed by the Secretary of the Navy, according to the provisions of the first section of this act, shall, before proceeding to any decision of the questions hereinbefore referred to them, make a survey and examination of the harbor of New London, Connecticut, and its surroundings, with reference to its capacity and fitness for a naval depot and navy yard ; and whether the public interests will not be promoted by establishing a naval depot and navy yard in or near said harbor of New London instead of League island ; and that they also make the same investigation in regard to the waters of Narraganset bay.

“Approved July 15, 1862.”

Under this act the Secretary of the Navy appointed a board of officers to make the requisite examinations and to report the comparative advantages of the different sites for the object contemplated. The board consisted of Admiral S. H. Stringham, of New York; Professor A. D. Bache, of Philadelphia; Commodore W. H. Gardner, of Philadelphia; Captain Marston, of Philadelphia; Commodore C. J. Van Brunt, of New Jersey; United States Engineer W. P. S. Sanger, of Washington city.

On the 19th day of August, 1862, this board met, and were, as the secretary says, in his next annual report, "for more than two months assiduously engaged upon the duty assigned them." On the 24th of October they made report against League island and in favor of New London. (Ex. Doc., No. 9, Senate, 37th Congress, 3d session.) Among their reasons for rejecting League island, the board named its distance from the sea, "on a river the navigation of which is often tedious and difficult for vessels of large class, especially in winter, when obstructed by ice," giving greatly, in this respect, the preference to New London, which harbor, they said, "has a fine, clear entrance from the ocean, accessible at all times and at all seasons; from it vessels of any class can proceed to sea with almost any wind, and be clear of land in a few hours."

Again, of League island they said, "the drift of ice from the river above often renders the position of vessels insecure and dangerous," and that "upon the breaking up of the ice on the Horseshoe, where all admit that it accumulates, it must be thrown with great violence towards League island, to the great detriment and danger of all vessels lying in the vicinity," while "the harbor of New London is well protected from violent winds and sea, and is not obstructed by ice; vessels of any size may anchor there with perfect safety at all times."

This board also reported that "League island is a reclaimed marsh, and the borings made by the board show that there is a depth of mud and fine sand varying from twenty-five to fifty-six feet in depth." But that "the site at Winthrop's Point is well adapted to the construction of docks and all the various buildings required at a navy yard. The cove above the point is admirably suited for the construction of docks and basins. Such works, located in that position, would require but little excavation, and it is believed that secure foundations could be found without resorting to the tedious and expensive process of piling. The soil is gravel and stone, which afford the best and most substantial foundations for most of the buildings required at a navy yard." And they add: "It is undoubtedly true that no heavy structures can be erected on this (League) island with any probability of safety, without resorting to the expensive operation of piling."

And the board further said: "League island is a reclaimed marsh, surrounded by a dry stone wall and embankment of earth, raised to exclude the river. A portion of the island was reclaimed many years since, and it is known as the old meadow; we have no positive information on this point, but presume that at the time the wall and embankment were built all the land worth reclaiming was embraced within the enclosure; subsequently, and about eighteen years since, as we are informed, the enclosure was extended so as to embrace an additional area, now known as the new meadow. According to a plan which has been submitted to the board by a committee from the Board of Trade, this old meadow contains two hundred and nineteen acres, and the new meadow one hundred and fifty-five acres. On the north of the island, and between it and the main, there is a channel which, we are told, was of sufficient depth in former days to float large ships-of-war; now it is a narrow and shallow channel, not sufficient to float vessels of any size used by the navy. Large areas of marshes have formed on the east and west ends and on the north side of the island, and the whole appearance indicates a constant and rapid accumulation from the immense deposits of Delaware river. To raise the surface of this island to a height which would render it safe from the encroachment of high tides, will require a filling of from nine to ten feet over the whole area; and if, as has been suggested, a line of wharf front be carried out to the twenty-three feet line, it will involve an additional filling of a space one mile long, and averaging four hundred and eighty-one feet wide and nineteen feet deep. If this space is not filled, then the constant use of dredging machines will be required to maintain a sufficient depth of water to accommodate the vessels of the navy. To furnish the materials for this immense filling, which will amount in the aggregate to several millions of cubic yards, it is said that an abundant supply can be had from Red Bank, on the opposite side of the river, and from the gravel banks near the gas-works. There is probably an abundance of good material on the shores of New Jersey, but it must be purchased from the proprietors and transported across the river."

Whereas, of the site offered to the government on the Thames river, they said: "The land at Winthrop's Point, in the harbor of New London, is at a moderate elevation above the level which would be assumed as a proper height for the surface of a navy yard above ordinary high water, and would require grading. The excavation for the Norwich railroad, in the rear of this point, shows that it is free of ledge and is a gravel of excellent quality and easy to be removed. This bank can be graded at a very moderate cost, and will furnish the best of material for filling low places, and extending the surface of the yard over such portions of the cove above as may be required for occupation by docks and basins, thus accomplishing two objects at the same time. Other portions of the site will furnish abundance of stone of excellent quality for the construction of rough walls and foundations for the various buildings."

Concerning the healthfulness of the two localities, the board remarked:

"No question can be raised as to the superior excellence of the health enjoyed by the residents of New London. League island is situated on a fresh-water river, nearly surrounded by marshes covered with vegetable matter and exposed to the sun at every low tide during the day."

And again: "Persons working in a yard upon League island would be compelled to reside at a distance from their work, there being no houses in the vicinity or sites suitable for the erection of habitations."

"In view of the many advantages possessed by the harbor of New London over League island," they concluded their report by the passage of the following resolutions:

"Resolved, That, in the opinion of the board, the public interest will not be promoted by acquiring the title to League island for naval purposes.

"Resolved, That the harbor of New London possesses greater advantages for a navy yard and naval depot than any other location examined by this board."

No definite action having been taken by Congress on the report of this board, the House Committee on Naval Affairs were charged by resolution, January 7, 1864, "to inquire into and report upon the expediency of the establishment of a new yard for the construction, docking, and repair of iron, iron-clad, and other vessels, and the proper site for its location." That committee, after, as they said in their report, "a very careful and thorough consideration of the whole subject, extending over a period of some four months," after "a personal inspection of nearly all the proposed sites and a hearing of the facts and arguments presented by the friends of each," came to the conclusion "that the site upon the Thames, near New London, Connecticut, combines in a greater degree than any other the essential advantages and conditions for such an establishment, and is free from the objections obtaining at other places." Of the report of the board of officers in favor of New London and against League island this committee said:

"This report, proceeding from officers of such undoubted character and eminence in their respective professions, seemed to your committee to be entitled to very great weight and consideration.

"Nevertheless, the committee felt they would not properly have discharged the duty assigned them by adopting the conclusions of any commission, however competent, without a careful investigation and examination for themselves both of the evidence and arguments applicable to the subject.

"The result of this examination has led the committee to the same conclusion reached by the board of officers appointed by the Secretary of the Navy."

This committee reported that "the whole surface of the island is from three to four feet below the surface of the river at ordinary high water, and but for the wall around it would be under water at each recurring tide."

After referring to the objections stated by the Secretary of the Navy in his annual report of 1862, in which he says of League island, "The objections to it are its low, alluvial soil; the cost of raising it to a proper grade; the depth it will be necessary to penetrate before reaching safe bottom, and the cost of piling, on which to erect superstructures. These are weighty objections, and it will require no inconsiderable expenditure to overcome them. In addition to those above enumerated, is the fact that the navigation of the Delaware river is sometimes obstructed by ice, and injury is sometimes caused by floating ice;" and after referring also to "the opinion of competent engineers that the time requisite for the completion at this locality of a yard such as is contemplated would be from eight to ten years," the committee add:

"Another disadvantage is its distance from the ocean. The object aimed at is a yard for the repair and construction of iron-clad vessels and laying them up in ordinary when not in service. But experience has demonstrated that the monitor and iron-clad class of vessels, of all others, most need a clear harbor and a wide and unobstructed channel. Of all types of vessels they have the feeblest powers of locomotion. They mind the helm with difficulty, and are least manageable in narrow sea room, or in stress of weather. Their great bulk, their novel construction, their absence of sails on which to rely, and of space for the crew to work in, render them peculiarly unmanageable except in plain sailing, and under favorable conditions. The committee do not find that these conditions exist anywhere in the Delaware river, and particularly not in the vicinity of League island. It is nearly one hundred miles from the ocean, up one of the most tortuous and difficult streams to navigate in the United States. An examination of the chart of the coast survey shows the channel everywhere narrow and intricate—to be in many places obstructed by bars and shoals from the capes to the city of Philadelphia."

Of the objection on account of the inadequate depth of water in the Delaware river, said the committee, "This is very obvious upon a careful examination of the soundings, as indicated by the charts prepared by the coast survey. Opposite Hog island, and just below League island, the channel is very narrow, and shoals to a depth of but eighteen feet at its deepest point at mean low tide. No vessel drawing more than eighteen feet can pass this point without waiting for a rise of tide. Near Cherry flats, and opposite Wilmington, the channel draws but nineteen and a half feet. Below Newcastle, and in the neighborhood of the Pea Patch islands, the channel has shifted from the east to the west side of the island, and in as many as three places shoals to nineteen and a half feet. Twenty-five to thirty miles below Newcastle it again shoals to twenty-one feet. * *

"In this connection, the statement of one of the first naval constructors of the government, Mr. Delano, of the Brooklyn yard, was laid before us: 'That it was indispensable, to make any naval station first class, to have a depth of at least twenty-five feet of water at low tide.'

"Your committee cannot believe it consistent with a prudent regard to the future efficiency of the navy to establish for all time the great naval yard and depot of the country at a point to which vessels of a greater draught than eighteen feet cannot get, and from which they could not get to sea except in certain stages of the tide. And the nation might find reason to regret the acceptance of the 'munificent gift' in case a fleet chased by a superior force of the enemy should be unable to reach its rendezvous in the Delaware, or to put to sea from thence at short notice when its presence might be necessary at any other point threatened."

The importance of this view taken by the committee cannot but be apparent, especially when we remember that within the last three years the English nation has built six iron-clad vessels drawing twenty-six feet and over, and the present French navy has at least sixteen iron and iron-clad vessels whose mean draught is twenty-five and twenty-six feet. To put the great iron navy-yard of the country where at some stages of the tide only eighteen feet of water is to be had, is, in our judgment, to disregard the plainest requirements of the naval service and to preclude the United States from being a first-class naval power.

And the same committee gave the following conclusive testimony against League island, on account of ice in the Delaware river, and particularly as it is borne by the currents and tides along the shore of the island itself. They said in their report:

"In addition to the objections already considered is the damage and obstruction to navigation occasioned by ice, fast and floating, in the winter season, which, according to statements submitted to the committee, is a very formidable if not insuperable objection to the Delaware. The evidence upon this point comes from such a variety of sources, and upon authority so reliable, that it can hardly be discredited. It is very strongly stated by the commission appointed by the Secretary. The officers of the Atlantic Insurance Company, New York, state that 'the premium on risks to Philadelphia is increased during the winter months one hundred per cent. solely in consequence of the increased damage from ice in the Delaware.' Admiral Gregory testifies to having nearly lost the frigate Raritan there from that cause. And proof was submitted showing that the local offices at Philadelphia excepted the ice risk in their ordinary policies, sometimes declined to take it entirely, and always charged an extra premium for assuming it. A long list of vessels was also submitted from the marine offices of Philadelphia which had been cut through or destroyed by ice in the Delaware bay and river within the past few years. And while the committee were investigating this subject, the United States gunboat Galena, ordered to join Admiral Farragut's fleet, in getting to sea from Philadelphia, was so badly injured by the ice that she was towed to Baltimore, where she was detained a month for repairs, which cost the government several thousand dollars, and her voyage broken up at a time when her services were greatly needed by the country. It was also shown that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company had caused a survey to be made of League island, with a view to adopting it as their depot for coal, and that it was finally abandoned, after a report of their engineer, Strickland Kneass, an extract from which the committee herewith submit as of very high authority:

"I trust that it may not be considered as overstepping the limits of the question intrusted to me, if a few remarks bearing upon the navigation of the river during the winter season be presented as a point of great moment in comparing the sites at League island with the Point House, and those immediately above it.

"You will perceive that the face of League island is subjected to the full force of the flood tide from the long reach in the river, extending southwestwardly, the effect of which has been, as represented by the statements of those most familiar with our river, and its winds, currents, and bars, to pile up the drifting ice upon the entire island shore-line; and, indeed, I have before me evidence to the effect that in all times of obstruction by ice, vessels can be brought with much less difficulty through the Horseshoe channel than to League island. It may be stated that an ice-guard could be constructed that would relieve the front from the drifting ice of the flood tide, but the effect of such breakwater would be to cause deposits within the surface affected, thus subjecting you to a continued and heavy expenditure for dredging.”

“Senator Riddle, in his statement before the committee in favor of Newcastle, said, as of his own personal knowledge, “that the Delaware was frequently frozen from Chester up to Philadelphia; that he himself had driven over it in a sleigh, and seen transportation carried by teams from one shore to the other;” and that “at the breaking up of the ice at the Horseshoe it was grounded upon the bar off League island, until by the force of the current it was carried violently upon the shore, and sometimes completely over the high wall which surrounds the island.”

Of the objection to League island on account of its unhealthiness, the same committee reported :

“The healthfulness of the site to be adopted becomes a very important consideration in view of the fact that some three or four thousand workmen would be employed at a first-class naval establishment, besides the officers and crews of vessels constantly going into or out of commission; and it can hardly be probable that an island surrounded by marshes, exposing to the sun their alluvial and vegetable deposits at every low tide, can be a healthful locality.

“Between League island and the settled portion of Philadelphia there intervenes for some two or three miles a similar low marshy formation, lower than the river and protected from it by dykes, with large ditches to drain the surface water, which localities are ordinarily liable to the prevalence of fever and ague, typhus, and other classes of diseases, and should they prevail here, would not only impair the efficiency of the yard, but would very materially affect the net economy of its labor, while the time lost to laborers in going to and from the city, a distance of from three to five miles, together with the cost of their transportation, would necessarily increase the cost of labor, and at the expense of the government.

“These objections would seem to outweigh any advantages, real or supposed, which may be claimed for this locality, and would, if there were no other proposed site, render the question of its adoption one of very doubtful propriety.”

And these views are confirmed by the testimony of residents near the island, that fever and ague are prevalent there; and of Commodore Stribling, late commandant of the navy yard at Philadelphia, who, in his protest against the removal of the present yard to League island, said :

“League island is a mud-flat, and whenever buildings are erected will require piling to the solid foundation, varying from thirty to fifty feet. * * * The island is surrounded by low marshy land, and is subject to intermittent fever in the fall of the year, which would destroy its efficiency at that season of the year by sickness of employes,” &c.

And the chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, states as one of the objections to League island, “the character of the land between it and the solid part of the city, being a distance of two or more miles, where the land is low and wet, and not suitable for the erection of habitations for workmen.”

The Real Estate Railroad and Business Men’s Guide, a paper published in Philadelphia, says, January 15, 1866, of League island, “from the surrounding miasma,” that it is “not fit for the habitation of human beings.”

But the committee reported of New London, and all concurrent testimony proves the fact that—

“Owing to the geological formation of this region and the absence of marshes and alluvial deposits, the healthfulness of this site is unquestioned, and even remarkable.

“The banks of the Thames are above the level of the river, and the adjacent land free from stagnant and surface water. At the site the shore slopes back at a moderate elevation sufficient to insure drainage, and to be, in the judgment of the government engineer, well adapted for the purposes proposed. The vicinity to the waters of Long Island sound tempers the heats of the summer months. It was the testimony of all the members of the 'commission' which examined it, 'that there was probably not a healthier place in the United States than New London, or one where more comfort is found.'

"Indeed, so remarkably salubrious is 'the whole region between the Connecticut river and Narraganset bay,' that it has been pronounced by the celebrated traveller, the Baron Von Humboldt, 'the healthiest in the world.'"

It is submitted to the Senate that for Congress to endanger the health of thousands of persons employed in the public service by locating a navy yard at League island would be an act little less than criminal.

The defensibility of New London, it is believed, has never been questioned by any military authority, and by no one until it was proposed to locate a navy yard at League island. Generals Bernard and Totten spoke of it in their report, 1826, "as a port of easy access, having a great depth of water, never freezing, and being easily defended."

The "Board of Officers," appointed by the Secretary of the Navy in 1862, said: "The present defences of the harbor of New London are Forts Trumbull and Griswold; the first a strong fortress, built of granite in the most substantial manner, and the second an extensive earthwork on Groton heights, opposite the city of New London. From the entrance of the harbor from Long Island sound to the site deemed most suitable for a navy yard, there are on either side of the river numerous points upon which iron towers or turrets, armed with guns of the largest calibre, can be erected at a moderate cost, and so arranged as to render the entrance of hostile ships impossible, if forts and towers can be constructed of sufficient strength to resist the attack of ships of modern construction and armament. Brigadier General George W. Cullum, of the United States engineers, states, as his opinion, that 'no harbor in the United States is more susceptible of defence against the entrance of a fleet than New London.' * * * Besides, in the present state of naval warfare it is not to be supposed that any of our important naval stations or harbors will be left unprovided with powerful steam rams to effectually prevent the approach of transports or men-of-war with hostile troops designing to land upon our shores. * * *

"The board is of the opinion that either of the sites under examination may be promptly and efficiently defended, and that upon this question they may be regarded as equal."

The Committee on Naval Affairs, who examined and reported on this point in 1864, also said:

"The land on both sides at the extreme mouth of the harbor is high and bold, admirably adapted to earthwork and other batteries, and at some distance from the mouth are islands convenient for fortification. From these, at short range, could be concentrated such a fire from modern ordnance as would be destructive to any fleet. * * * And the committee had before them the opinions of such high authorities as Brigadier General Cullum, a distinguished engineer, who constructed the present defences there; also of Major General George B. McClellan, General Dix, and Colonel Gates, each of whom had examined the locality with particular reference to this question; and of a commission consisting of Generals Totten, Bernard, and McComb, confirming the views of the Board of Officers before referred to, that 'no harbor in the United States is more susceptible of defence than that of New London.'"

The relation of a navy yard at New London to the defence of the city and commerce of New York the Committee on Naval Affairs justly regarded as one of very great importance. And this part of the subject acquires new interest from the fact that it is proposed to widen and deepen the channel at Hurlgate, so that vessels of largest draught may reach and leave New York by that route, all of which must pass to sea through "the Race" near New London. The committee said in their report, 1864:

"The entrance to Long Island sound from the ocean is through the narrow channel or gateway called the 'Race.' This gateway is but four miles in width, divided midway by a rock or ledge called 'Valiant Rock.' The ship-channel entrance to the sound is, consequently, but two miles in width on each side of Valiant Rock. Through one or the other of these channels must pass every ship from the open ocean; through these passed the Great Eastern on her every trip; and through these came the Russian fleet on its late visit to our shores.

"New London, lying within a half-hour's steaming, is the natural key and strategic protection to this gateway, and it is the judgment of the highest military and naval authorities that a rendezvous of iron-clads, to put to sea at short notice, together with some slight fortifications at the 'Race' itself, would be a complete defence to the eastern approach to New York and the whole coast line of Connecticut. An enemy's fleet once within this gateway and safe in Long Island sound—a great man-of-war's harbor of itself—would not only have the best natural roadstead on this continent from which to sally forth to cut up our commerce and lay our cities under contribution, but would imperil the commercial metropolis of the country.

"Through Long Island sound is carried, by various means of transportation, the raw material to the New England spindles, much of which is returned in the manufactured articles to New York for domestic and foreign markets. So large has this commerce become, that more than fifty thousand vessels have passed New London light-boat off the mouth of the harbor in a single year, calling forth the memorable remark of Daniel Webster, 'that the importance of this Mediterranean of the Western Hemisphere would justify its being lighted up like a ball-room.'

"These have seemed very important considerations to your committee; and if, by the selection of a site which unites so many essential advantages of its own, commercial interests so vast and so extended also derive incidental protection, the establishment of the proposed yard at this point would appear to raise the question to one of national importance and necessity even beyond its immediate use as a naval depot."

It is unnecessary to discuss the question of salt and fresh water, and their comparative effects on iron vessels, as fresh water can be had in the amplest manner at New London. The preference, however, of salt or brackish water for the purpose of docking and seasoning timber is admitted, and it is the usual custom to pack vessels with salt during the process of building in fresh-water yards. The following letter from Mr. Donald McKay so well illustrates this and other parts of the case, that it is given entire:

"BOSTON, MASS., December 16, 1863.

"In reply to your inquiry as to the quality of water best adapted for docking and seasoning ship-timber, &c., I will state what is the practice of the French government, whose dock-yards and arsenals I have lately visited, and who are in advance of every other nation in the application of scientific knowledge to naval matters. The stock of timber kept on hand in the French arsenals is very large and of the finest quality. At Toulon, alone, about 25,000 tons of the choicest oak timber is kept in salt water mixed with fresh, about half and half. The fresh water is brought into the enclosed docks from reservoirs in the adjacent mountains.

"The speedy decay of some of the boats built at private yards in England for the Crimean war was ascribed mainly to the fact that the timber used in their construction was not properly seasoned.

"The French government provides for emergencies and keeps a large quantity of ship-timber docked, seasoned, and ready for use.

"For solidity, tensile strength, and durability, the white-oak which grows abundantly in Connecticut is not excelled in the United States or the world. That which has been exported to England has received the highest praise from the British admiralty. To substantiate the durability and quality of our Connecticut and New England white-oak, I refer to Mr. Delano, naval constructor, New York, Mr. Hanscom at Boston, and Mr. Hanscom at Norfolk, and Samuel H. Polk, at Portsmouth, and to Admiral Joseph Smith, of Washington, also to William H. Webb, and Jacob Westerfield, ship-builders, New York.

"It was the usual practice of our own government until the commencement of this war, and which has proved to be most beneficial, to have all our timber docked in salt water for a number of years before putting it into sheds, and our ships built of this carefully selected material (well seasoned) have proved exceedingly durable. It is a well-known fact that New England built ships stand in our marine offices as well as at Lloyd's, London, for durability ahead of any other ships built in the United States, and we appeal to naval registers at our yards that economy in construction is strongly in favor of New England yards, and the further south we go the expense of construction increases. We have also a great advantage in mechanics, there being a plenty of them and of the best class.

"I wish also to say that, in my opinion, the site proposed for a navy yard on the river Thames, near New London, taking into account the capacity and excellence of the harbor, its freedom from ice, the great depth of its waters, the facility of access to it from every point, by land and sea, is a most desirable one for the purpose, whether it be for the construction or safe-keeping of iron, iron-clad, or wooden vessels. Could the present Napoleon affix it to the coast of France, by bartering away his hold on Mexico, and giving millions to boot, he would, I have no doubt, gladly do so, and make it the largest naval depot in the world.

"If we are going to compete with France and England for a sea-going iron-cased fleet, we must have vessels to draw from 24 to 26 feet of water at least. The naval ports of France and England are not limited in draft of water, and their docks are now being altered, and new ones constructed to receive these iron-cased vessels, which draw 25 to 27 feet.

"DONALD McKAY."

Another objection to League island, as stated by the board of officers, is that "the water of the Delaware is dirty, holding a large quantity of earthy matter in solution, which is deposited at various points along the river, as shown by the immense accumulation which has taken place within a few years at League island, and which is still in progress;" while at New London, they reported, "the water is clear, and there is nothing to be apprehended from deposits at this place after the lines of wharves have been established and the wharves constructed."

We have said that FRESH WATER can be had in the amplest manner at New London. The Committee on Naval Affairs, who made personal examination of the site in 1864, said in their report:

"The river Thames is fresh a short distance above the proposed yard, where its waters are sufficiently deep to float large ships, and only slightly brackish, as compared with sea-water, at the site itself. A river also empties into the Thames at Smith's cove, the upper end of the proposed site, from which by means of a reservoir, now covering more than one hundred acres, at an elevation of about one hundred feet, and within little more than a mile of the site, fresh water can be brought to and over every part of the yard, not only for supplying its ships and the various uses connected with such an establishment, but also for filling docks, to any extent, with fresh water, in which iron-clad vessels, if necessary, might be laid up when not in service. Another use of this water, which it may also be proper to mention, is, as constituting a power for the working of much of the machinery of the yard, and for boiler, fire, and other purposes."

But not only does the site at New London offer the amplest means for laying up iron-clad vessels in fresh water, but it also affords unrivalled facilities for lifting them out of water for preservation, and for building and repairing vessels in dry-docks and then floating them out instead of launching them in the usual way, as will appear by the following:

"At the upper end of the 'proposed site for a navy-yard,' and about seven miles from the mouth of the Thames, there is a cove into which a stream empties. By building a wall across this cove near where it enters the Thames river, an area of some one hundred acres of fresh water will be secured; and by reason of the high lands which surround it, this area of fresh water can be raised twenty-five feet, or more, above the level of the Thames.

"Into this cove or basin all our iron-clads can be floated by means of a lock, and there they can rest in water entirely fresh, undisturbed by winds or tide; or, if necessary to take them out of water for preservation, nature has here provided the means for doing so with the least possible labor or expense.

"From this elevated surface of water even the largest vessels can be made to pass into docks prepared for them in the sides of this basin, without the aid of expensive machinery, and without a strain, and the water can be drawn off at will. There our iron navy may be left high and dry, exposed neither to the action of the clear water without nor the bilge water within; and if kept painted may be preserved for an indefinite number of years; and should their services at any time be required, they can be floated out as easily as they came in, and at a few hours' notice be at sea. A similar arrangement can be made along the banks of the Thames river, and the water can be brought to fill these basins by means of a pipe from the stream referred to.

"The above plan has been submitted to the first engineers and ship-builders of the country, and meets their unanimous and unqualified approbation.

"Nor is it of less importance as affording means for building and repairing vessels in dry-docks and then floating them out."

The vast importance of these facilities to be had on the Thames river, the great saving both in time and expense to the government, cannot well be over-estimated, and attention is earnestly called to this part of the case as of very great moment. The following is from one of the first naval constructors in the United States.

"All iron-clads should be built in dry-docks when practicable, and then floated out rather than launched in the usual way, thereby saving great strain to the ship—which would not only be safe, but more economical both in time and expense. It saves all the great preparation and cost of launching, which is sometimes very large, and attended with great risk. The Roanoke was damaged in launching upwards of $100,000. In launching, some of the finest clipper ships have been damaged to the amount of $30,000 to $40,000; and recently we hear from England, at Millwall, in attempting to launch one of the large iron-clads, the vessel started and went some hundred feet and then stopped. We have not learned the consequences, but they must have been serious. I have seen the plan proposed at New London, on the Thames river, for building and repairing these vessels in dry-docks, and floating them out, and I have no hesitation in saying that thereby great delay, expense, and difficulty would be avoided. It affords equal advantages for taking iron vessels out of water for preservation."

The limited frontage of League island, as compared with the site offered to the government at New London, should be taken into consideration; for of what use is front when separated by hundreds of acres of marsh and shallow water from navigable parts of the river? At League island there is about one mile only of available water front. This is on the south side of the island, and between the "large areas of marshes which," say the board of officers, "have formed on the east and west ends," and which are still forming "from the immense deposits of the Delaware river." And may not these growing formations yet meet together and exclude from navigable waters what there is now of frontage to League island? That this is likely to be the case will be seen by reference to the report of Professor Bache, superintendent of the coast survey, for 1861, page 37.

Is this the place, we ask, to establish a navy yard? One mile of water front, with the prospect of losing that at some not far distant period, is all that can be claimed for League island. And for proof of this we refer to the coast survey chart, upon which the accumulations are noted. Whereas at New London, the State of Connecticut offers a water front of three miles on a river deep enough to float the largest vessels, which is never obstructed by ice; where "the water is clear and there is nothing to be apprehended from deposits, and where dredging is a thing almost unknown;" where secure foundations can be found without resorting to the tedious and expensive operation of piling, and where a stream is at hand not only for "filling docks to any extent with fresh water in which iron-clad vessels, if necessary, might be laid up when not in service," but also for lifting them out of water for preservation and for building and repairing them in dry-docks, and floating them out instead of launching them. At New London, a water front of three miles and all the land adjacent which may be required for a navy yard is offered to the United States as a gift.

By the proposition to remove the present navy yard from Philadelphia to League island is meant the establishment there of the great iron-clad navy yard of the country. So all the recommendations of the Secretary of the Navy, the legislation of Congress on the subject, and all the reports clearly show that that locality is entirely unfitted for the purpose. We believe, among others, for the following reasons:

1. That it has been rejected as unfit by every board and commission, which under the authority of Congress, has examined it. The board of officers appointed by the Secretary of the Navy reported, as we have seen in 1862, that "the public interest will not be promoted by acquiring title to League island for naval purposes." And the naval committee of the House, in 1864, "after a careful examination for themselves," as they said in their report, "came to the same conclusion."

2. The distinguished Chief of Bureau of Yards and Docks, Admiral Joseph Smith, after making a personal examination of the site, reported against League island in 1863, saying in his report, "some of the objections to which are of so serious a character as to be at once discovered by the most superficial observer."

3. Commodore Pendergrast, commandant at the navy yard at Philadelphia in 1862, most earnestly protested against its removal to League island. From his letter, addressed to members of Congress from that district, June 19, 1862, we give the following extract as testimony of great weight:

"When I last wrote to you I did so through an amanuensis. I am not much better now, but must again bring to your notice the interests of our navy yard. This new project of the mayor and city councils of moving the yard to League island is all a matter of speculation with a party here to draw four or five million dollars from the government, out of which they would make splendid fortunes, while the United States would be a loser at every turn. If the city even buys the property and presents it to the government, the latter would still be a loser, for it would take at least four or five years to prepare the place before an attempt could be made to use it, and this too at an outlay of millions. Besides, the island is unfit for it, being constantly overflowed, which would render an immense expenditure necessary for filling in, wharfing, making docks, &c., &c.

"Now, at our present location we have most of the requisites for a very efficient navy yard. We have a floating dry-dock surpassed by none in the world, erected at a cost of over a million dollars, which would be entirely destroyed by this removal, and another one be necessary at the new location, costing perhaps double the sum. We have ship-houses, timber-sheds, store-houses, workshops, steam-works, and almost all we need to make ours a first-class yard, and all these buildings built and paid for."

4. Commodore Stribling, commandant at the Philadelphia navy yard in 1864, also remonstrated, in a communication to the department dated March 21, 1864, against the removal of the yard to League island, assigning, among other reasons, "the expense of piling and filling in;" "the distance from the city;" and the fact that this island "is subject to intermittent fever," &c.

5. Practical shipbuilders and nautical and naval men generally unite in the condemnation of League island as not a proper place for a navy yard.

6. "It is nearly one hundred miles from the ocean, up one of the most tortuous and difficult streams to navigate in the United States;" the channel is "narrow and intricate," and "in many places obstructed by bars and shoals from the capes to the city of Philadelphia."

It has been said "the enemies of the United States would desire nothing so much as to see our monitors and iron-clads quietly moored in a river a hundred miles from the sea; their object would be not to fight them, but to keep them there, and for this purpose means would be devised in the shape of torpedoes, sunken hulks," &c., &c.

7. Ice.—That the Delaware river is much obstructed by ice in winter, and that navigation is frequently impeded by it altogether, will not be denied. In 1866 the river was closed to sail vessels for about two months, and during the present season it has already been closed to sail vessels (Jan. 31, 1867) for about six weeks, and for some time to all vessels propelled by steam. The Philadelphia Inquirer of the 23d said: "There are scores of vessels below seeking to come up; there are scores of vessels in harbor waiting to get to sea," while the ice-boat, which is built of iron, and which cost the city $94,000, "can produce no more impression on the ice," says that paper, "than the blows of a three-year old youngster on the hide of a rhinoceros." The same paper also says, January 22: "For several days numbers of persons have been crossing the Delaware on the ice" at various points, and to "Red bank," opposite League island. The schooner Vannamon, which arrived at Fortress Monroe January 21, it is reported, "encountered heavy gales, and could not get into the Delaware breakwater in consequence of heavy ice extending ten miles to sea." But many vessels bound to New York found safe anchorage in New London harbor during the same storm.

And not only is the Delaware river much obstructed by ice, not only does the "drift ice render the position of vessels in the river insecure and dangerous," but the objection on account of ice applies with special force to League island itself, because of its peculiar position in respect to currents, tides, &c. This objection is distinctly stated by the board of officers in their report, and by Strickland Kneass, civil engineer, as we have seen. And it was in testimony before the committee appointed to inquire into the cause of the burning of the New Ironsides, that the ice was piled up around the Dictator, in 1865-'66, fifteen feet in height.

9. Inadequate depth of water in the Delaware river for vessels of large size.—This is of itself alone an insuperable objection to League island for a great naval station. The Secretary of the Navy, in his report for 1866, says: "In future maritime wars, the contests between the great naval powers for supremacy on the ocean will be determined chiefly by iron-clad or armored ships." And he adds, "armored vessels for ocean cruising must necessarily be of large size." The establishment of the proposed yard at League island would be a manifest abandonment of our determination to be a first-class naval power.

10. Extra expense of pilotage and towage in the Delaware river.—That of towage would be very great. In the winter and spring of 1863 the iron-clads Sangamon, Lehigh, and Patapsco were towed out of the river from Philadelphia to Fortress Monroe at a cost to the government of about $8,000.

11. Detention in the river on account of ice and other causes.—This is a consideration of great moment, even as an item of expense. But cities might be laid in ashes and the safety of the nation imperilled in consequence of such delay. In the summer of 1862, with a tow-boat, it took the Wabash fifty hours to reach the capes from Philadelphia, and in the month of August in the same year the the United States steamer New Ironsides was four days in getting from the navy yard at Philadelphia to the mouth of the river. (See Armored Vessels, page 31.)

12. The expense of dredging at League island.—The water of the Delaware river is dirty, holding a large quantity of earthy matter in solution, which is deposited at various points along the river, as shown by the immense accumulations which have taken place within a few years at League island, and which is still in progress. And should piers be built from the island they would occasion additional deposits, and the constant use of dredging machines would be required to maintain a sufficient depth of water to accommodate vessels of the navy.

13. Inconvenience and loss of time to workmen in going to and from the yard.—"Persons working in a yard upon League island," said the board of officers, "would be compelled to reside at a distance from their work, there being no houses in the vicinity, or sites suitable for the erection of habitations." And the Chief of Bureau of Yards and Docks names among his objections to League island "the character of the land between it and the solid part of the city, being a distance of two or more miles, where the land is low and wet, and not suitable for the erection of habitations for workmen." Like the island, it is "several feet below high-water mark, and is only kept from being overflowed by the stone embankment that closes out the tide of the Delaware."

14. The expense of piling and filling.—Said the board of officers, "League island is a reclaimed marsh, and the borings made by the board show that there is a depth of mud and fine sand varying from twenty-five to fifty-six feet in depth;" and "that no heavy structures can be erected on this island with any probability of safety, without resorting to the expensive operation of piling." The board also said, "to raise the surface of this island to a height which would render it safe from the encroachments of high tides will require a filling of from nine to ten feet over the whole area," and a still higher filling will be necessary to secure drainage. We will not attempt to compute the expense of all this, but it must amount to many millions of dollars.

15. The cost of stone foundations at League island—The stone foundations, it must be borne in mind, are all to be below the surface of the ground, and are of no use to the buildings, except to form a connection with the piles, and thereby sustain the buildings. For the preservation of the piles and capping it is necessary that they should be placed low enough to insure their being always wet, and consequently they should be as low as low-water mark, and this would require some ten or twenty feet of stone work between the tops of the piles and the surface of the yard when filled to a proper height. It is believed that the cost of such foundations for the structures at League island, with the piling, would be more than the cost of the buildings themselves at New London, where no such preparations would be necessary.

16. The length of time it would take to make a navy yard at League island of any service to the government.—The Committee on Naval Affairs said in their report in 1864: "It is the opinion of competent engineers that the time requisite for the completion of a yard at this locality, such as is contemplated, would be from eight to ten years."

17. Unhealthiness of the island.—All the evidence shows that League island is not a healthy place, and this alone, if there were not so many other objections to it, would be sufficient to write its condemnation.

Why has not the city gone there, nor approached within miles of the spot? Because people have preferred to live, and not to die. Why have not ship-yards gone there? Because there is no solid ground to build upon, and it cannot be protected against ice, as the report of the board of officers and of Strickland Kneass, already quoted, shows. Why have not railroads found their outlet there? For the same reasons. And it must be apparent, that but for some adequate cause, League island, from its relation to Philadelphia, at the confluence of two rivers, would now be densely populated, instead of being, as it is, a waste and a desolation.

In conclusion, the following are briefly some of our reasons for preferring New London:

1. It has been approved and recommended by every board and commission which, under the authority of Congress, has examined it.

2. It has the approbation of eminent shipbuilders, and we believe of nautical and naval men generally.

3. "The harbor of New London has a fine, clear entrance from the ocean, accessible at all times and seasons."

4. "New London offers in the roads of the Thames river a safe and land-locked harbor," for first-class vessels, of more than ten miles in extent, with good holding ground and convenient anchorage at every point. The river has all the advantage of a wet basin; the rise and fall of tide being but two and a half feet.

5. "It is not obstructed by ice, and vessels of any size may anchor there with perfect safety at all times."

6. It has sufficient depth of water to float the largest vessels in the world to and above the proposed site for a navy yard.

7. "At New London the water is clear, and there is nothing to be apprehended from deposits at that place."

8. The site on the Thames river affords the amplest means, not only for filling docks to any extent with fresh water, "in which iron-clad vessels, if necessary, might be laid up when not in active service," but "for lifting them out of water for preservation, and also for building and repairing vessels in dry-docks, and then floating them out instead of launching them in the usual way."

9. "At New London secure foundations could be found without resorting to the tedious and expensive operation of piling."

10. We might name as of very great importance, especially in view of the imperilled condition of our iron-clads at League island, "the comparatively short time requisite to prepare the site for the purposes of the government, which, according to the estimate of the Engineer of Yards and Docks, will not exceed a year, or a year and a half."

11. The facilities for procuring the best quality of ship-timber. "For solidity, tensile strength, and durability the white-oak, which grows abundantly in Connecticut, is not excelled in the United States or the world. That which has been exported to England has received the highest praise of the British admiralty."

12. There is abundance of gravel and stone on and adjacent to the premises, and of easy excavation, for the purpose of filling and grading, and granite of superior quality requisite for the construction of the yard, with firm foundations for the buildings.

13. It is equidistant from New York and Boston, being about four hours' travel from either city, and by means of the various steamboat, propeller, and railroad lines which converge to this point, its communication with every part of the country is unsurpassed, while men, material, and provisions can be transported from all New England, New York, and the great west with remarkable facility and at short notice.

14. It is situated in the midst of a population of hardy seamen, this port having for the last twenty years constantly employed between three and four thousand persons in whaling, fishing, and other maritime pursuits, and having within itself and its immediate vicinity large ship-yards, in which the largest merchant vessels are built. And also large foundries, iron rolling-mills and machine shops, employing a great number of mechanics skilled in all branches of naval architecture.

15. The expense of pilotage and towage would be comparatively small, while dredging is a thing almost unknown at New London.

16. The harbor of New London is "easily defended." This we have shown to be the uniform and concurrent testimony of all high military authority from the foundation of the government to the present time.

17. The healthiness of the locality, with most eligible sites for the dwellings of officers and workmen near the yard.

18. The position which New London holds, both with respect to New England and New York, gives to it a great importance, in a military point of view, and affords an additional reason why a naval force should always be in readiness at this point to guard the eastern entrance to Long Island sound, thereby defending from a hostile fleet not only the densely populated coast of Connecticut, and the coast of New York bordering on the sound, with their numerous cities and towns, including New London, Norwich, Stonington, Middletown, Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport, and also the two great cities of Brooklyn and New York on the east, but the immense commerce, estimated at ten millions of dollars, (with from three to five thousand persons,) which daily passes over this inland sea; and, we may add, New London is the key and ought to be the safeguard of that great chain of inland water extending from the eastern end of Long Island sound to the coast of North Carolina, on which the board of engineers made a report to the Secretary of War in 1850, and which, in 1862, was discussed by the military committee of Congress in the following manner:

"By enlarging the locks of three short canals of an aggregate length of only seventy-eight and a half miles, a vessel entering the sounds of North Carolina from the Atlantic ocean can proceed by way of Dismal Swamp canal (twenty-two miles long) to Norfolk, then passing up the Chesapeake bay, communicating with both Washington and Baltimore. If desirable, it can sail into the Delaware river through a canal only thirteen and a half miles long; it could then sail directly for New York harbor by passing through the Delaware and Raritan canal, a distance of forty-three miles. Arriving in New York, she can pass through Hurlgate and Long Island sound to New London, where she can enter the Atlantic ocean by way of Montauk point. Here is an inland communication between almost all our leading ports and cities along the maritime front of the populous and powerful States of North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, and Connecticut."

The site near New London, possessing such natural, economical, and national advantages, and which has been so highly recommended, is tendered to the United States as a free gift. With deep water, ease of access, abundant and safe anchorage, "never freezing and being easily defended," and having remarkable facilities for laying up iron-clad vessels in fresh water, and for lifting them out of water for preservation, &c., its acquisition would very greatly add to the resources of our navy, and lay the foundations broad for its future greatness and power. Not restricted by shallow water to an inferior growth, not chained by ice or hemmed in one hundred miles from the sea, it would be always ready, at the shortest notice, to meet the enemies of the country whenever its services might at any time be required. Admiral Baron Didot, admiral of the French fleet in the American waters, who was in command of the fleet lying for several weeks at New London in the summer of 1866, is known to have said: "If this port were in France, it would be made the principal naval station of that government."

We respectfully ask, Will Congress reject the place which has, by its authorized agents, been twice approved? Will it adopt League island, which has been twice condemned, and concerning which the board of officers, appointed by the Secretary of the Navy in 1862, and the House Committee on Naval Affairs in 1864, concur in saying that "the public interest will not be promoted by acquiring title to" it "for naval purposes," while they recommend New London instead? Ought not the best location to be secured? Will the country be satisfied with less?

OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF ILLINOIS,

IN FAVOR OF

An appropriation for the completion of the navy yard at Mound City, in that State.

FEBRUARY 8, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs and ordered to be printed.

ILLINOIS LEGISLATURE, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Springfield, Monday, January 28, 1867.

Mr. CASEY submitted the following:

Whereas the Naval Department has expended over one hundred thousand dollars for a navy yard at Mound City, Illinois, and has left the same uncompleted; and whereas the thirteen iron-clad monitors now anchored at Mound City, together with the other interests of the western branch of our navy, require a western navy yard, which can be completed at Mound City for a small additional expenditure: Therefore—

Resolved by the house of representatives, (the senate concurring therein,) That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives earnestly requested, without delay, to use all honorable means to secure the passage through Congress of a bill making such appropriations as may be found necessary to complete the navy yard at Mound City, and that the clerk of the house, immediately upon the passage of this preamble and resolution, send a certified copy thereof to each of our senators and representatives in Congress, which preamble and resolution were adopted by the house on the day and year aforesaid.

A true copy from the journal of the house.

COMMUNICATION
OF
N. MICHLER, MAJOR OF ENGINEERS,

TO THE

Chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, relative to a suitable site for a public park and presidential mansion, submitted to accompany the bill (S. 549) for the establishment and maintenance of a public park in the District of Columbia.

FEBRUARY 13.—Ordered to be printed.

WASHINGTON CITY, January 29, 1867.

SIR: In compliance with the contents of your letters of the 24th and 26th of July, 1866, addressed to the honorable Secretary of War, I was detailed by the Chief of Engineers, with the consent of the General-in-chief, to carry out the views of the committee in regard to the special duty assigned me. In the letters referred to you requested that an engineer officer be detailed to make the necessary preliminary surveys and maps of certain tracts of land adjoining or near this city, for the purposes of a public park, and also a suitable site for a presidential mansion, and which, in the language of the Senate resolution of the 18th of the same month, "shall combine convenience of access and healthfulness, good water and capability of adornment;" in addition to this to ascertain, if practicable, the price of said lands.

After a careful examination of the many beautiful localities to be found in the vicinity of the capital, and having caused an accurate and detailed survey of its environs to be made, I now have the honor to submit for your consideration the conclusions to which I have arrived. In connection with this report two preliminary maps have been prepared, which will show more plainly than words can express the required information and the respective advantages of the different sections. The Senate resolution would seem to imply that one and the same tract of land should be designated for a site for grounds for a presidential mansion as well as for a public park; but as it is not definitely so stated, it has been judged best by me to separate the subjects. Should such not be the intention of your honorable committee it will be easy to combine the two, where so many splendid situations present themselves from which to make a selection. As it is designed to build a home for the President to which he can retire from the active cares and business of his high office, and where he can secure that ease, comfort, and seclusion so necessary to a statesman, it would seem best to locate it away from the constant turmoil of a city life, at such a distance where his privacy cannot easily be intruded upon, and still sufficiently accessible for all practical purposes.

In the first place, let me consider the subject of a public park. Where so much has been written on so interesting a feature to any large city as that of a park, and where the necessity of public grounds, either for the sake of healthful recreation and exercise for all classes of society, or for the gratification of their tastes, whether for pleasure or curiosity, has become apparent to every enlightened community, it would seem to be unnecessary for me to dilate further upon the matter, to say nothing of the natural or artificial beauties which adorn a park, and so cultivate an appreciative and refined taste in those who seek its shades for the purpose of breathing the free air of Heaven and admiring nature. It certainly is the most economical and practical means of providing all, old and young, rich and poor, with that greatest of all needs, healthy exercise in the open country.

To accomplish these ends there should be a spaciousness in the extent of the grounds, not merely presenting the appearance of a large domain, but in reality possessing many miles of drives and rides and walks, all independent of each other, and either open or protected so as to be suitable for the different seasons. There should be a variety of scenery, a happy combination of the beautiful and picturesque—the smooth plateau and the gently undulating glade vieing with the ruggedness of the rocky ravine and the fertile valley, the thickly mantled primeval forest contrasting with the green lawn, grand old trees with flowering shrubs. Wild, bold, rapid streams, coursing their way along the entire length and breadth of such a scene, would not only lend enchantment to the view but add to the capabilities of adornment. While nature lavishly offers a succession of falls, cascades, and rapids to greet the eye, as the waters dash through some romantic dale, the hand of art can be used to transform them into ponds and lakes as they gently glide through the more peaceful valleys, thereby rendering them the means of pleasure and recreation for boating or skating. What so useful as an abundance of water, or so ornamental when converted into fountains and jets to cool the heated atmosphere? It furnishes, also, opportunities for the engineer and artist to display their taste in constructing ornamental and rustic bridges to span the stream.

An attempt has been made in a few words to describe the purposes and beauties of a public park. In no place has nature been more bountiful of her charms than in the vicinity of this city, and all can be found so near and accessible; the valley of the Rock creek and its tributaries, the Broad and Piney branches and the several minor rivulets, with the adjoining hills overlooking these beautiful streams, present the capital of the nation advantages not to be lightly disregarded in providing a park worthy a great people. All the elements which constitute a public resort of the kind can be found in this wild and romantic tract of country. With its charming drives and walks, its hills and dales, its pleasant valleys and deep ravines, its primeval forests and cultivated fields, its running waters, its rocks clothed with rich fern and mosses, its repose and tranquillity, its light and shade, its ever-varying shrubbery, its beautiful and extensive views, the locality is already possessed with all the features necessary for the object in view. There you can find nature diversified in almost every hue and form, needing but the taste of the artist and the skill of the engineer to enhance its beauty and usefulness; gentle pruning and removing what may be distasteful, improving the roads and paths and the construction of new ones, and increasing the already large growth of trees and shrubs, deciduous and evergreen, by adding to them those of other climes and countries. A list of the various trees and shrubs, and vines and creepers, to be found already flourishing in the region described, and also the nature of the soil, will be appended to this report. A glance at the map will show the topographical features of the country, and its accessibility to both Washington and Georgetown.

The valley of Rock creek occupies a central position to both, as it lays between the Tennallytown road on the west, one of the most prominent thoroughfares leading out of the one city, and the Fourteenth street road and Seventh street turnpike on the east, two of the finest communications running in a northerly direction from the other. From these main highways many branches cross the valleys or follow along the banks of the stream; these transverse roads already form beautiful drives. Rock creek winds along for more than four miles through the centre of the proposed grounds, receiving at convenient points the waters of the Broad and Piney branches, and several smaller tributaries. For a short distance it courses through a narrow but beautiful valley, then wildly dashes for a mile over a succession of falls and rapids, with a descent of some eight feet, the banks on both sides being bold, rocky, and picturesque; then passes again through narrow valleys or between high, bluff banks. At many points the creek is capable of being dammed, thus forming a series of lakes and ponds for useful and ornamental purposes. The many deep ravines setting in towards it can furnish romantic walks and quiet retreats for the pedestrian. The larger part of the ground is thickly wooded, and capable of great adornment. Here we find the several varieties of oak, the beech, the locust, the mulberry, the hickory, the sassafras, the persimmon, the dogwood, the pine, with a great many shrubs, vines, and creepers, growing, climbing, and trailing throughout the woods. Beautiful vistas, artistically arranged, can be cut through them, exhibiting distant points of landscape, while charming promenades can invite the wanderer to seek cooling shades. Nature has been so rich in her vegetable creation that the plan of transplanting trees of large growth, which has been adopted in most of the modern parks, will be unnecessary. There are some few country seats, such as Blagden's, Pearce's, and Walbridge's, which have been highly cultivated; should it be found desirable to erect the presidential mansion within the enclosure of the park, the first mentioned site possesses many advantages, both ornamental and valuable. Here and there some prominent point offers commanding views of the surrounding country, where observatories can be located, conservatories built for exotic plants, and geometrical flower-gardens planted. Back from the stream some level plateaus extend, which can be appropriately employed for zoological and botanical gardens, grounds for play and parade, and many other useful purposes.

The map shows the most desirable localities, the surveys having been made in great detail. The lay of the land is such that it admits of thorough drainage, and the nature of the soil offers all the facilities for building good roads; the granite and limestone rocks which are found out-cropping at different points will furnish the materials for their superstructure. In fact, every facility is offered for laying out and constructing a grand national park.

The questions now arise as to what should be the extent of the proposed work, and the probable price of the land. As it should be one worthy the capital of the nation, and as the ground can be secured at a reasonable price before being occupied by costly suburban villas, it is respectfully recommended to the honorable committee to purchase at once a sufficient number of acres bordering on Rock creek to anticipate the future growth of the city and its increased population. With the view of retaining as much of the picturesque scenery along the stream, and of also embracing the sites of some few of the forts on the north constructed for defence of the city, which have become historical, and from the parapets of which extensive views can be had, I have marked on the maps such lines as may be satisfactorily taken as approximate bounds of the park. In case my recommendations should be considered too extravagant, I have caused a second series of lines to be drawn for grounds of more moderate dimensions. The first tract would contain about two thousand five hundred and forty acres, more or less, and the second, one thousand eight hundred, more or less. As there is so much difference of opinion as to the price of the land, the quality and improvements varying so much, it is a difficult matter to offer anything more than an approximate appraisement. As the right of eminent domain empowers the government to take property, and as such power is the necessary incident to sovereignty, the question would finally have to be settled by a commission appointed by some competent court. The price ranges from $50 to $1,000 per acre; a mean of $200 should amply cover the entire cost. It will be noticed that the southern limits, as drawn of the proposed park, do not approach more closely than necessary the city limits, leaving out where possible such sites as would greatly enhance the cost. Avenues leading along Rock creek to the southern limits of the park should be opened. According to the above figures the larger tract would amount to $508,000, and the smaller one to $360,000. As the work of constructing a park will consume many years, no longer delay than is absolutely necessary should be consumed in the preliminary arrangements for the passage of the necessary laws and the purchase of the lands.

The dimensions of the most celebrated European parks are as follows :

London.—All parks in and near London, including gardens, squares, and parade grounds, 6,000 acres. Hyde Park, 380 acres; Regent's Park, 372 acres; Windsor Little Park, 300 acres; Kensington, 227 acres; Windsor Great Park, 3,500 acres; Richmond Park, 2,250 acres.

Dublin.—Phoenix Park, about 2,000 acres.

Garden at Versailles, 3,000 acres; Bois de Boulogne, 2,158 acres; Munich, Englischer Garten, about 500 acres; Vienna, Prater, 1,500 acres; Birkenhead Park, near Liverpool, 180 acres.

The Central Park of New York, the most important work of the kind undertaken in America, is over two and a half miles in length by one-half mile in breadth, and contains over eight hundred and forty acres. There are about nine and a half miles of drives, five and a half miles of bridle road, and some twenty-five miles of walks. The annual sum provided for the expense of maintaining it, to wit, $150,000, is reported to be insufficient. The number of visitors continue to increase with each year; in 1865, 7,593,139 persons entered. Hunting Course Park, near Philadelphia, and the Druid Park, near Baltimore, have also been constructed. The establishment of parks is exciting great attention throughout the land, and adds vastly to the enjoyment of the people.

I would now call the attention of your honorable committee to the remaining subject of this report—the selection of a site for a presidential mansion. In the memoranda submitted to the Secretary of War by letter of July 26, 1866, you requested “that the ground known as Meridian Hill,” and “the estate of the late Washington Berry,” should be particularly examined, as they are thought to contain all the requisite advantages for such a site; “also such other localities as may, in the judgment of the engineer,” present eligible positions for such a purpose. In compliance with your wish I made special reconnoissances and surveys of the above-named places, as well as some others, which offer great inducements, and will now discuss each separately.

I. Meridian Hill—(Colonel Messmore's estate.) This site is located due north from the present White House, on the first range of hills bounding the limits of the city of Washington. It is of easy access, several avenues and streets leading in that direction. On the east it adjoins the lands of Columbia College, and on the west those of Mr. Little. The number of acres contained in this tract is one hundred and twenty, which added to that of Mr. Little's thirty-eight acres gives a total of one hundred and fifty-eight. The latter offered to sell to the government at about six cents a square foot, or $2,613 per acre. On both these estates are eligible building sites; the view towards the south, overlooking the city and the valley of the Potomac, being particularly fine. At one time some large forest trees added beauty to the scene, but most of them were destroyed during the war. There are no improvements, the old mansion-house having been destroyed by fire, and the walls are alone standing. North of the site the land is nearly level, only slightly undulating. Although possessed of considerable advantages, there are several objections to this selection, in connection with the object in view. Lying just above the plateau of the city, and not screened by any belt of timber, it is exposed to the miasmatic influences rising from the marshes of the Potomac. Again, it is too near the city to afford any retirement and repose for the Chief Magistrate. Already the street railroads approach, and numerous houses are being built on all sides of this site.

II. Metropolis View—(Homestead of the late Washington Berry.) This estate lies northeast of the Capitol, between the old Bladensburg road and Lincoln avenue, the latter a continuation of North Capitol street. It is distant from the Capitol about two and a half miles, and from the White House about three miles. It contains some three hundred and fifty acres, valued by the trustees at $500 an acre, with the improvements, including a very fine spring; the whole is offered at $200,000. To the east of it lies Brentwood, the fine estate of Mrs. Pearson, and to the west Glenwood Cemetery, and Harewood, the beautiful grounds of Mr. Corcoran. In front spreads out Eckington, so many years the homestead of the late Mr. Gales, which contains 130 acres; the price of this land is placed at $1,000 per acre, with $25,000 additional for improvements. Metropolis View is beautifully situated, having a high and commanding position; it is partially covered with groves of fine old trees, deciduous and evergreens, and possessed of an abundance of timber. A fine spring rises in the place, and two small streams, tributaries of the Tiber, course through it. In nearly every direction the eye meets with charming landscape scenes, and it overlooks the capital and the broad valley of the Potomac. This locality possesses many attractions, and is susceptible of great improvement. It is easy of access by some of the finest avenues and streets leading out of the city, and is at a very convenient distance from the most prominent public buildings.

Eckington is a delightful place, but it is not sufficiently high to afford any extensive views. It should, however, be purchased in addition to the Berry estate, should Metropolis View be selected as the site. The two tracts of land united would furnish ample grounds to surround the mansion, and also open a fine park to connect with the city on the direct line with the Capitol. The sum total of the valuations of both estates amounts to $355,000. In regard to the healthfulness of this locality, the opinions of those with whom I have consulted differ very materially. Some think that the miasma carried up the valley of the Tiber from the Eastern branch is very deleterious to health, while others, who have long inhabited these old homesteads, pronounce them to be perfectly salubrious.

III. Harewood—(Mr. Corcoran's estate.) Among the many delightful drives around the city of Washington none can compare with those to be found within the enclosures of this delightful retreat. The grounds are most artistically arranged, and no expense has been spared in adorning them by all the appliances at the command of taste and wealth.

The grounds are naturally beautiful and undulating, and all that skill can accomplish has been applied to render them most charming and picturesque. In addition to the natural growth of vegetation, many trees and plants of other nations and climes have been introduced to impart their luxuriance to the scene. The estate covers some two hundred acres, but as you follow the gentle windings of the drives and walks, the imagination is led to believe it to be of much greater extent. Good roads lead to it from the city, making it perfectly accessible. A fine spring furnishes a plentiful supply of water, and in point of health it is all that can be desired. This spot, originally selected by the proprietor upon which to erect a princely mansion, is one of the most delightful situations among the many fine ones in the environs of Washington; it would be a most eligible site for a presidential mansion.

IV. The homestead of Mr. Moncure Robinson.—This estate is now occupied by a brother of the proprietor, the latter residing in the city of Philadelphia. It lies adjoining the lands belonging to the United States Military Asylum; the road which leads out of the city on the prolongation of North Capitol street and passes near the home for the old soldiers, almost divides the place into equal parts. There are about seventy acres in all, which the owner proposes to sell at $1,000 per acre, without the improvements; these he values at $30,000. The mansion occupies one of the most elevated positions in the neighborhood of Washington. An extensive panorama of the surrounding country lies before the beholder; from every point of the compass the eye can dwell upon magnificent landscapes extending far into Maryland and Virginia, and combining all that is beautiful and picturesque. In one direction the gaze rests for miles on the waters of the majestic Potomac, and in another there are mountains and hills mantled with forests, and plains and valleys highly cultivated. The place contains a large portion of heavy timber, and is so situated as to offer numerous advantages for improvement. From its great height it will be far above all malarious influences. There are fine springs in the neighborhood, which furnish an abundance of water for useful and ornamental purposes. The locality is convenient to both cities. Through Washington several avenues and streets lead towards the road above referred to as connecting with North Capitol street; by this drive a straight-line communication can be had with the Capitol, the distance between the two being less than four miles. By the avenues and streets connecting with the Fourteenth-street road and Seventh-street turnpike, thence by Rock Creek Church road, a very direct drive of a little over four miles can be had with the White House and the public buildings adjoining it. From Georgetown almost an air-line can be had from Boundary street, Taylor's lane, and Rock Creek Church road, distance of about four miles.

Directly in front, or south of Mr. Robinson's beautiful locality, lie the very pretty grounds of Mrs. R. S. Wood, consisting of forty acres. The two must be considered inseparable should the Robinson site be selected for a presidential mansion. They are valued at about $1,000 per acre, not including the improvements. The two places can probably be purchased for $150,000. Mrs. Wood's tract joins Harewood on the south, and on the west that of the Military Asylum. The lands of the latter do not belong to the government, but are in trust for the old soldiers, and contain some two hundred and fifty-eight acres. A reference to the map will show the honorable committee the peculiarly attractive features, both of position and general convenience of access, offered by the locality described above, containing in all about one hundred and fourteen acres, sufficient for the necessary purposes of embellishment and utility; and lying contiguous to the already ornamented grounds of Harewood and the Military Asylum, enjoying all the charms and advantages of those delightful places, it would be difficult indeed to find a spot more admirably adapted as a retired, pleasant home for the President of the United States.

A table of distances from the Capitol and Executive Mansion to prominent points of interest is also added for the information of the committee.

In concluding this report I would respectfully suggest to your honorable committee the necessity of commencing the construction of the national park as soon as practicable. It is a grand and beautiful undertaking, and should be prosecuted with the greatest energy. A sufficient appropriation for enclosing the grounds purchased, for improving and keeping in repair the drives and walks already constructed, and for the laying out of others, should be made. For this purpose one hundred thousand dollars would be sufficient for present expenditures.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. MICHLER,

Major of Engineers, Brevet Brigadier General U. S. A.

Hon. B. GRATZ BROWN,

Chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, United States Senate.

Remarks on the vegetation of the District of Columbia, by Dr. Arthur Schott, of Georgetown; appended to the report of General N. Michler.

In order to specify the vegetable growth of the District of Columbia, in relation to the topographical features of the same, the subjoined lists of plants are suggestively proposed, as they principally tend to give shape to the general appearance of the landscape. As the geological aspect of the area in question presents considerable variety in its details, it is thought proper to bring the numerous floral types, not less varied in size, shape, and individual development, under separate heads, corresponding to their particular habits. For the sake of facilitating their survey, the various species are here arranged in the following order, commencing with the trees, larger and smaller, and these followed by shrubs, vines, creepers, and the undergrowth of herbs and weeds. The same disposition is observed in mentioning their topographical distribution, commencing on the hill tops, and then gradually descending to the low grounds, river banks, marshes, and bogs. As to the selection of the species hereafter named, there is no hesitation in giving the trees, shrubbery, and vines pretty much in full, as all these forms by their size make themselves more prominent, while with plants, herbs, and weeds, either their rich floral, or more foliaceous development, or clustering mode of growth, invite special notice. Commencing with the more elevated portions of the district, particularly towards its western limits, the following are to be found :

White oak : Large, lofty ; rich woods.

Post oak : Rough or post white oak ; less tall ; sandy soil.

Red oak : Good sized ; rocky woods.

American beech : Large and very ornamental ; rich woods on hill slopes bordering on water courses.

Hop hornbeam : Large and handsome ; rich woods.

Mockernut hickory : Large and graceful ; rich woods.

Shell-bark or shag-bark hickory : Tall, handsome ; rich woods.

Thick shell-bark hickory : Good size, with the former.

Poplar tulip tree : one of the loftiest forms ; rich woods.

Honey locust : Good sized, very ornamental ; rich woods.

Spanish oak : Large or small ; rich woods.

Quercitron or black oak : Large tree ; dry woods.

Common persimmon : Middle sized, but handsome ; sporadically all through.

Sassafras : Fifteen to fifty feet high ; rich woods.

Red Mulberry : Middle sized ; rich woods.

Red bird : Small tree ; hill slopes.

- Tupelo, black or sour gum tree : Middle sized ; hill-sides.
- Locust tree : Tall, ornamental ; borders of woods, hill and road sides.
- Staghorn sumac : Twenty to thirty feet high ; open hill-sides.
- Smooth sumac : Of lesser size, on rocky, barren soil.
- Box elder : Small handsome tree ; hill-sides ; borders of thickets descending to river banks.
- Flowering dogwood : Small tree ; in rocky places.
- Jersey or scrub pine : Fifteen to twenty-five feet high ; on barren and sterile hills.
- Red cedar : Fifteen to thirty feet high ; dry, rocky, or sterile hill-sides.
- Japan paper mulberry : Small tree or shrub ; open hill and road side ; pretty well naturalized.
- Panicle dogwood : Thickets and hill-sides ; shrub four feet to eight feet high.
- Black haw, shoe-leaved arrowwood : Treelike shrub ; shady hill-sides.
- Maple-leaved arrowwood : Three feet to five feet high ; rocky woods.
- Spice bush : Five feet to ten feet high ; damp woods.
- Poison oak ; poison ivy : Climbing or trailing everywhere.
- Bladdernut : Ten feet high ; moist thickets.
- Burning bush : Sporadically everywhere through the woods ; tall and upright shrub.
- Summer grape : Thickets.
- Virginia creeper : One of the chinquopin ; six feet to twenty feet high ; sandy woods ; boldest climbers ; in the woods generally.
- Maryland andromeda : Sandy woods ; very ornamental.
- Deerberry, squaw huckleberry : Dry woods and hill sides ; neat and graceful shrub.
- Common swamp blueberry : Four feet to five feet high ; moist shady places and copses.
- Purple Pinxter flower : All through the woods.
- Indian hemp : Three feet to five feet high ; valleys and hill-sides.
- Woodbine : Trailing ; rocky woods.
- Trumpet honeysuckle : Woodlands.
- Of the undergrowth, herbage, and weeds, the following may be mentioned :
- Creeping wintergreen : Damp woods in the shade of evergreens.
- Ground laurels : Sandy woods and rocky soil.
- Common greenbrier : Moist thickets.
- Halbert-leaved greenbrier : Thickets in sterile or sandy soil.
- Bouncing bet, common soapwort : Thoroughly naturalized, in waste places and rugged open hill-sides.
- Wild pink : Rocky or gravelly places.
- Purslane : Sunny sites in rocky or sandy soil.
- Spring beauty : Moist open woods.
- Velvet-leaf : Escaped from gardens, naturalized in waste places.
- High mallow : Naturalized like the former ; waste places.
- Wild crane's bill : Open woods.
- Wood sorrel : Three species ; rocky places.
- Wax-work, climbing bittersweet : Along streams and thickets.
- New Jersey tea : Undershrub ; dry woodlands.
- Milkwort : Woods, in light soil ; besides three or four more species of the genus.
- Meadowsweet : Two or three species, among them F. tomentosa, L. hard-track, steeplebush ; low grounds and meadows.
- Indian physic : Also called bowman's root ; rich woods.
- Purple flowering raspberry : Ornamental ; hill-sides and rocky banks.
- High blackberry : Border of thickets.
- Running swamp blackberry : Wet woods.
- Sand blackberry : Sandy woods.

Hawthorn ; whitethorn : Dry rocky banks.

Shadbush ; serviceberry : Hillsides and river banks.

Deer grass ; meadow beauty : Sandy swamps.

Loosestrife : Wet meadows.

Common evening primrose : Everywhere.

River sundrops : River banks and swamps.

False loosestrife ; seedbox : Swamps.

Yellow passion flower : Damp thickets.

Early saxifrage : Exposed rocks.

Bishop's cap : Hillsides, in rich soil.

Panicle cornel, four feet to eight feet high : Thickets and hillsides.

Bluets : Delicate little herb ; grassy banks and commons.

Of the very large family of compositae, especially fully represented in North America, the District has its correspondingly good share. The species are distributed over every kind of locality, but to mention them all separately would lead too far ; it is therefore preferred to present here an extract of such genera, which show the largest and most showy species. They are as follows :

Ironweed, button snakeroot, thoroughwort, mistflower, coltsfoot, starwort, double-blistered starwort, golden rod, golden aster, groundseltre, elecampane, rosin plant, oxeye, coneflower, sunflower, tickseed, burr marigold, crownbeard, cudweed, everlasting, Indian plantain, plumed thistle, hawkbit, hawkweed, rattlesnake root, &c., &c.

Cardinal flower : Low grounds.

Great lobelia : In similar localities.

False wintergreen : Damp sandy woods.

Small pyrola : Open woods.

One-sided pyrola : Rich woods.

Pipsissewa : Dry woods.

American cowslip : Rich soil.

Common mullein : Fields and roadsides.

Turtlehead ; snakehead : Damp thickets.

Bushy false foxglove : Dry copses.

Painted cup : Low grounds.

Of the mint family well represented in the District the following genera count the more showy forms : Horsebalm, dittany, horsemint, sage, catmint, mountain mint, scullcap, false dragonhead, germander.

Of the borage family, the following genera are more prominently represented : Vipers bugloss, false cromwell, smooth lungwort.

Of the waterleaf family : Waterleaf.

Of the polemonium family : Phlox, several showy species.

Of the convolvulus family : Bracted bindweed, morning glory.

Of the nightshade family : Jamestown weed, thorn apple, nightshade.

Of the gentian family : American centaury, gentian, American columbo.

Of the milkweed family : Milkweed, gonolobus.

Of the birthwort family : Wild ginger.

The class of the endogens is equally well represented by members of the following genera : Adam and Eve, or putty-root, false orchis, Arethusa, ladies' tresses, rattlesnake plantain, lady's slipper, star grass, blue-eyed grass, yam, three-leaved nightshade, Solomon's seal, lily, dog's-tooth violet, bellwort, devil's bit. Of the remaining genera of this class, the following ought to be mentioned : Dayflower, spiderwort ; besides a very extensive list of grasses and sedges which close the series of endogens.

Especially noteworthy for the wood flora are of the cryptogams, the fern, and mosses. The former, of course, appear more prominent on account of size and higher development. The following genera are characteristics for the District : Polypody, brake, bracken, maiden hair, Woodwardia, spleenwort, Dicksonia, bladder fern, woodsin, wood fern, shield fern, sensitive fern, flowering fern, moonwort.

Of the clubmoss family, (lycopodium, the ground pine,) lycopodium dendroideum, Micht., and L. complanatum, L., are the more conspicuous.

The list of herbs and undergrowth plants in general has been given here more extensively on account of the broader distribution of the genera and species, which descend almost equally from the hill-sides over clearings and open flats, down to the water's edge. It now remains to name such species of trees, shrubs, and suffrubicose forms, not mentioned heretofore on account of their being more exclusively bound to the vicinity of water-courses, swamps, and bogs. The following deserve particular notice :

Swamp white oak : Pretty large ; low, moist woods.

Swamp chestnut oak : Low woods and river banks ; a large tree.

Willow oak : 30 to 50 feet high ; sandy, low woods.

Black jack or barren oak : 8 to 20 feet high, dry, sandy barrens.

Sweet gum : Moist woods ; large and beautiful tree.

Hornbeam, ironwood : 10 to 20 feet high ; along streams.

River or red birch : Large tree ; gracefully overhanging river banks.

Smooth alder : 6 to 12 feet high ; bordering water-courses.

Silk-leaved willow : Shrub 4 to 10 feet high ; sandy river banks.

Brittle willow : Tall and handsome.

Poplar, aspen : 20 to 50 feet high.

Large toothed aspen : Large tree.

Planetree, buttonwood ; also called sycamore : Large tree, alluvial river banks.

Sweet bay, small or laurel magnolia : 4 to 15 feet high ; swamps.

North American papaw : Small tree ; banks of streams in rich soil.

Swamp rose mallow : 5 to 6 feet high ; borders of marshes ; flowers very showy.

Halbert-leaved mallow : River banks, swamps.

Maple, white or silver maple : Fine ornamental tree ; river banks.

Red or swamp maple : Small tree ; swamps and wet woods.

Strawberry bush : Wet places.

Winter or frost grape : Thickets and river banks.

Wild yellow plum : Bush or tree 8 to 15 feet high ; river banks.

Chokecherry : Tall, overhanging shrub ; river banks.

Swamp rose : Low grounds.

Witch hazel : Damp woods.

Common elder : Border of thickets and low grounds.

Buttonbush : Wet places ; forming thickets.

Clammy or white honeysuckle : Swamps and boggy places.

Mountain laurel ; also called cabin bush : Rocky hills, damp soil and banks of rivers.

Trumpet bower : Bold climber, with very showy flowers.

Leather or moose wood : Damp, rich wood swamps ; 2 to 7 feet high.

American or white elm : Large ornamental tree ; moist woods and alluvial river banks.

Fringe tree : Low tree or shrub, very ornamental ; river banks.

Red ash : Woods along streams ; large tree.

Most of the herbs and undergrowth plants of the lower sections of the District, such as swamps and overflows, will be found already embodied in the respective list above. Truly aquatic forms, though some of them peculiar to this locality, are not deemed necessary to be considered here.

As a general remark it may be stated that the western portion of the District, forming an outlier of the eastern slope of the Alleghanies, shows over its hill-sides and valleys a far greater diversity of species than east, on the other hand, in the flats towards the Eastern Branch ; these exhibit a tiring monotony on account of the more or less clustering habits of its vegetable forms.

In conclusion, attention may be drawn to the sudden changes in the qualities of soil, irrespective of the section it may belong to. For example, there can be observed on the top of a hill an excessive sterility, when on its slope, upon a horizon only a few yards below, the richest piece of ground imaginable may be encountered. The same occurs upon the flats and alluvians of the middle and eastern section. In most cases this will be found to be the result of the deteriorating agency of some kind of denudation, wherever the original vegetable cover of the soil had been impaired either by nature or man. Through the course of civilization in the immediate vicinity of a large city, the deteriorating causes by the hand of man are going on almost incessantly. It is therefore that we here find very extensive patches of land which, after having been cleared of their original cover, are deprived of every particle of vegetable soil; hence the multitude of desolate hillslopes and flats, alternating upon the same level with pieces of the richest forest lands imaginable. This observation may serve as subject for reflection in regard to inconsiderate clearing, and to the robbing of nature's treasures by a few seasons of speculative cultivation of the soil without ever making some just returns.

There is no doubt the surface crust of this District has been, previous to its disintegration, rich and genial. This is sufficiently proved by the above list of vegetable forms. After having been divested of its natural protection, denuding agencies, both natural and artificial, thoroughly impoverished it in many instances.

RESOLUTION
OF THE
LEGISLATURE OF KANSAS,

IN FAVOR OF

A grant of lands in that State for the use and benefit of the Freedmen's University.

FEBRUARY 9, 1867.—Ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

Whereas certain private parties have organized and put in operation in Wyandott county, an institution of learning known as the Freedmen's University, the object of which is to afford to the colored population of Kansas an opportunity to pursue the higher branches of learning; and whereas it is believed that an institution devoted, as this is, to the education and elevation of this neglected people is eminently worthy of the fostering care and encouragement of the general government: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the senate, (the house of representatives concurring therein,) That the Congress of the United States be, and they are hereby, respectfully memorialized to grant for the use and benefit of the Freedmen's University — sections of land in the State of Kansas, to be selected by the trustees of said institution from any public lands not otherwise disposed of.

Resolved further, That the secretary of state be, and he is hereby, instructed to forward certified copies of this preamble and resolutions to the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives, and also to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

Adopted by the senate January 16, 1867.

OF

JAMES E. YEATMAN, OF ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI, TO HON.
JOHN B. HENDERSON,

IN RELATION TO

The poverty, destitution, and suffering of the southern people.

FEBRUARY 13, 1867.—Ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

ST. LOUIS, January 23, 1867.

DEAR SIR: From letters, and other sources of information, I learn that there is likely to be great destitution and suffering in the south, arising from the failure of crops in many portions of that country.

While Congress has been occupied with political questions which agitate the country, the true condition of the south, and the near approach of its inhabitants to almost famine and ruin, have escaped its attention.

The high price of cotton stimulated the planting of that staple, and caused the planters to neglect growing grain and other articles of food, believing, as they did, that with fair crops of cotton they would be able to supply themselves therewith from the granaries of the west at a much cheaper rate than it could be grown on their own lands. The energies and labor of the south, aided by northern capital, with the enterprise of a large number of adventurous men from the east and west, were all concentrated on this one object.

Various causes have arisen tending to prostrate the people, leaving them nearly ruined, among which I may more especially mention the following, which could not have been foreseen or provided against: The too great drought at one season, which destroyed and blasted their corn; too much rain at another, which injured their cotton; and then the army worm, which came out of the ground in vast numbers, destroying what was left. From these causes all the well-matured plans, the toil and skill of the people, were rendered unavailing.

Plantations which should have yielded from 800 to 1,000 bales of cotton yielded but from 150 to 250 bales, which was not sufficient to pay much more than for the labor employed.

Another season is rapidly approaching when preparation should be made for planting, but the planters are in debt, and without credit; and it will be impossible for them to employ labor if they have not the means to procure food for those they employ. Merchants, even if disposed, are unable to make advances or render any assistance to the planter, owing to their heavy losses during the past season, and consequently a large number of plantations must remain unworked, or but partially worked, and a vast number of persons unemployed, who must endure great suffering, if not die from starvation.

The same terrible scenes of distress from famine are likely to ensue in our own land as did in India during the past season. Our government, I doubt not, would come to the rescue, when fully aroused to the necessity, and feed the starving millions, but not, I fear, before much suffering had ensued and many had perished; and then it would be as an act of charity or as a gratuity.

It has occurred to my mind that a plan might be devised which would save all the anxiety and suffering which would ensue, as well as great cost to the government, and which would revive the drooping spirits of the planter and the laborer at the south, and give to the country that which, just now, it so much needs, a good cotton crop, while every section of the country would be alike benefited thereby. The plan suggested to my mind is, that Congress should authorize the supplying of the planters, large and small, and all others engaged in producing cotton, who so requested, with provisions for themselves, hands, and stock; the cost of the supplies to be a lien on the crop, and to be paid from the first proceeds of sale. The supplies could be furnished through the Freedmen's Bureau, or supply agents, who should be officers of the army. The security cotton the government could control through its agents for collecting the government tax. The supply agents of the Freedmen's Bureau could render their returns for supplies, which should be furnished monthly, unless where it would be necessary to supply some sections for the season. The party asking for supplies should state, under oath, his inability to purchase supplies, also the number of acres of land he has under cultivation, the number of hands by him employed, and the number of head of stock. Such other precautions as might be necessary for security should be taken. The amount of supplies should be limited only by the necessity, say ten, twenty, thirty, forty, or fifty millions. Non-interest bearing treasury notes could be issued from time to time, as required, to make purchases. Purchases should be made by the commissary department, the same as for the army, so that the whole expenditure would be made without additional cost to the government, and which would be reimbursed within one year, or a shorter period. Under an arrangement of this kind, the gratuitous supply of provisions by the government should cease, unless to the aged and infirm. All who are able to work should be required to work, and if they did not, the consequences must rest with themselves, as work, with food, raiment, and fair wages, would be afforded to all. Provision should be made that the laborer receive fair wages, and secured, if necessary, in the same.

The plan, to my mind, is simple and feasible, but might be improved upon. My object is to bring the subject to the attention of Congress, and to urge it to take some prompt and vigorous action thereon.

Famine is in the land, or soon will be. The wolf is at the door, and something must be done to prevent it from entering in and destroying thousands and tens of thousands of helpless women and children. We can avert it, and it should be averted. The laws of humanity and Christianity all require that we should. Besides, it is to the interest of the government, outside of that broad and just philanthropy which should govern us as a nation.

The government has levied a tax of three cents per pound on cotton, which is equal to $12 per bale. If but little cotton be produced, the revenue from it will be small. If a fair crop, or only half a crop, be produced, it would yield a revenue of twenty-five millions to the government, besides the five or ten per cent. additional on the income tax.

But there are still higher motives which should influence us in this matter. As a reconstruction measure, I believe it would be more potent than any which has yet been tried. The great difficulty has been, that while the south has been conquered and caused to surrender, and the rebellion crushed, their hearts and purposes have not been conquered; and I fear that, with returning strength, they will again attempt to overthrow the government. Believing this, I also believe it to be the imperative duty of Congress to require guarantees, and to enact such laws as will forever prevent ambitious and designing politicians and bad men from attempting to inaugurate another rebellion.

When the south sees that we are firm and determined in doing that which we deem essential to the preservation of the country, and are not actuated by vindictive feelings and a desire to punish them, a different feeling will prevail there towards the government. Generosity and kindness on our part will beget kinder feelings on theirs; we may come to know and understand each other better, and mutual esteem, respect, and even affection will soon take the place of bitterness and animosity. Laws which are now deemed essential to our safety and preservation will be no longer necessary, and may be rescinded, and the lion, which now requires chains to bind him, may then be led by a silken cord.

I am moved to present this subject to your attention, hoping that it will meet your consideration, and that you will take the necessary and immediate steps to have some action of Congress taken upon it. There is no time to be lost, and it should not be deferred until we hear the wails of the sufferers. What is asked now is not charity, but to aid people to help themselves, and thereby prevent the necessity of charity.

To defer this until next Congress will be too late to be effective; it must be done now. I believe the great American heart will bear Congress out in any generous and liberal action which it might take. We have seen that, when it so may choose, it can put measures through on the double quick. This is one that will brook no delay, and prompt action will be sanctioned and justified now and forever by all those who are not actuated by revengeful feelings. By such action great suffering will be prevented, and prosperity and peace will soon be fully restored.

England, during the famine in Ireland in 1847, appropriated over eighty millions to relieve the sufferers in that country! Why should we not do likewise?—only exercising the foresight to render assistance before famine has entered the land, rather than after. I think it the part of wisdom and sound policy to adopt forthwith some such plan.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES E. YEATMAN.

Hon. JOHN B. HENDERSON.

OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF KANSAS,
IN FAVOR OF

The extinguishment of the Indian titles to lands in that State.

FEBRUARY 15, 1867.—Ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

Whereas much of the best land in the State of Kansas is owned by Indians under patents from the United States, prohibiting them from conveying said land, "except with the consent of the President of the United States and Secretary of the Interior, until a final settlement and other treaty stipulations are complied with on the part of the government;" and whereas said Indians are desirous to become citizens to all intents and purposes, and their land opened for settlement; and whereas the State of Kansas is thus deprived of a large revenue from the taxation of said lands: Therefore, be it

Resolved by the house of representatives, (the senate concurring therein,) That we earnestly memorialize the President of the United States and the Secretary of the Interior to remove restrictions in said treaties, and to make an early final settlement with the different tribes; and that the secretary of state is hereby requested to forward copies of this resolution to the President of the United States, Secretary of the Interior, and to our senators and representatives in Congress, and that they be requested to use their influence in procuring the removal of said restrictions at as early a date as practicable.

Adopted by the house of representatives January 31, 1867.

OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF KANSAS,
IN FAVOR OF

The adoption of measures to secure the protection of the western frontier of that State.

FEBRUARY 15, 1867.—Ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

Resolved by the senate of the State of Kansas, (the house of representatives concurring therein,) That our delegation in Congress be earnestly requested to urge upon the general government the necessity and justice of taking prompt measures to secure the protection of the western frontier of this State, by establishing a military post or permanent camp at some eligible point between and as near as may be equidistant from Forts Kearney and Harker.

Resolved, That the governor be requested to forward a copy of these resolutions to our delegation in Congress and to the Secretary of War.

Adopted by the senate February 2, 1867.

MEMORIAL
OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF MINNESOTA,

IN FAVOR OF

The establishment of a daily mail route from Owatonna to Albert Lea.

FEBRUARY 18, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads and ordered to be printed.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the legislature of the State of Minnesota respectfully represents: That that portion of this State lying between Owatonna and Albert Lea has a large and rapidly increasing population; that since the completion of railroads to Owatonna, all the mail destined for the counties south and west of said point passes through the post office at that place, and that the present service on the route between the points above named is clearly insufficient to supply the inhabitants along said line with necessary mail facilities.

Your memorialists would, therefore, respectfully but urgently ask that a daily mail service be placed upon said route, and as in duty bound will ever pray.

RESOLUTIONS
OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF MINNESOTA,

IN FAVOR OF

A treaty between the government and the Sioux Indians, with provisions securing to the government the right of way through the Sioux country to the Missouri river.

FEBRUARY 18, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

Whereas the opening of an emigrant route and the transportation of the mail through Minnesota and Dakota Territory to the gold regions of Montana and Idaho are of the greatest importance to the interests of the State; and whereas the Interior Department has invited a delegation of the friendly Sioux Indians, who, it is understood, are prepared to cede the right of way and guarantee the preservation of the frontier from depredations from hostile Sioux, and the safety of trade and mail transportation between Minnesota and the Missouri river, if the necessary assistance is afforded them by the government: Therefore,

Resolved by the senate, (the house concurring,) That the congressional delegation from this State be, and they are hereby, respectfully requested to afford such aid and assistance as may be practicable to secure the making and satisfaction of a treaty between the government and Sioux Indians, with provisions securing to the government the right of way through the Sioux country to the Missouri river, and security to mail transportation, to emigrant travel, and the movement of supplies across the plains.

Resolved, That the governor be, and he is hereby, requested to forward a copy of the above preamble and resolution to each of the members of Congress from this State.

RESOLUTION
OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF MINNESOTA, AGAINST

Any further reduction of the currency.

FEBRUARY 18, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

Whereas the financial condition of the country is depressed, as evidenced in the stagnation of trade, impaired confidence, and general distrust of the future, and in view of the fact that no general relief can be expected while the present apprehensions and uncertainty prevail; and whereas the continued reduction of the currency and rapid decline in values diminish the ability of our people to pay high taxes and discharge liabilities contracted when prices were higher and money more abundant, and it being evident that a stringent money market, if continued, will greatly retard the advancement of this State in her vast agricultural, manufacturing, and railroad interests; and whereas it is manifestly unjust to burden the people of the loyal States with excessive taxation for the purpose of liquidating the funded debt at this time, when the people of the south are unable to contribute, thereby relieving them of their proportionate share of the burden: Therefore,

Resolved by the senate, (the house concurring,) That, while it is desirable to return to specie payments whenever consistent with the business prosperity of the country, the further reduction of the currency at this time is dangerous and unwise; that national taxation should be adjusted with a view to defray the expenses of the government, maintain the public credit by the prompt payment of interest, and provide a comparatively small but gradually increasing sinking fund, thus leaving to times of more general prosperity among all the States, with increased population, commerce, and wealth, the rapid payment of the public debt. That our senators and representatives in Congress be requested to urge the carrying out of this intent of this resolution by appropriate legislation, and that the secretary of state is requested to transmit to each of them a copy of this resolution.

THE LEGISLATURE OF MICHIGAN,
IN FAVOR OF

An appropriation for the construction of a harbor near the mouth of Galien river, at New Buffalo, Berrien county.

FEBRUARY 18, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed.

Whereas the safety and interest of the great and growing commerce of our lakes demand a harbor and roadstead near the head of Lake Michigan, which would be accessible to vessels navigating the lake in the most violent storms that prevail there, viz., the north, northwest, and west winds; and whereas several United States officers, in charge of the lake harbor improvements, have reported in favor of such a harbor near the mouth of the Galien river, at New Buffalo, Berrien county, which would not only accommodate the local commerce of the lake, but would also be accessible and necessary to the maintenance of a national armed fleet on this lake in time of war: Therefore,

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the State of Michigan, That our senators and representatives in Congress be requested to use their influence to obtain from Congress an appropriation in money to aid in the construction of a harbor at New Buffalo, Berrien county.

Resolved, That the governor be requested to transmit a copy of the foregoing preamble and resolution to our senators and representatives in Congress.

RESOLUTION
OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF KANSAS,
IN FAVOR OF

A grant of land to aid in the construction of the St. Joseph and Denver City railroad.

FEBRUARY 20, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on the Pacific Railroad and ordered to be printed.

Whereas the Saint Joseph and Denver City Railroad Company have surveyed the route of said railroad from the Missouri river through the counties of Doniphan, Brown, Nemaha, Marshall, Washington and Republic, in the State of Kansas westward; and whereas the above named counties have ordered the issue of bonds to be subscribed as capital stock in said road ranging in the several counties from $100,000 to $150,000; and whereas said railroad is now graded to Troy, in Doniphan county; and whereas the completion of said railroad is of incalculable interest to the people of Kansas and to the general government: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be, and are hereby, memorialized to grant to said railroad company such amount in land or other means as will enable such railroad company to complete said road: That the secretary of state transmit a copy of this preamble and resolution to each of our senators and representative in Congress at an early day as practicable.

OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF KANSAS,
REQUESTING

The removal of Colonel J. H. Leavenworth, present agent of certain hostile Indians on the western and southwestern frontier of the State of Kansas.

FEBRUARY 20, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

To the Congress of the United States of America :

Whereas it has come to the knowledge of the legislature of the State of Kansas that Colonel J. H. Leavenworth, present agent of certain hostile tribes of Indians on the western and southwestern frontier of the State of Kansas, is wholly incompetent to perform the duties thereof; and whereas the settlers on said frontier are in imminent peril of their lives and property through said incompetency; and whereas, unless some competent person be appointed in his stead friendly to the whites, with nerve to meet our present wants and the emergency, our citizens will be butchered, as heretofore, in detail: Therefore,

Resolved by the house of representatives, (the senate concurring,) That the said Congress, and especially our delegation therein, be earnestly requested to see that said Leavenworth be removed, and a man substituted in his stead who will use his best and honest endeavors, while protecting the interests of the Indians, to save our citizens from slaughter.

RESOLUTIONS
OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF KANSAS,
IN FAVOR OF

The passage of the bill (S. 462) to admit the State of Colorado into the Union, the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding.

FEBRUARY 20, 1867.—Ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

Whereas the people of Kansas have heard with surprise and regret that the President of the United States has vetoed the bill admitting Colorado as a State; and whereas we believe that the best interests of the nation and the necessities of our own State demand the immediate admission of the young golden State of the west: Therefore,

Resolved by the senate of the State of Kansas, (the house of representatives concurring,) That we, in the name of Kansas and of our common country, earnestly urge the Congress of the United States to pass the said bill, the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding.

Resolved, That our senators be, and are hereby instructed, and our representative be requested, to vote and give their influence for the passage of said bill over the President's veto.

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be, and is hereby instructed, immediately upon the passage of these resolutions, to forward a copy of the same to each of our senators and our representative in Congress.

RESOLUTIONS
OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF MAINE,
IN RELATION TO
The ship-building interest of Maine.

FEBRUARY 21, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

Resolved, That this legislature views with alarm the depressed and suffering condition of the ship-building interests of the State, which condition has arisen, in a large degree, from the heavy duties imposed by Congress upon the foreign materials entering into the construction of ships, and other burdens imposed by government, and which are depriving our ship-builders of a successful competition with foreign-built ships, especially with those of the British North American provinces.

Resolved, That the memorial to Congress, adopted by the ship-builders of Maine, assembled in convention at Augusta on the thirtieth and thirty-first days of January last, in which is set forth the depressed and suffering condition of the ship-building and ship-owning interests of this State, as having been caused by the onerous burdens imposed by the government, and indicating in what manner relief should be afforded, should receive from Congress that attention which the great importance of the interests involved demands.

Resolved, That our senators and representatives in Congress be requested to use their best efforts to procure such legislation as will afford to the ship-builders and ship-owners of Maine that relief which they so ardently desire.

Resolved, That the governor be, and is hereby, requested to forward a copy of these resolves, with a copy of said memorial, to each of the senators and representatives in Congress from this State.

RESOLUTIONS
THE LEGISLATURE OF KANSAS,
IN FAVOR OF

A grant of lands to that State for school purposes, as an equivalent for the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections disposed of by the government.

FEBRUARY 20, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed.

Whereas a large amount of lands have been lost to the public school fund of the State of Kansas by the disposal and occupancy of Indian reservations within the limits of said State : Therefore,

Resolved by the senate, (the house of representatives concurring,) That Congress be hereby memorialized : First, to grant to the State of Kansas for school purposes, from the public lands now surveyed or which may be surveyed within the bounds of the State, an equivalent for the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections of the reservations already disposed of by the United States government and lying within the limits of the State of Kansas.

Second. That in all future treaties of Congress with Indian tribes holding reservations within the bounds of the State of Kansas, the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections of said reservation be set apart for the use of common schools.

Third. Resolved, That upon the passage of this resolution, the secretary of state be requested to furnish a copy of the same to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

MEMORIAL

OF A COMMITTEE APPOINTED BY

A CONVENTION OF SHIP-BUILDERS AND SHIP-OWNERS,

HELD IN

Augusta, Maine, January 30, 1867, praying that the ship-building interest of Maine may be relieved from the heavy burdens imposed on that branch of industry, through a drawback on duties on all foreign articles entering into the construction of ships.

FEBRUARY 21, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled :

GENTLEMEN : Your memorialists are a committee raised for a specific purpose by a large and intelligent convention of ship-builders and ship-owners held in Augusta, Maine, January thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

The following is the resolve under which they act :

“ Resolved, That a committee, consisting of honorable Samuel Cony, honorable N. G. Hichborn, honorable E. W. Stetson, honorable Isaiah Stetson, and honorable J. P. Morse, be raised to memorialize Congress and ask that the ship-building interest of Maine be relieved from the heavy burdens imposed by Congress upon this important branch of industry, through a drawback on duties on all foreign articles entering into the construction of ships.”

In accordance with the above instruction, your memorialists proceed to say that, among the prominent interests of Maine, doubtful if any are more so, is her navigable ; in fact, it is second to none but her agricultural.

She has usually had engaged in ship-building some six thousand to seven thousand men, and twice that number in sailing or navigating them. Some one hundred thousand persons are thus dependent upon the same for a livelihood.

So well adapted are the facilities and opportunities of Maine for prosecuting this essential branch of national, as well as State industry, and so energetically have her citizens pursued it, when untrammelled by onerous burdens, that she has actually constructed for a series of years, on an average, more than fifty per cent. of all the sea-going vessels of the country. This she will undoubtedly continue to do, but it is for Congress to decide whether that per centum shall be few or many.

If the onerous burdens now imposed by tariffs and taxes can be lightened, the hum of industry, as of yore, will be heard in our ship-yards ; ship-owners will again increase, and our commerce send Maine ships to bear our flag wherever civilization is known.

The effect of continuing such a policy must be not only to destroy the business, but actually to defeat the ends of the government in imposing the burdens. If no ships are built, of course no dutiable articles are consumed, and no revenue paid to the government. This is the simplest problem of arithmetic.

During the year ending June, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, one hundred and nine ships and barks were built in the United States. Maine built seventy-four of them; forty-six brigs were built, and Maine built thirty-four of them. The number built per year since has, probably, somewhat increased, the ratio built in Maine remaining about the same. These vessels have been built mainly from sales of ships out of the country during the rebellion, but so heavy has been the cost that they have ceased to be productive property, and hence little preparation is making for building in the future. High costs and unproductiveness are elements that never fail to check business.

It is estimated that some one hundred and twenty thousand tons of shipping were built in Maine during the last year, and from carefully prepared memoranda it is ascertained that the duties on articles actually entering into the construction of ships amount to about ten dollars per ton. This in the aggregate amounts to one million two hundred thousand dollars per annum—a sum equal to the whole taxation of the State. Such a burden cannot fail of its results. Relief must be had or the business dwindle to a close; our ship-yards be abandoned, our builders lose their business, and mechanics be discharged to seek other employ, and probably in other States.

Again: the law for collecting tonnage dues is so framed that a ship registered for the first time in December must pay for the full calendar year. Suppose the register to be dated December thirtieth, the ship must pay for a full year, thirty cents per ton, and then if she clear and happen into port in another district on January first, she must pay another thirty cents per ton. This is expensive and vexatious. It cannot be the intent of the law to tax a ship for time expiring before she is built or registered.

Once more: the admeasurement of the houses of ships, and entering the same in the register, works wrong in many ways to the owner, and but little comparative good to the government.

The excise tax, also, upon the manufacture of many articles, such as rigging, sails, tanks, &c., is unequal and onerous, and needs readjustment if not repealing.

Thus we have recited briefly the disabilities under which this specialty of Maine industry rests. If these disabilities upon ship-builders must continue, Maine must bear more than one-half the whole burden thus imposed upon the nation; and that, too, with but very slight compensative consideration. Maine has but comparatively few manufactories, grows but little wool, and produces no coal, and but very little iron; her's it seems to be "to do and bear." But it is not from local considerations alone that we urge relief in this direction. It involves, we think, a national question of no ordinary moment.

As has been well said by the Secretary of the Treasury, in his recent able report, the nations that build ships sail them; and if we cease to build we cease to sail, and hence ceases that hardy, practical training on the seas in merchant marine which so eminently fits our sailors for the defence of the country on the water in time of danger. Should the future, which we fear is not unlikely, find us engaged in a foreign war, its great battles must be fought on the seas; and it would be unpardonable for a nation of our means and experience not to have an extensive merchant marine from which to extemporize such men as so summarily sent the British built and manned Alabama to the bottom. Further than this, should a sudden conflict with a commercial nation arise, the extensive ship-yards of Maine, and her numerous strong-armed and well-skilled mechanics, may all be needed to meet the emergency.

Once more: commerce is now admitted to be the great equalizer and civilizer of the world; and it is our duty, as well as our privilege, to send our flag wherever intelligence is known. As it now is, our citizens, induced by the superior advantages offered in neighboring provinces, are taking our timber, carrying it to said provinces, there constructing their ships for foreign trade, and sending them abroad.

American ships, manned by American sailors, and bearing everywhere a foreign flag! Such a policy, long continued, can but work infinite wrong to our country and its institutions.

From such a condition your memorialists ask an intelligent and appreciative Congress to save the State and nation.

And as in duty bound, will ever pray.

SAMUEL CONY.

OF
THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY,
TO THE

Chairman of the Committee on Commerce, in relation to repealing the provisions of law allowing goods imported from foreign countries to go forward into the interior of the United States under seal and without inspection at the ports of entry.

FEBRUARY 23, 1867.—Ordered to be printed, to accompany bill S. No. 622.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
February 14, 1867.

SIR : I have the honor to acknowledge your letter of the 9th instant, transmitting a resolution passed by the Senate on the 31st of January, by which the Committee on Commerce were instructed to inquire into the expediency of repealing the laws authorizing imported goods to go forward into the interior of the United States under seal without inspection at the port of entry, and requesting information regarding the matter.

The privileges referred to are supposed to be those given by the second, third, fourth, and fifth sections of the smuggling act of June 27, 1864, which have application only to merchandise and baggage from foreign contiguous territory.

Similar privileges were recently in contemplation by some of the members of the House of Representatives for merchandise imported at Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore, from any foreign country, and at their request this department expressed its views to them on the subject, decidedly discouraging the proposed legislation, on the ground that better facilities exist at the principal seaports, where merchandise usually enters the country, for appraisement and ascertainment of duties than could be had at any interior port ; that the system proposed would if introduced entirely overturn the present one, because it could not be sustained as a partial one, but must be extended to all who demand it, if given to any ports ; and because, chiefly, it would render every precaution against smuggling useless and of no avail ; for it has been the experience of this department that custom-house seals, locks, and all other contrivances that have been devised are but a poor and inefficient substitute for an actual examination, appraisement, and bonding of imported merchandise. Upon the same principles the department does not hesitate to characterize the relaxations of the former stringent rules, made by the sections above named in the law of 1864, as, in the light of experience, dangerous and useless, and consequently to recommend the repeal of those sections.

I am, sir, very respectfully,

H. McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. Z. CHANDLER,
Chairman Committee on Commerce, Senate.

THE BOARD OF THE COMMISSIONER OF THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE

RE: THE PROPOSED REVISION OF THE ACT OF 1862

DEAR SIR:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 10th inst. in relation to the proposed revision of the Act of 1862, and in reply to inform you that the same has been forwarded to the proper authorities for their consideration. The Act of 1862, which relates to the sale of public lands, has been the subject of much discussion and debate, and it is believed that the proposed revision will be of great benefit to the Government. The proposed revision is now being considered by the Board of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and it is expected that a decision will be reached in the near future. I am, Sir, very respectfully,
Yours very truly,

MEMORIAL
OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF MINNESOTA,

IN FAVOR OF

A survey of the Mississippi river between the falls of St. Anthony and St. Cloud, and the improvement of the navigation of that river between those points.

FEBRUARY 23, 1867.—Ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

*To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States
in Congress assembled:*

The legislature of the State of Minnesota would most respectfully represent, That the upper Mississippi river, from the falls of St. Anthony to St. Cloud, Minnesota, a distance of about eighty miles, might be made navigable for steamboats, flatboats, and barges, during more than seven months in the year, by means of slackwater improvements; that the interests of the northern portions of this State demand the improvement of said river between said points.

Your memorialists would therefore respectfully urge that you provide by law for the survey of said river between said points, with a view to the improvement of the navigation of the same by means of slackwater, and that you provide by law for the improvement of the same.

RESOLUTIONS
OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF WISCONSIN,

RATIFYING THE

Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, proposed to the several States by a joint resolution of the two houses of Congress passed on the 13th day of June, 1866.

FEBRUARY 22, 1867.—Ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

STATE OF WISCONSIN,

Office of Secretary of State, ss :

I, Thomas S. Allen, secretary of state of the State of Wisconsin, do hereby certify that the annexed has been compared with the original enrolled joint resolution deposited in this office, and that the same is a true and correct copy thereof, and of the whole of such original.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State, at the capitol, in Madison, this 15th day of February, A. D. 1867.

[SEAL.]

THOS. S. ALLEN,
Secretary of State.

Whereas the Congress of the United States has, pursuant to article fifth of the Constitution, proposed to the legislatures of the several States the following amendments to the Constitution of the United States, namely :

ARTICLE XIV.

SECTION 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

SEC. 2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But whenever the right to vote at any election for electors of President and Vice-President, or for United States representatives in Congress, executive or judicial officers, or the members of the legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State, being twenty-one years of age and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crimes, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced to the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State.

SEC. 3. No person shall be a senator or representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice-President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or under any State, who, having previously taken an oath as a member of Congress, or as a member of any State legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof; but Congress may, by a two-thirds vote of each house, remove such disability.

SEC. 4. The validity of the public debt of the United States authorized by law, including debts incurred for the payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing the insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned; but neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim in the loss or emancipation of any slave; but all such debts, obligations, and claims shall be held illegal and void.

SEC. 5. That Congress shall have power to enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of this article: Therefore,

Resolved by the senate and assembly of the State of Wisconsin, in legislature assembled, That the said article, as such proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States, be, and the same is hereby, ratified.

REQUESTING

Hon. David T. Patterson to resign his seat in the United States Senate.

FEBRUARY 25, 1867.—Read, ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

Whereas the Hon. David T. Patterson, senator in the United States Senate from the State of Tennessee, was elected by this general assembly as a member of the National Republican Union party, in full confidence that he was a true and sincere member of that party—the party which preserved the national unity, and would in good faith support its principles and measures; and whereas, greatly to the surprise and regret of this general assembly, and the loyal people of Tennessee, he has identified himself with the so-called Democratic party—the party which for four years endeavored to destroy the national unity, and is giving it his support—

Resolved, By reason thereof, Senator Patterson has ceased to have the confidence of this general assembly and the loyal people of Tennessee, and is hereby respectfully requested to resign the seat which he now holds in the Senate of the United States from the State of Tennessee.

Resolved, That the secretary of state of the State of Tennessee be directed to enclose to Senator Patterson a copy of this resolution, and also to enclose a copy to the President of the Senate of the United States.

Adopted February 7, 1867.

J. S. MULLOY,
Speaker pro tem. of the House of Representatives.
JOSHUA B. FRIERSON,
Speaker of the Senate.

I, Andrew J. Fletcher, secretary of state of the State of Tennessee, do certify that the foregoing is a copy of a joint resolution of the general assembly of the State of Tennessee, the original of which is now on file in my office.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto subscribed my official signature, and, by order of the governor, affixed the great seal of the State of Tennessee at the department in the city of Nashville, this 16th day of February, A. D. 1867.

MEMORIAL
THE LEGISLATURE OF WISCONSIN,
IN FAVOR OF

An appropriation to improve the harbor at Père Marquette, Michigan.

FEBRUARY 26, 1867.—Ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

*To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States
in Congress assembled:*

The memorial of the legislature of the State of Wisconsin respectfully represents, that while the commerce of Lake Michigan is national in importance, and its aggregation annually increasing, requiring the tonnage of a large number of steamers and vessels, there is scarcely a safe harbor for shelter on the eastern coast of said lake.

Your memorialists would, therefore, earnestly pray for a liberal appropriation by Congress to improve the harbor at Père Marquette, Michigan, so as to make it a harbor of safe resort for all classes of vessels navigating said lake, and also to accommodate the rapidly-increasing commerce at that point, by reason of its being the terminus on Lake Michigan of the Flint and Père Marquette railroad in the State of Michigan.

Be it therefore resolved by the senate, (the assembly concurring,) That the governor be, and he is hereby, authorized and requested to affix his official signature hereto, and forward a copy of this memorial to the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives in the Congress of the United States.

ANGUS CAMERON,
Speaker of the Assembly.
GEO. F. WHEELER,
President of the Senate pro tem.

LUCIUS FAIRCHILD,
Governor.

STATE OF WISCONSIN, Secretary's Office, ss:

The secretary of state of the State of Wisconsin hereby certifies that the foregoing has been compared with the original enrolled memorial deposited in this office, and that the same is a true and correct copy thereof, and of the whole of such original.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State, at the Capitol in Madison, this twenty-first day of February, A. D. 1867.

RESOLUTIONS
THE LEGISLATURE OF ILLINOIS
IN FAVOR OF

The survey of the Des Moines rapids of the Mississippi, with a view to the improvement of said rapids by the construction of a canal, under the authority of Congress.

FEBRUARY 23, 1867.—Ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

Whereas the Des Moines rapids of the Mississippi seriously obstruct the navigation of said river, and it is proposed to overcome those obstructions by a canal to be located and constructed by and under the authority of Congress: Therefore,

Resolved, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives be requested, by all proper and legitimate means to have such a survey made of both the Iowa and Illinois sides of said river on the Des Moines rapids, before the location of such canal, as to demonstrate clearly on which side of said river a canal can be constructed to the best advantage, taking into consideration the length of the canal, ease and expense of construction, advantages as well as obstructions to the free navigation of the river; that they also endeavor to obtain the location of said canal on this side of the river, if the same can be done at the same expense, and will be of equal advantage to navigation as if constructed on the Iowa side of the river.

Resolved, That the secretary of state immediately forward to each of our senators and representatives in Congress a copy of the foregoing resolution.

T. CORWIN,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

WM. BROSS,

Speaker of the Senate.

OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF MICHIGAN,
IN FAVOR OF

An appropriation to aid in the improvement of the channel of navigation between Lake Superior and Eagle Harbor, in the county of Keweenaw.

FEBRUARY 26, 1867,—Referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed.

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the State of Michigan, That our senators and representatives in Congress be requested to use their influence to procure a grant by Congress to this State of one hundred thousand acres of land, to aid in the improvement of the channel of navigation between Lake Superior and the waters of Eagle Harbor, in the county of Keweenaw, on said lake, by deepening and widening the said channel, so that the same shall be not less than fourteen feet in depth and eighty feet in width at the bottom.

Resolved, That the governor be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit copies of the foregoing resolution to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

RESOLUTIONS
THE LEGISLATURE OF MICHIGAN,

IN FAVOR OF

An appropriation for the completion of the harbor of White river.

FEBRUARY 26, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed.

Whereas White River harbor, at the mouth of White river, in Muskegon county, is inadequate and insufficient to accommodate, without great extra cost and delay to the shipping interest of that locality; and whereas within the last six months there has been a government survey of said harbor, in the report of which the necessity and importance of the work is fully and fairly set forth; and whereas not only the interests of that locality, but the whole marine interests of Lake Michigan, are directly interested therein—

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the State of Michigan, That our senators and representative in Congress are requested to use all honorable means to procure an appropriation of money for the completion of the harbor of White river.

Resolved, That his excellency the governor be requested to transmit copies of the foregoing preamble and resolution to our senators and representatives in Congress.

MEMORIAL
THE LEGISLATURE OF WISCONSIN,
IN FAVOR OF

The establishment of a tri-weekly mail route from Rural to New London, in said State.

FEBRUARY 26, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, and ordered to be printed.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled :

The memorial of the legislature of the State of Wisconsin respectfully represents : That the interest and convenience of all the inhabitants of Waupaca county require the establishment of a tri-weekly mail route from Rural, in the town of Dayton, Waupaca county, Wisconsin, by way of Waupaca, Ogdensburg, Little Wolf, North Royalton, and Northport, to New London, in the same county, and that this is a necessity, and has been for a long period of time, to the inhabitants of said county ; and your memorialists would respectfully ask that the route be established at as early a period as possible.

THE LEGISLATURE OF MICHIGAN,
IN FAVOR OF
A donation of lands to endow female colleges in the several States.

FEBRUARY 26, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on the Library and ordered to be printed.

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the State of Michigan,
That the legislature of the State of Michigan hereby renews the request made by the preceding legislature, that our senators and representatives in Congress use their influence to procure a donation of lands by Congress to endow female colleges in the several States.

RESOLUTIONS
OF
THE LEGISLATURE OF MICHIGAN,

IN FAVOR OF

Protection to the fisheries of that State in the upper peninsula, to the people of said State, and of the United States.

FEBRUARY 26, 1867.—Referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed.

Whereas reliable information has been received that persons not citizens of this State nor of the United States are in the practice of temporarily emigrating to the fisheries of this State, in the upper peninsula, for the purpose of catching and carrying away large quantities of fish during the fishing season, and thereby evading the payment of all taxes for the support of the State, or of the general government; and whereas these proceedings are unlawful, and contrary to the best interests of a large class of the industrious citizens of this State, who depend solely for a living on this precarious branch of commerce: Therefore—

Resolved, That the attention of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States be called to this gross violation of the rights of the citizens of this State and of the United States, with a request that a revenue cutter be despatched, at the opening of navigation, to the straits of Michilimackinac, to stop these unlawful proceedings.

Resolved, That his excellency the governor be requested to transmit a certified copy of the foregoing preamble and resolution to the said Secretary of the Treasury.

RESOLUTIONS
THE LEGISLATURE OF NEVADA,

IN FAVOR OF

Increasing the size and capacity of the mint now being erected in Carson City.

MARCH 1, 1867.—Ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

*To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States
in Congress assembled :*

The legislature of the State of Nevada, your memorialists, would most respectfully represent that the product of bullion in the State of Nevada for the year 1866 exceeded eighteen millions of dollars; for the following year it is liable to exceed rather than fall short of twenty-two millions. With increased facilities and cheapness of transportation, a lower rate of investment for capital to be employed in mining, and a removal of some of the burdensome exactions under which the mines are now laboring, the amount of production might be increased to an extent which would seem almost incredible to those not familiar with the vast extent of our mineral ledges. One of the burdens under which our mines are laboring, and from which it is in the power of the government to relieve them, is a heavy percentage of loss in converting their bullion into coin and merchantable bars of refined silver. When the miner has extracted his crude bullion from the ore, he has first to pay to a private assayer one (1) per cent. for melting and assaying it; then, if he disposes of it at the assay office, he must sell it for coin at a discount of about three (3) per cent. from the mint value, as the mint value is half ($\frac{1}{2}$) per cent. (the government charge for coining) less than the same weight of gold coin. The millman or miner really pays for converting his bullion into coin about as follows: to assayer, for melting, &c., one (1) per cent.; to assayer or banker, for discount, three (3) per cent.; for government mintage, half ($\frac{1}{2}$) per cent.; in all, four and one-half ($4\frac{1}{2}$) per cent. If, instead of selling his bullion at a discount of three (3) per cent. to the assayer or banker, (who advances for the assayer,) the miner ships his bullion to the mint at San Francisco, he has to pay from one (1) to one and one-half ($1\frac{1}{2}$) per cent. for freight and insurance to San Francisco, and at least one and one-half ($1\frac{1}{2}$) per cent. for freight and insurance on the return coin, adding to the interest on the coin, while waiting for a return, at the established rates charged by the bankers in this State, and he is no better off than if he sold at a discount of three (3) per cent.

Your memorialists would, therefore, humbly suggest that if the United States government would so increase the size and capacity of the mint now being erected in Carson City as to enable that institution to part and refine all the bullion produced in the State of Nevada, coining the gold and delivering the silver in unadulterated bars, with the weight and value marked thereon, the miners would get their bullion into an available form, with a saving to them of not less than three (3) per cent., and with no loss to the government furnishing the facilities for so doing.

Your memorialists would further suggest that if the government keep a fund at the mint, and advance to depositors of bullion a part or the whole of the value of their bullion as soon as assayed, it would greatly relieve the mining community, and tend to develop the mineral resources of the State, and with a profit, rather than a loss, to the government.

Resolved, That our senators be instructed, and our representative in Congress requested, to bring the subject of this memorial before their respective houses, and take such steps as will be best calculated to procure a favorable hearing and action thereon.

Resolved further, That the governor be requested to forward copies of this memorial and resolutions to each of our senators and representative in Congress.

C. N. NOTEWARE,

Secretary of State

REPORT

OF THE

ADJUTANT GENERAL OF THE STATE OF ARKANSAS,

FOR

The period of the late rebellion, and to November 1, 1866.

NOTE.

In November last the following report was submitted, in manuscript, to the legislature of the State of Arkansas, as a document accompanying the governor's message. That body, however, disregarding the governor's recommendation that by their order it should be printed, and having otherwise shown their hostility to the efficient management of the adjutant general's office, my petition to Congress for the publication of this report, in order that some record might be preserved of the loyal soldiery of a rebellious State, was, on the 25th ultimo, presented by Hon. Henry Wilson, chairman of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs. Subsequently the following proceedings were had:

"IN SENATE, Friday, February 15, 1867.

"ARKANSAS LOYAL TROOPS.

"MR. ANTHONY. The Committee on Printing, to whom was referred a memorial of Albert W. Bishop, adjutant general of Arkansas, praying that an appropriation be made for the publication of his report presented to the legislature of that State, have instructed me to report a resolution in conformity with the prayer of the memorialist; and, if the Senate will now indulge me, I will state the object of the resolution, and ask for its present consideration, if no one objects, because as the Senate nearly always indulges the Committee on Printing with the present consideration of their resolutions, I do not wish to ask for it unless it is necessary for the public service. All the loyal States have prepared rosters of the men who served in the loyal army, and they have been published, with the reports of the adjutants general of the various States.

"The State of Arkansas furnished over ten thousand men to the loyal army. The adjutant general presented his report, with a roster of those names, to the legislature of that State, which is now under disloyal control, and they have refused to publish it, so that there is no record whatever of the services of these gallant men. It seemed to the committee that it was due to them that this dereliction on the part of their own State should be made up by Congress. They have also received a letter from General Grant, strongly urging the publication of the report. Now, if no senator objects, I ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

"By unanimous consent the Senate proceeded to consider the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the report of Albert W. Bishop, adjutant general of Arkansas, be printed for the use of the Senate, and that one thousand extra copies be printed for the use of the adjutant general of Arkansas, to be distributed among the loyal officers of that State mentioned therein.

"The resolution was agreed to."

For this recognition of their military services in sustaining the national flag and defending the honor of a common country, the Union men of Arkansas are profoundly grateful to the Senate of the United States and General Grant.

ALBERT W. BISHOP,
Adjutant General of Arkansas.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 1867.

HEADQUARTERS STATE OF ARKANSAS,
ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Little Rock, November 1, 1866.

GOVERNOR: I have the honor to transmit herewith my report of the organization and operations of the loyal troops of the State during the late rebellion, and the transactions of this department since the establishment of the present State government.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ALBERT W. BISHOP,
Adjutant General.

His Excellency ISAAC MURPHY,
Governor of Arkansas.

REPORT.

The gathering storm of 1860 was nowhere more sincerely regretted than by thousands in the south. In this State there was sincere devotion to the Union, but her power was mainly wielded by open or concealed enemies of the general government, and it was impossible to stay the tide that swept her into rebellion.

On the 6th day of May, 1861, the State assumed to secede. Union men who were members of the convention, and even signed the ordinance of secession, and those who sympathized with them throughout the State, were for many months powerless in council and the field, and some, indeed, never threw off their enforced adhesion to the southern confederacy until the war had ceased, and the confederacy itself was hopelessly shattered. For nearly a year, in fact, after this attempted secession of the State, there was a substantial want of concert of action among Union men, and they quietly submitted to what they could not prevent, or fled for security to the caves and hills. Thus wore away the first year of the war.

After the battle of Pea Ridge, in March, 1862, and while General Curtis was traversing the northern portion of the State from the Upper White river to Helena, on the Mississippi, the Union men of Arkansas began to appear within the federal lines, and efforts for their military organization were promptly made. Some of them, meantime, participated in the battle referred to, fighting with whatever regiment they fell in with; and when General Curtis arrived at Batesville, he found several hundred men ready to enter the service of the United States. For weeks they had been partly organized, and were only waiting a favorable opportunity to identify themselves more efficiently with the Union cause. Accompanying the army to Helena, they entered the service as mounted infantry. For an account of their organization and services, attention is called to Appendix A.

The successful issue of the battle of Pea Ridge was the signal for loyal citizens, especially in northwestern Arkansas, to leave their homes for the federal lines. Many came, also, from the woods where for months they had secreted themselves, and shortly there assembled at Cassville, Missouri, a number sufficient to warrant the organization of a company. M. La Rue Harrison, of the thirty-sixth Illinois infantry volunteers, then post quartermaster at the place last mentioned, conceived the idea of effecting this organization, and with great assiduity immediately set about the accomplishment of his purpose. A company was promptly organized, with himself as captain, and attached to the sixth Missouri cavalry volunteers, then commanded by Colonel Clark Wright.

Loyal Arkansians, however, continuing still to cross the border, Colonel Harrison (as he afterwards became) now determined to raise a regiment, and one to be known distinctively as an Arkansas organization. Without delay he applied to the Secretary of War for authority to raise the first regiment of Arkansas cavalry volunteers. Hon. John S. Phelps, of Missouri, then in Washington, heartily seconded his efforts, and by dint of no little persistency succeeded in obtaining a special order to raise the regiment. At first the department was averse to granting the order, but the loyalty of these men admitted of no doubt, and on the 16th day of June, 1862, the order was issued.

As will more fully appear from Appendix A, the raising of this regiment gave great encouragement to loyal citizens of the State, especially in the northwest, and was followed, as soon as circumstances would allow, by the organization and muster in for three years or during the war of the first and second regiments of Arkansas infantry, the second Arkansas cavalry, and battery A, first Arkansas light artillery. To the commanders of these and all other organizations sent by Arkansas into the field to maintain the integrity of the Union, great credit is due for the prosecution of their labors under circumstances both extraordinary and anomalous.

A large proportion of the population of the State had in one form or another identified themselves with the rebellion. Public sentiment was disloyal, and a citizen of the State could do no act so odious to the majority as enlisting in the federal army. It was regarded as the clearest evidence of treason, and for a time there was a strong disposition not to accord to "Arkansas federals," as they were termed, the rights of prisoners of war. Happily, however, wiser counsels prevailed, and this feature in warfare, which at first seemed to be culminating in the worst form of retaliation, was no longer observable.

After the occupation of Helena by the United States forces in the summer of 1862, it was thought advisable that a military governor for the State should be created, and a commission was accordingly issued to Hon. John S. Phelps, to whom the following instructions were given:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, July 19, 1862.

SIR: The commission you have received expresses on its face the nature and extent of the duties and power devolved on you by the appointment of military governor of Arkansas.

Instructions have been given to Major General Butler to aid you in the performance of your duty and the exercise of your authority. He has also been instructed to detail an adequate military force for the special purpose of a governor's guard, and to act under your directions.

It is obvious to you that the great purpose of your appointment is to re-establish the authority of the federal government in the State of Arkansas, and to provide the means of maintaining peace and security to the loyal inhabitants of that State, until they shall be able to re-establish a civil government. Upon your wisdom and energetic action much will depend in accomplishing that result. It is not deemed necessary to give any specific instructions, but rather to confide in your sound discretion to adopt such measures as circumstances may demand. Specific instructions will be given when requested. You may rely upon the perfect confidence and full support of the department in the performance of your duties.

With respect, I am, your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

HON. JOHN S. PHELPS,
Military Governor of Arkansas.

Establishing his headquarters at Helena, Governor Phelps discharged the duties of his position as the exigency of the times allowed, organizing the second Arkansas cavalry, and commissioning various officers in other State organizations, until July, 1863, when the maintenance of a military governorship being no longer considered necessary, the following order was promulgated:

[General Orders No. 211.]

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, July 9, 1863.

Order abolishing military governorship of Arkansas.

Ordered, That the appointment of John S. Phelps, as military governor of the State of Arkansas, and of Amos F. Eno, as secretary, be revoked, and the office of military governor in said State is abolished, and that all authority, appointments, and power heretofore granted to and exercised by them, or either of them, as military governor or secretary, or by any person or persons appointed by or acting under them, is hereby revoked and annulled.

By order of the President:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Though the powers conferred upon Governor Phelps were, by the terms of this order, "revoked and annulled," the commissions issued by him to officers of Arkansas regiments were not invalidated, and in every respect the operations of these troops continued as before, the War Department having always in fact had substantial control over them.

After the occupation of Little Rock by the army of Arkansas in September, 1863, Major General F. Steele commanding, authority was given by him to raise the 3d and 4th regiments of Arkansas cavalry volunteers and the 4th regiment of Arkansas mounted infantry, which was done, wholly as to the first two commands, and partly as to the last, and all of which entered upon active duty. For a sketch of their organization and services, attention is called to the memoranda accompanying rosters in Appendix A.

On the organization of the provisional government of the State in January, 1864, Captain C. A. Henry, assistant quartermaster United States volunteers, was appointed provisional adjutant general; and on the establishment of the present State government in April of the same year, F. M. Sams, then adjutant of the 1st Arkansas infantry volunteers, was duly commissioned as adjutant general of the State. Meantime, although the present State government had not been fully recognized at Washington by the admission of members of Congress, your excellency had issued a large number of commissions to officers in Arkansas regiments, upon which they were duly mustered into the service. In September of the same year I was commissioned adjutant general, and entered on duty November 15.

On the 13th day of December General Steele, then commanding the department of Arkansas, received an order from the commanding general of the division of West Mississippi directing the immediate evacuation of Fort Smith and its dependencies. The execution of this order being considered by your excellency disastrous to the State, you directed me to proceed at once to Washington to do what I could to procure its countermand. For the particulars of the mission, and its ultimate accomplishment, your attention is called to the documents herewith transmitted, marked Appendix B.

In February, 1865, under the supervision of Major General J. J. Reynolds, commanding the department of Arkansas, the organization of a local militia, without expense to the State, and for the double purpose of protection and the cultivation of the soil, was begun. During that and the present year, sixty-three commissions have been issued to captains of companies, the most of them in the spring and summer of 1865; but the peculiar exigency for the organization of these companies having in most localities passed away, very few of them are now existing.

Commanding officers were instructed to enlist their men for mutual protection and the defence of their homes and property; they were to report to and be governed by the orders of the nearest military post commandant in all that pertained to the equipment and military discipline of their commands, furnishing such commandants with company rolls, and such statistical returns as they might require, and in the general administration of affairs were to be governed by the letter of instructions of which the following is a copy:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, STATE OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, 1865.

In issuing the attached authority, especial confidence is reposed in your integrity and ability to command; the measure of your success will determine the wisdom of the selection. You are encouraged to expect aid from the commander of the military department, who will cause arms and ammunition to be furnished for your defence, and will render such other assistance as your necessities may require until you have means for self-support.

It is expected that you will impress those enlisted under you that they are not organized as soldiers, but as farmers, mutually pledged to protect each other from the depredations of outlaws who infest the State. The main object of all must be the raising of such crops as will secure subsistence to families dependent upon them for support. The magnitude of your agricultural operations will be the full capacity of manual labor at your command, as the combined strength of the productive labor of the State is demanded in the impending emergency to prevent starvation of citizens.

Idlers should not be permitted to domicile in your colony; their influence is mischievous, and they consume means which should be contributed to the helpless.

All able-bodied male persons in your community should be identified with your organization, there being mutual obligations for self-protection, and none should be defended who refuse to join in the common cause.

Monthly reports in detail of all that pertains to appropriation of labor, prospects for crops, and the general administration of affairs, will be made by you to this office.

Very respectfully, &c.,

ISAAC MURPHY,
Governor of Arkansas.

To _____,
Commanding Company of Militia, _____ County, Arkansas.

The surrender of Lieutenant General E. Kirby Smith, commanding the Trans-Mississippi department of the Confederate States, May 26, 1865, did away, to a very great extent, with the necessity for these companies. Quite a number of block-houses had, however, been previously built, and the loyally disposed portion of the farming population of the State were at work in communities, some of the members standing guard, while others held the plough. In northwestern Arkansas especially was this system pursued, and great material good resulted to the several counties constituting this portion of the State. Crops were planted that otherwise would not have been, and much anticipated suffering and want were thereby avoided.

An occasional company is still organized, and it is gratifying to know that the policy heretofore pursued in this regard meets the approval of Major General

Ord, now commanding the department of the Arkansas, and will be carried out by him so far as it may be considered advisable to do so. For roster of officers your attention is called to Appendix C.

The principal object of these companies being to preserve peace and good order in neighborhoods where disturbances are known to have happened, or there is good reason to apprehend them, and where it is not considered necessary to station United States troops, they have been organized of men who are believed to be quiet and well-disposed citizens of the United States government, and no restriction is placed upon the enrolling of those who, during the late war, attached their fortunes to the southern confederacy, if they are now really desirous of living in peace with those with whom they were then at variance, and will aid in suppressing violence of persons and depredations upon property.

I do not regard it advisable, at present, to put any other militia system in practical operation, and I have, therefore, in this report, no suggestions to make with reference to that revision of the militia laws of the State which, in the progress of events, may become necessary.*

During the rebellion several organizations of local militia became necessary, but expired with the emergency that gave them rise. Created under department and district orders, their records have never been on file in this office, but their duties were at times quite arduous, and the services rendered by them were efficient.

In accordance with orders from headquarters of the military division of West Mississippi, a draft was undertaken in the State, in the latter part of the year 1864, but the course pursued was not approved by the Provost Marshal General of the United States, and no drafted men from Arkansas entered the service, although a regiment was partially organized, of which John B. Kirkwood, of Little Rock, was appointed lieutenant colonel, by General Steele, then commanding the department of Arkansas. To quite a considerable extent, citizens of Arkansas were enlisted during the war in Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Indiana, and Illinois regiments, while on duty in the State, but their number and military history I am unable to give. Of the following case, however, I am able and deem it proper to make special mention. Early in 1861 George G. Shumard, M. D., then a resident of Fort Smith, was compelled to leave the State. In April of that year he was appointed surgeon general of Ohio, and subsequently served with distinction as a medical officer, contributing largely to the efficiency of the army in the campaigns of that year in Virginia, Kentucky, and Tennessee.

In August, 1861, he was appointed a surgeon of volunteers, and afterwards became medical director of the district of Kentucky. In 1864 he was a prominent candidate for the surgeon generalship of the army, receiving recommendations from Governors Yates, Morton, Andrews, and Brough, Hon. James Speed, Attorney General, Hon. Joseph Holt, Judge Advocate General, Senators King of New York, and Lane of Indiana, Hon. Schuyler Colfax, Speaker of the House of Representatives, and other prominent men of the nation. Though failing to obtain this appointment, he otherwise served during the war. There was, also, enlisted in the State a large number of colored troops, for what were at first known as Arkansas organizations, and many of their muster-in rolls are now on file in this office. Their designations, however, were subsequently changed; copies of muster-in rolls ceased to be filed as indicated, and the control of these troops passed beyond the official knowledge of this office.

In July, 1855, a convention of adjutants general of States was held at Boston, Massachusetts, which, by your order, I attended, though I arrived too late to participate in the principal deliberations of the body. Nevertheless I had ample communication with most of its members, and was received with generous courtesy, the anomalous relations of our State to the Union being no restriction upon the full exercise of the privilege of representation.

* The protection of the loyal citizens of the State is still entrusted in a great measure to United States forces, and until civil government is re-established upon a thoroughly loyal basis, this element of strength and security cannot safely be dispensed with.

Among the subjects discussed in the convention, and in which Arkansas has an interest, was the propriety of the enactment by Congress of a general militia law, and when the convention adjourned, it was to reassemble at Washington, in March, 1866, where this subject was further to be considered. I did not attend the adjourned session, and such a law as was had under discussion has not yet been enacted.

On the return of the State archives, in the summer of 1865, I received a large number of muster-rolls and other documents belonging to the office of the confederate adjutant general of the State, which have been carefully preserved, and are now in this office.

By section six of an act of the legislature, entitled "An act amendatory of the militia laws of the State of Arkansas," approved January 21, 1861, the staff of the governor is made to consist of one adjutant general, one quartermaster general, one commissary general, one paymaster general, one inspector general, one judge advocate, one surgeon general, and such aides-de-camp as he may think proper to appoint. I respectfully suggest for your consideration, and any legislative action in the premises that you may think proper to recommend, that at least four of these offices should be consolidated, the adjutant general to be made ex officio quartermaster, commissary, and inspector general of the State. This is the case in some other States in the Union, and it is believed that similar legislation can with propriety be resorted to in Arkansas.

In fact, the offices of quartermaster, commissary, and inspector general have been nominal only since the organization of the existing State government, the former two not even having been filled. In this office, which you tendered to me in October, 1864, there have been constant duties to perform. Aside from the organization of the militia referred to, my necessary communication with departments at Washington has been frequent, and especially so since, by order of the Secretary of War, copies of the muster-out rolls of our regiments were placed on file in this office. I am constantly in receipt of applications from the Surgeon General of the army and the Commissioner of Pensions for official certificates of the enrolment, muster, duty, death, and cause of death of our deceased soldiers, to comply with which involves no trifling labor.

The adjustment of the claims of our soldiers for bounty, under the act of Congress of July 26, 1866, will also require consultation with this office, and the duties thus imposed upon me must be performed. By the Adjutant General of the army and many of the adjutants general of States, I have been asked to send them my report of the organization and operations of our troops during the war, and could only reply that I had not yet had an opportunity to make it.

For the disbursements of this department since my connection with it, aside from clerk hire which I have been compelled to pay from my own salary, your attention is called to the statement herewith submitted, marked Appendix D. For several months, however, after my acceptance of this office, when there was no money in the treasury, and State warrants had scarcely more than a nominal value, I paid all the expenses of the office, with the exception of a single small item, and could only dispose of the warrants issued to me for my own services at a sacrifice of from sixty to seventy-five per cent. But this period of stringency has passed, and it cannot but be a source of gratification to every one interested in the welfare of the State, that neither for this nor any other of the departments of its present government has any money been borrowed since the government itself went into operation.

ALBERT W. BISHOP,
Adjutant General.

FIRST ARKANSAS CAVALRY VOLUNTEERS.—HISTORICAL MEMORANDA.

On the 29th day of March, 1862, while the "Army of the Southwest" was lying at Cross Timbers, Missouri, M. La Rue Harrison, of the 36th Illinois infantry volunteers, applied for and received authority from General Curtis to recruit a company for the 6th Missouri cavalry volunteers, and proposed to enlist citizens of the State of Arkansas, many of whom had escaped conscription, and were then entering various regiments in the national army.

On the 12th of May, 1862, eleven men from Washington county, Arkansas, made their appearance at the post of Cassville, Missouri, and were sworn into the service of the United States; on the 18th of the same month about twenty more were added, and on the 1st of June the organization, numbering forty-five men, moved from Cassville to join a battalion of the 6th Missouri cavalry volunteers, then stationed at Forsyth, Missouri. On the march, Captain Harrison learned that many more than men enough to complete one squadron were on their way from Arkansas to join him, and he telegraphed to Hon. John S. Phelps, tendering through him, to the President, a regiment of loyal Arkansians for the United States volunteer army. On the following day a reply was received that the President would accept the regiment, provided it was completed within twenty days. Subsequent telegrams prolonged the time for an additional twenty days; and on the 3d day of July, 1862, the following letter was received:

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE, Washington, June 16, 1862.

SIR: The Secretary of War hereby authorizes you to raise a regiment of cavalry from the loyal men of Arkansas, to be completed by the 20th of July, and to be mustered into service, subsisted, clothed, mounted, and armed at Springfield, Missouri, by the United States government.

The regiment will be mustered into the service for three years or the war, and will be organized as prescribed by act of Congress, approved July 29, 1861, entitled "An act to increase the present military establishment of the United States," as follows:

[The form of organization, being substantially like that of other cavalry commands, is omitted.]

Lieutenant Colonel Mills, of the 24th Missouri volunteers, commanding at Springfield, Missouri, or other officer who may be placed in command at that place, will act as mustering officer, and will make the necessary requisitions for arms, accoutrements, horses, subsistence, medical stores, clothing, camp and garrison equipage, and all other supplies that may be required for the regiment, on the proper staff officers at St. Louis, Missouri, or other convenient place in the department of the Mississippi.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. LA RUE HARRISON, Esq., Springfield, Missouri.

L. THOMAS, Adjutant General.

Recruiting parties had already been sent into various parts of Arkansas, and squads of from six to thirty men were constantly arriving at Springfield and enlisting in the regiment. On the 20th of June a raid was made into Fayetteville, Arkansas, from Cassville, by a detachment of the 1st Missouri and 2d Wisconsin cavalry, under command of Major Hubbard, at which time 115 recruits were brought out, mostly from Washington county.

July 1, Captain Harrison, with about 200 recruits, left Cassville with the 37th Illinois infantry, and established his rendezvous at Springfield, Missouri. July 3, the authority for mustering having been received, four companies were mustered into the service, and on the 7th day of August a minimum regiment. On the 11th day of August Colonel Harrison was, by order of Brigadier General E. B. Brown, appointed chief engineer for the district of southwest Missouri. About the 1st of September the 1st battalion, under Major Johnson, was ordered to join the command of General Brown in the field, west of Mount Vernon, Missouri. It was engaged, September 15 and October 13, in the battles near Newtonia, Missouri, and during the campaign furnished most of the scouts, guides, and messengers for the army, besides being frequently engaged in skirmishes with the enemy's scouting and reconnoitring parties. On the 2d day of October, 1862, the regimental organization of twelve companies was completed.

On the 3d day of October the 2d battalion, having been mounted and armed, was sent to the southwest to join the Army of the Frontier, under General Schofield, and during that month it, with the 1st, constituted the advance of that army in its march through northwestern Arkansas. On the return of General Schofield, about the 20th of October, these battalions were stationed at Elkhorn Tavern and Cassville as outposts, and there remained until the next forward movement of that army. November 11, three companies of the 3d battalion, under command of Lieutenant Colonel Bishop, left Springfield and joined the regiment at Elkhorn Tavern, on Pea Ridge, which place was held by him as the extreme outpost south of the 2d and 3d divisions of the Army of the Frontier, until its second advance, which resulted in the battle of Prairie Grove.

On the 5th of December, in obedience to orders from General Herron, Colonel Harrison, who had been relieved from duty as chief engineer of the district of southwest Missouri, left Elkhorn with eight companies of the regiment and a train of twenty wagons, and moved forward to join General Blunt, then at Cane Hill, Arkansas. On the night of the 6th the detachment camped at Prairie Grove, ten miles southwest of Fayetteville. During the night orders were received from General Blunt for the detachment to move at daybreak and join General Solomon near Rhea's Mill. Messengers also brought information from General Blunt that the enemy were west of Cane Hill, and would probably attack him in the morning; that the road between himself and Colonel Harrison was clear.

At daylight on the morning of the 7th the detachment moved forward, but at sunrise was met by detachments of Missouri troops retreating, who had been attacked by Hindman's advance at their camp, two miles south of Illinois creek. A determined attack was made by the enemy at this point, and within half an hour a serious panic ensued, which resulted in the capture of the train of the 1st cavalry and the temporary demoralization of the regiment. Falling back to the Walnut Grove church, Colonel Harrison rallied his men upon the right of General Herron's army, which was met at that point, and advanced with it to Prairie Grove.

On the following day Colonel Harrison made a raid south to the Boston mountains, pursuing some of the routed detachments of Hindman's army, and capturing twenty-nine prisoners.

1863.—On the 8th of January a detachment, under command of Lieutenants Thompson and Vaughan, participated in the defeat of Marmaduke at Springfield, Missouri; Lieutenant Vaughan and Sergeant L. D. Jernigan were severely wounded during the engagement. About the 25th of January a detachment, commanded by Captain Galloway, participated in a raid into Van Buren, under command of Lieutenant Colonel Stuart, 10th Illinois cavalry, at which time a steamer and 315 prisoners were captured. On the 3d of February a detachment of eighty-three men, under Captain Galloway, routed 180 rebels near White Oak creek, in Franklin county, and on the following morning Captain R. E. Travis was mortally wounded in an attack upon a party of guerillas who had fortified themselves in a log-house near Thurlkill's ferry, on the Arkansas river.

On the 18th of April, at sunrise, the post of Fayetteville was attacked by the rebel General W. L. Cabell with a force of 1,200 men and two pieces of artillery. After four hours severe fighting he was routed with serious loss. The defending force consisted of about 350 men of the 1st Arkansas cavalry and a portion of four companies of the 1st Arkansas infantry. The remainder of the 1st infantry and one company of the 1st cavalry were held in reserve. Neither artillery nor defensive works of any kind were used by the national troops. About this time, owing to the ordering of large numbers of troops from the department of Missouri to Vicksburg, most of the distant outposts were withdrawn, and, in obedience to orders from General Curtis, Fayetteville was abandoned on the 25th of April, and its garrison arrived in Springfield, Missouri, on the 4th of May. On the 9th of August Captain R. H. Wimpy, with two mountain howitzers and a detachment of the regiment, joined Colonel Catherwood, 6th cavalry, Missouri State militia, in a raid southwest across the Arkansas river, participating in the engagements at Pineville, Missouri, Backbone mountain, Arkansas, and in several skirmishes, marching over 500 miles.

In September Colonel Harrison attacked a detachment of rebels under Coffee, in the Seneca Nation, pursuing them down the Indian line to Round Prairie, Arkansas, and on the 22d of that month the 1st cavalry re-occupied Fayetteville. On the 4th of October a detachment of the regiment, 450 strong, with two sections of battery A, 1st Arkansas light artillery, and one section of mountain howitzers, under command of Colonel Harrison, left Fayetteville in pursuit of the rebel General Shelby, who at the time was moving north from Neosho, Missouri, with 2,000 men and two pieces of artillery. Marching through Pineville, Newtonia, Granby, Carthage, Lamar, and Greenfield towards Warsaw, countermarching orders turned the column towards Bowers's Mill, and thence by way of Mount Vernon and Cassville to Fayetteville to relieve the garrison at that place, which was being seriously threatened by a superior force under the rebel Colonel Brooks. At sunrise on the 15th of October a part of the detachment, while in camp at Cross Timbers, and having in charge a train of 25 wagons loaded with supplies for Fayetteville, was attacked by Brooks, but through the timely return of Colonel Harrison, who, having gone forward towards Fayetteville with a portion of his men, had heard the firing, the attack was repelled. On the 23d of October a portion of the regiment, with its howitzer battery, under command of Major Hunt, joined General McNeil at Huntsville, taking the advance in the pursuit of General Shelby across the Arkansas river.

On the 7th of November an expedition, 435 strong, under Colonel Harrison, left Fayetteville, moving eastward, and on the morning of the 9th routed a force of rebels near King's river; and again on the following day, at sunrise at Kingston, at noon on the Dry fork of King's river, and in the evening near Mulberry mountain. On the 11th and 12th Captain John I. Worthington drove the same irregular forces across the Arkansas river, carrying his howitzers by hand across the Frog Bayou mountain; and on the 23d and 25th engaged and routed bands of guerillas near Sugar Loaf mountain, in Marion county, and on Richland creek, in Searcy county—the last time with considerable loss. Lieutenant L. D. Jernigan was here severely wounded and taken prisoner.

1864.—During the months of January and February a detachment of the regiment, commanded by Captains Galloway and Boteführ, served in Carroll, Marion, and Searcy counties, under orders from Brigadier General C. B. Holland, from the district of southwest Missouri. They were engaged repeatedly with the enemy, and received high praise in General Holland's official report.

During this year detachments of the regiment were very frequently engaged with guerillas, who were still infesting northwestern Arkansas, and on the 28th of October a concerted attack upon Fayetteville was defeated. On the 3d of October the town was again attacked by a largely superior force, detached from General Price's army, then lying at Cane Hill, the whole under the command of Major General Fagan. The defending force consisted of about 800 of the 1st Arkansas cavalry and such home guards, citizens, and stragglers as could be brought together, the whole numbering 1,128 men. A fort and rifle-pits had been constructed, and the attack, though not pressed with all the vigor that was apprehended, was continued persistently through the day, several attempts to gain the fort and rifle-pits being gallantly repelled. On the following morning the army of General Curtis, then in pursuit of Price, arrived, and, re-enforced by the 1st cavalry, continued the pursuit to the Arkansas river. Here the great raid terminated, and with it active operations on this portion of the frontier.

All summer long the 1st cavalry had been actively employed against the enemy, who increased in strength until in the autumn they swarmed through the country; but Price's retreat and the approach of winter secured, for a time, comparative quiet.

1865.—During this year a relentless warfare was carried on against the small bands of guerillas who infested northwestern Arkansas, and many were killed. The news of the surrender of General E. Kirby Smith, then commanding the Trans-Mississippi department of the Confederate States, was not received in northwestern Arkansas until about the 1st of July, after which quiet was mainly restored; and on the 23d of August the 1st Arkansas cavalry was mustered out of the service. From May, 1863, until the disbanding of the regiment a cornet band was maintained at the private expense of the officers, and at the close of the war the instruments were presented to the city of Fayetteville.

SECOND ARKANSAS CAVALRY VOLUNTEERS.—HISTORICAL MEMORANDA.

In July, 1862, authority was given to Colonel W. James Morgan, of Missouri, to raise a regiment, to be called the First Arkansas Mounted Rangers, and his headquarters and rendezvous were established at Helena. Nearly four hundred recruits were enrolled, and company A, Captain J. William Demby, and company B, Captain Archibald B. Freeburn, were organized and mustered into the service. Many circumstances had already unfortunately transpired to make the men displeased with their position. Their location was unhealthy; they were ignorant of the economy of a soldier's life; age had incapacitated many of them for duty; sickness was prevailing to an unusual extent; and, to add to their embarrassments, Colonel Morgan was dismissed the service. Company C at this time lacked but a few men of its minimum, and when Colonel Morgan's dismissal became known desertions were frequent, and the company was never mustered in. The designation of the regiment was now changed by Governor Phelps to the "Second Arkansas Cavalry volunteers." Recruiting still continued, but under many discouraging circumstances, and, at last, to the relief of all, the following order was issued:

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF EAST ARKANSAS, Helena, May 2, 1863.

Special Orders, No. 69.

The commanding officer of 2d regiment Arkansas cavalry will turn over to the proper officers all government property in the possession of his regiment without delay, and will forthwith embark, with his entire command, on transports, and proceed to St. Louis, Missouri, and report to the commanding general of the department of the Missouri, that the regiment may be consolidated with some other Arkansas regiment. Quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By order of Major General PRENTISS:

JAMES O. PIERCE, A. A. A. G.

At this time company C had become entirely disintegrated, the few remaining men having been transferred to companies A and B, which themselves were but skeleton organizations when they set out for St. Louis. Shortly after their arrival the following order was issued:

Special Orders, No. 121.

II.—In accordance with orders received from headquarters department of the Missouri, by indorsement on letter of A. F. Eno, adjutant general and secretary of Arkansas, of May 28, 1863, companies A and B of 2d Arkansas cavalry will be consolidated immediately into one company, to be called company B, 2d Arkansas cavalry.

In compliance with orders, Captain A. B. Freeburn, of company B, First Lieutenant A. A. Irwin, of company A, and Second Lieutenant Andrew J. Garner, of company B, will be retained as the officers of the consolidated company.

Captain James W. Demby, of company A, and First Lieutenant Harley S. Wait, of company B, will be mustered out of service of the United States.

Captain D. W. Cheek, A. C. M., St. Louis, Missouri district, will make the consolidation named in the order.

By order of Brigadier General DAVIDSON:

HENRY C. FILLEBROWN, Captain and Assistant Adjutant General.

On the 2d day of June this consolidation was made and the supernumerary officers were mustered out.

In August, 1863, John E. Phelps was appointed a commissioner to take charge of this new organization, and with it as a nucleus to raise a regiment still to be known as the 2d Arkansas cavalry. Rendezvousing at Springfield and Cassville, Missouri, his energy and success were such that on the 18th day of March, 1864, he was mustered in as colonel, twelve full companies having been raised. Prior to this event, Colonel Phelps and his energetic subordinate officers had penetrated time and again into Arkansas, always bringing out recruits, and never failing to inspire the loyal citizens of the State with increased faith in the ultimate triumph of their cause. With reference to some of the services rendered by this regiment, Lieutenant Colonel Hugh Cameron, who earlier in the rebellion was captain of company F, 2d Kansas cavalry volunteers, writes as follows:

"As captain of company F, 2d Kansas cavalry, while on duty in Arkansas, in 1862-'63, I never failed to find faithful scouts and reliable guides among the citizens. When, at Dardanelle, during the months of November and December, 1863, with eighty-five armed men, ('Mountain Feds.') sustained and re-enforced as often as necessary by the citizens of Pope and Yell counties, under the direction of Burk Johnson and the late William Stout, during which time over five hundred recruits were added to the federal army, and not a single case of treachery on the part of any citizen was discovered. Shortly after this, I became an officer in the 2d Arkansas cavalry, and served with the regiment to the close of the war. And in justice to Arkansas troops let me say, that for watchfulness, cheerful obedience, and courage, they had, in my judgment, no superiors. Under the command of judicious and brave officers, they were seldom defeated or surprised. The march from Dardanelle to Cassville, Missouri, in January, 1864, with a number of prisoners equal to one-third of the entire armed force, was as orderly and as well executed as any ever performed by old and well-disciplined troops.

"The encounter on Richland creek, Arkansas, May 4, 1864, in which Colonel Jackson and a force of over two hundred rebels were dislodged and put to flight by Colonel Phelps with one hundred of his regiment, was as desperate, perhaps, as any of the war.

"The pursuit of a detachment of eight hundred rebels from Buck prairie to Upshaw Farm, Missouri, on the 29th of October of the same year, resulted in the death of over sixty and the capture of thirty-seven of the detachment—a number equal to one-fourth of the entire federal command, composed principally of the 2d Arkansas cavalry and Missouri troops.

"A scout through Berryville, Rolling and Marshall prairies, Yellville, and Talbot's barrens, Arkansas, a distance of about four hundred miles, was performed in ten days, without loss of life or property, in the month of November, 1864, by one hundred and fifty men of the 2d Arkansas cavalry. In the region through which we passed several thousand rebels of General Price's command were scattered. On this occasion, rebel Major Mooney and twenty-six of his men were captured and conveyed to Springfield, Missouri, and several were killed and wounded, among whom were Major Lauderdale and Lieutenant Hastings. I have instanced the above to illustrate the character of the service in which Arkansas troops were constantly employed—a service dangerous to those engaged as well as important to the government, but of which scarcely anything yet is publicly known, and for which the actors have received comparatively no credit."

Upon this subject it is gratifying also to be permitted to publish the subjoined letter from Hon. J. P. C. Shanks, a member of the Fortieth Congress, from the State of Indiana: *

During the Shelby raid into Missouri in the fall of 1863, Colonel Phelps was frequently called upon for scouts and detachments of men, and in the following winter when northwestern Arkansas was alive with guerillas, performed essential service for the government. Between Fayetteville, Washington county, where the 1st Arkansas cavalry was then stationed, and Batesville, on White river, held by Colonel Livingston, of the 1st Nebraska infantry, then commanding the district of northeastern Arkansas, there was a wide belt of country north of the Arkansas river wholly unprotected by posts or stations, and in which were many Union men. These it was important to relieve, and into this section detachments of the 2d Arkansas cavalry were frequently sent, accomplishing much good in this respect, and breaking up and scattering the marauding bands with which the country was infested. Once only, on Richland creek, were they defeated.

Of an expedition undertaken in January, 1864, and which is characteristic of much of the warfare of the border, L. Rémiatte, late adjutant of the regiment, writes as follows: "I left Cassville, Missouri, January 17, and went with the expedition to Burroughville, Searcy county. In several skirmishes the guerillas were defeated with loss—at Crooked creek, Tomahawk gap, and on Rolling prairie. I returned to Cassville about the 10th of February, having been left on the edge of Rolling prairie in charge of the whole force of the regiment and the train of refugees collected there under my protection. Upwards of one hundred and twenty wagons, with all sorts of trains, were depending upon me to escort them safely through to Missouri. I had to provide forage for all the stock or allow them to starve on the road, and yet, in order to protect the refugees, had to keep them together. By taking almost impassable roads I managed to avoid difficulty, and at last succeeded in bringing the train safely through. An attack made by guerillas on the Osage was repelled."

Connected with the raid of General Price into Missouri in the autumn following, the 2d Arkansas distinguished itself, moving from Springfield to Rolla, one hundred and ten miles, in fifty-six hours; in subsequent marches, skirmishes and battles, it was almost invariably in the advance; and at Jefferson city, Russellville, Boonville, Dover, Independence, Big Blue, the Osage and Newtonia, behaved most gallantly. After the battle at Newtonia, the chase was continued on to the Arkansas river, and throughout it all, the 2d cavalry were prompt and efficient in the pursuit.

Returning to Springfield, Missouri, November 15, 1864, they were ordered across the country to Memphis, Tennessee, which place they reached on the 25th day of January, 1865. Their journey through northeastern Arkansas, over mountains and through swamps, across bayous and swollen streams, was severe, and guerillas were a constant source of annoyance and delay.

In Mississippi and Tennessee the regiment was actively on duty, scouting and guerilla hunting, until it was mustered out August 20, 1865. It was stationed successively at Germantown, La Fayette and Lagrange, Tennessee, and Senatobia, Mississippi, capturing, at various times, over three hundred prisoners.

After the surrender of General Taylor a detachment of this regiment garrisoned Holly Springs, Mississippi, and on leaving the place, Lieutenant Colonel Cameron in command, received a flattering testimonial from the citizens, with reference to the manner in which he discharged the difficult and delicate duties devolved upon him while conscientiously and fully performing his obligations to the government. A merited tribute to the good order and discipline of the men of the regiment was likewise bestowed.

At a meeting of the regiment held at Lagrange, Tennessee, shortly before the muster out, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas the necessity for united martial action which called us together no longer exists, our work being done, and our cause gloriously triumphant, it becomes us before disbanding, to make some disposal of the proud old banner which has never trailed, and which we have borne triumphantly upon many a bloody field; and Whereas it is desirable that a relic so dear to the hearts of those who have followed it should be preserved as a testimonial of what we have done: Therefore, be it resolved by the officers and men of the 2d regiment Arkansas volunteer cavalry:

1. That we have the names of the battles of "Independence," "Big Blue," and "Osage," ordered by the War Department to be put upon our banner embroidered thereon, and that it then be presented to the governor of the State of Arkansas to be preserved among the archives of the State.

2. That we claim that our flag is entitled to have upon it the additional battles of Richland, Pine Mountains, Jefferson City, Boonville, Dover, Newtonia, and Upshaw Farm, where our boys did service that our enemies will long remember.

[This flag was afterwards received by the governor and is now among the archives of the State.]

3. That we refer with pride to the promotions received by our commanding officer, Colonel John E. Phelps, who, while commanding the regiment, was breveted brigadier general of volunteers, and captain, major, and lieutenant colonel in the regular army.

4. That the regiment do hereby tender their thanks to Mrs. Mary Phelps, who presented it with this flag. They are happy in being able to say to her that she committed it into the keeping of true soldiers, who will long remember the noble hearted and charitable donor with thankful feelings; and we deem her worthy of the nation's gratitude and the gratitude of every officer and soldier in the regiment.

5. That we appoint Major H. H. Maynard, surgeon, Captain D. W. Roberts, company A, and Captain H. C. Bell, company E, as a committee to have the names of the battles embroidered on the flag, and have it forwarded to Little Rock to be disposed of as directed.

6. That the Memphis, Tennessee, St. Louis, Missouri, Springfield, Missouri, and Arkansas papers be requested to publish these resolutions, and that Mrs. Phelps and the governor of the State of Arkansas be furnished with a copy.

* "FORTIETH CONGRESS, UNITED STATES, Washington, D. C., March 8, 1867.

"GENERAL: I am informed that you are about publishing, through the kindness of the United States Senate, your official report, and that your State being in the hands of disloyal men, refuses to publish the services of those gallant men of Arkansas who served their country in the field in defence of the Union and Constitution.

"Permit me to tender this expression of my high regard for, and confidence in, the men who composed the 2d Arkansas cavalry, commanded by Colonel John E. Phelps, Lieutenant Colonel Hugh Cameron, and Major Jeremiah Hackett. This regiment was in my command for some time at and near Memphis, Tennessee, and in several long and severe marches, and I take pleasure in attesting the uniform good character of the troops, and the energy, integrity, and efficiency of the officers; and permit me to make especial reference to the field officers above named.

"I make this statement as a just tribute to those men who were loyal and true under every adversity.

"With highest regards, I am, sir, yours truly,

"Brigadier General A. W. BISHOP, Adjutant General of the State of Arkansas."

"J. P. C. SHANKS, late Colonel 7th Indiana Cavalry and Brevet Brigadier General.

THIRD ARKANSAS CAVALRY VOLUNTEERS.—HISTORICAL MEMORANDA.

After the occupation of Little Rock by General Steele in September, 1863, it was soon found that there also many citizens of Arkansas were loyal, and would fight for the flag, and the following authority for raising the 3d regiment of Arkansas cavalry volunteers was accordingly given:

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF ARKANSAS, Little Rock, Arkansas, October 26, 1863.

Special Orders, No. 64.

[Extract.]

IV.—Captain A. H. Ryan, 17th Illinois infantry, is hereby authorized to raise a regiment of cavalry, to be designated the 3d Arkansas cavalry; the regiment to be recruited and mustered into service as the War Department may determine; the regiment to be rendezvoused at Little Rock. The officers of the regiment will be designated by Captain Ryan, and approved by the commanding general of troops in central Arkansas, and submitted to the War Department for approval and orders. Private Harry F. Van Houten, company A, 13th Illinois volunteer infantry, will aid Captain Ryan in the organization of the regiment.

By order of Major General F. STEELE:

GEORGE O. SOKALSKI, First Lieutenant 2d Cavalry and A. A. G.

The authority thus given by General Steele was shortly afterwards confirmed by the commanding general of the department of the Missouri, and the raising of the regiment was vigorously proceeded with. At this time the exigencies of the service were such in the department of Arkansas that it was necessary that all troops raised should be put at once upon active field duty. It was therefore a desideratum, kept constantly in view, to make the 3d Arkansas cavalry efficient in the shortest time practicable, and men of ability and experience were selected as field and staff officers. For officers in the line one lieutenant was chosen for each company from regiments that had seen service, and the remaining officers were Arkansians, who had been actively engaged in recruiting for the regiment. The regiment was mustered into the service on the 10th day of February, 1864, and was immediately ordered into the field.

In a report made to this office February 4, 1865, by First Lieutenant Frank Pease, of company H, the following succinct statement of the operations of the regiment to that time appears: "On the organization of the regiment, two battalions were sent up the Arkansas river to hold a large scope of territory infested by numerous guerilla bands, who were robbing and murdering Union families in the most barbarous manner that human depravity could invent. Territory held by these marauders was soon wrested from their hands by the 3d cavalry, and comparative quiet restored. One battalion remained in camp at Little Rock until an expedition was sent out to the Ouachita river under General Steele; that battalion accompanied the expedition, and participated in all the engagements of the entire campaign.

"The regiment, since its organization, has been engaged in clearing the country of the numerous predatory bands which have cursed this district with their infamous operations since the inception of the rebellion, and by it a large number of them have been killed and wounded. Being stationed remotely from supplies, and constituting an extreme outpost to Little Rock, the regiment has necessarily performed a large amount of labor, sometimes subsisting on half or quarter rations. The extent of territory protected and occupied was large, and, at the same time, to avoid being cut off from our base of supplies by greatly superior forces, we were taught vigilance and the imperative necessity of giving the enemy a wholesome dread of the regiment."

For some months prior to the date of this communication the regiment was stationed at Lewisburg, on the Arkansas river, where it was of great service to General Steele. Detachments were constantly on the alert, scouring the country, breaking up the lesser haunts of the enemy; and it is to be regretted that more minute details of their achievements cannot be given.

The regiment was mustered out of the service at Lewisburg on the 30th day of June, 1865.

Fourth regiment Arkansas cavalry volunteers. Mustered into service December 29, 1864, (three years;) mustered out June 30, 1865.

FOURTH ARKANSAS CAVALRY VOLUNTEERS.—HISTORICAL MEMORANDA.

The raising of the 4th regiment Arkansas cavalry volunteers was begun in November, 1863, and completed on the muster in of Lafayette Gregg as colonel, December 29, 1864. Meantime companies of the regiment, as rapidly as organized, were placed on active duty and experienced the usual vicissitudes of the service. The following communication, received shortly before the muster out of the regiment, (June 30, 1865,) gives an account of its organization and services:

HEADQUARTERS FOURTH REGIMENT ARKANSAS CAVALRY,
Little Rock, Arkansas, June 8, 1865.

SIR: In reply to your communication of to-day requesting a history of this regiment I have the honor to state: The organization of the regiment was commenced under the direction of William M. Fishback in the month of November, 1863. The first battalion was mustered in for one year or during the war, but the muster was declared invalid by the Adjutant General of the army, and in the month of December that battalion was disbanded, and the regiment commenced reorganizing as a three years' organization. The regiment filled up quite rapidly until the disastrous expedition of General Steele in the month of March, 1864, which discouraged enlistments, and the organization of the regiment was not completed till December 29, 1864.

The following is a statement of the completion of the organization of each company: "A" company was organized by Captain Joel Brown on the 12th day of December, 1863, at Little Rock, Arkansas; "B" company by Captain James R. Lafferty on the 9th day of January, 1864, at Little Rock, Arkansas; "C" company by Captain Henry Wood on the 28th day of January, 1864, at Little Rock, Arkansas; "D" company by Captain George H. Hand, on the 5th day of March, 1864, at Little Rock, Arkansas; "E" company by Captain George W. Smith, on the 29th day of March, 1864, at Little Rock, Arkansas; "F" company by Captain William H. Warner, on the 7th day of April, 1864, at Little Rock, Arkansas; "G" company by Captain William J. Green, on the 29th day of April, 1864, at Little Rock, Arkansas; "H" company by Captain John F. Sanders, on the 7th day of May, 1864, at Little Rock, Arkansas; "I" company by Captain Emory E. Knowlton, on the 16th day of October, 1864, at Little Rock, Arkansas; "K" company by Captain Joseph Bennett, on the 18th day of June, 1864, at Little Rock, Arkansas; "L" company by Captain James S. Clark, on the 15th day of July, 1864, at Little Rock, Arkansas; "M" company by Captain Frederick F. Burlock, on the 31st day of December, 1864, at Little Rock, Arkansas.

Although the regiment, as such, has never been in any general engagements, detachments of it have been in several skirmishes and fights. A portion of company G was in a fight at Mount Elba, Arkansas, on the 30th day of March, 1864. Companies A, B, C, E, and K were in a fight at Dardanelle, Arkansas, when that place was attacked by the rebel General Shelby's command, on the 16th day of May, 1864. The regiment also had a severe skirmish with the enemy on Saline river, Arkansas, on the 16th day of July, 1864, in which the brave Captain Hugh Quin was killed.

Portions of the regiment have also been in several other skirmishes at different times, and a large number of bushwhackers have at various times been captured by it.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
HORACE L. MOORE,
Lieutenant Colonel Commanding Regiment.

A. W. BISHOP, Adjutant General, State of Arkansas.

The regiment was mustered out at Little Rock, Arkansas, on the 30th day of June, 1865.

First regiment Arkansas infantry volunteers. Mustered into service March 25, 1863, (three years;) mustered out August 10, 1865.

HISTORICAL MEMORANDA.—FIRST ARKANSAS INFANTRY VOLUNTEERS.

In November, 1862, authority was given by Major General Schofield, then commanding the "Army of the Frontier," to Dr. James M. Johnson, of Huntsville, Madison county, Arkansas, to raise infantry troops from the State. This authority was general, one regiment to be completed, however, before another was undertaken; and such a course was to be pursued until a different policy should be determined upon.

Early in the war Dr. Johnson's Union sentiments were avowed, and in April, 1862, being able no longer to remain at home in safety, he left Huntsville with Isaac Murphy, now governor of the State, and his brother, F. M. Johnson, afterwards major 1st Arkansas infantry. Arriving at an outpost of the old "Army of the Southwest," at Keitsville, Missouri, he promptly reported to General Curtis, then in command of this army, and was placed upon his staff as a volunteer aid. Subsequently he rendered valuable services to Generals Schofield, Totten, and Herron, and accompanied the "Army of the Frontier," on its first march into northwestern Arkansas, in October, 1862, under the command of General Schofield. Returning with this army to Elkhorn Tavern, he received the authority alluded to, marched with the army in the campaign that terminated in the battle of Prairie Grove, and on the establishment of Fayetteville as a post opened a recruiting office at that place for the 1st Arkansas infantry volunteers. Recruiting proceeded with rapidity, and on the 25th day of March, 1863, the regiment was raised, and Dr. Johnson was mustered into the service as its colonel. The following communication from Major F. M. Johnson, then in command, gives some account of the subsequent services of the regiment:

"HEADQUARTERS FIRST ARKANSAS INFANTRY, Fort Smith, Arkansas, June 26, 1865.

"GENERAL: I have the honor to submit the following report:

"At the time of the muster in of J. M. Johnson as colonel of this regiment it numbered thirty-six commissioned officers and eight hundred and ten enlisted men, recruited in the previous sixty days in Madison, Washington, Newton, Benton, Searcy, and Crawford counties. It participated in the battle of Fayetteville, under the immediate command of Lieutenant Colonel E. J. Searle and Major E. D. Ham, on the 18th day of April, 1863, and marched for Springfield, Missouri, on the 25th day of that month. On the 6th day of July it was ordered to Cassville, Missouri, where it shortly afterwards arrived, and on the 17th day of August joined the Army of the Frontier, under command of Major General Blunt, at Fort Gibson, Cherokee Nation, pursued the rebels under Cooper and Stanwath to Perryville, in the Choctaw Nation, and, returning to Fort Smith, was the first regiment to enter the garrison, on the first day of September, 1863. Shortly afterwards, by order of Brigadier General McNeil, the regiment proceeded to Waldron, and remained there until February, 1864, when it was again ordered to report at Fort Smith, to take part in the movement southward, under Colonel John Edwards; participated in the battle of Poisoned Springs; entered Camden on the 16th day of April, 1864, and was engaged in a reconnaissance of the enemy after the battle of Saline river, where it repulsed a strong flanking party with considerable loss to the enemy, and losing no men itself. On the first day of May, 1864, the regiment arrived at Little Rock, and proceeded thence to Fort Smith, where it arrived on the 17th day of the same month; since which time it has been engaged in escort and guard duty on the frontier. The greatest aggregate was in November, 1863—nine hundred and seventy-nine (979) officers and men; the lowest in March, 1865, seven hundred and seventy-four, (774;) present aggregate, seven hundred and eighty-eight, (788,) thirty-one (31) commissioned officers and seven hundred and fifty-seven (757) enlisted men.

"Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

"F. M. JOHNSON, Major, Commanding Regiment.

"A. W. BISHOP, Adjutant General, Arkansas."

Aside from the operations of the regiment embraced in this brief resumé, detachments were frequently sent out to succor Union men—a duty which, from their familiarity with the country, they were particularly well qualified to discharge. In September, 1863, it became known at Fort Smith that several hundred men of this class had gathered together from the surrounding country, upon and near the Magazine mountain, whither they had been compelled to flee for security, and though generally having arms of their own, were much in need of ammunition. To relieve them, Captain William C. Parker, of the 1st Arkansas infantry, was directed to proceed, with sixty men, to their rendezvous; which he did, accomplishing the object for which he was sent. On his return, while crossing Haguewood prairie, in Franklin county, he was suddenly confronted by the rebel General Shelby's command, then moving northward on his well-known raiding expedition into Missouri. A stubborn fight ensued, Captain Parker slowly falling back until he reached the timber, where the unequal contest was still carried on, until, finding himself nearly surrounded, he directed his men to escape as best they could. In this encounter he lost twenty-two men killed and taken prisoners, but killing and wounding nearly the same number of the enemy. Captain Parker himself succeeded with the rest of his men in arriving safely at Fort Smith, when instant measures being taken by Colonel Johnson to advise Colonel Harrison, then commanding at Fayetteville, of Shelby's march northward, the intelligence was quickly circulated through southwestern Missouri, and Shelby's movement was in a great measure frustrated.

As early as the summer of 1862 bands of Union men similar to that relieved by Captain Parker had, in various portions of western Arkansas, consorted together, and, though compelled by oppression and violence to leave their homes, were accustomed to take refuge among the hills and in the woods, and no extent of persecution succeeded in driving them from the State. Commonly known as "Mountain Feds.," they were true to the Union under the most discouraging circumstances, and from time to time gave valuable assistance to the organized forces operating in various portions of the State. To those in command at Fayetteville, Fort Smith, Van Buren, Clarksville, and Dardanelle, they were especially serviceable, and though it would be difficult, if not impossible, now to recount their exploits, they will long be remembered in Arkansas as men whose loyalty was put to the severest test, shining out conspicuously when the federal arm was not outstretched for their relief. Many of them entered various Arkansas regiments, the 1st infantry among the number, as the Union army advanced; but not until the rebellion was suppressed did some of them cease their irregular though necessary warfare. From Newton county they were never entirely driven, and through their resistance, which was specially organized and directed by James R. Vanderpool, of that county, captain of company C, 1st Arkansas infantry, rebel conscription therein was in a great measure defeated.

In Yell county William J. Hefington, well known in western Arkansas as "Wild Bill," maintained himself with a band of these men for months, when the surrounding country was held by the enemy, and repeated efforts were made for his capture. Afterwards reporting to Colonel Johnson with a number of his men, who were organized into a company, with himself as captain, he again moved southward of the Boston mountains, and crossing the Arkansas river, was preparing to conduct other citizens to the federal lines, when he heard of the abandonment of northwestern Arkansas by the Union forces, (April, 1863,) and determined to remain in the State. This he did until the August following, when he was killed by guerillas, near the Arkansas river, while going northward to procure relief for a large number of the Union men of his section of the State, who banded together in the vicinity of the Magazine, Short, and Petit Jean mountains, were successfully resisting all attempts at their capture. After the death of Hefington these men still held together, and on the occupation of Fort Smith and Little Rock by the Union forces, in the September following, the most of them enlisted in various Arkansas regiments, the 1st infantry among the number.

In November, 1863, while this regiment was stationed at Fort Smith, about three hundred of its men were vaccinated with spurious vaccine matter, a large number of whom were permanently disabled, and many others, whose disability unfitted them for duty, it became necessary to discharge.

On the 30th of October, 1863, while this regiment was on duty at Fort Smith, a mass meeting of Union men was held at that place, for the purpose of inaugurating measures that should lead to the restoration of civil government in the State, at which Colonel Johnson was unanimously nominated to represent the people of western Arkansas in the Congress of the United States. In November he was elected, and again in October, 1865, for the third congressional district. Though thus a member elect of the 38th and 39th Congresses, and necessarily called away from his regiment in his efforts to secure the recognition of the State government by Congress, he served with the regiment when not thus occupied, and with it was mustered out, at Fort Smith, on the 10th day of August, 1865.

Second regiment Arkansas infantry volunteers. Mustered into service July 6, 1864, (three years;) mustered out August 8, 1865.

SECOND ARKANSAS INFANTRY VOLUNTEERS.—HISTORICAL MEMORANDA.

The following communication from Colonel M. L. Stephenson, commanding the regiment, gives an account of its organization and services to a period shortly anterior to its muster out of service:

GENERAL: In compliance with your request of the 22d instant, I have the honor to make the following statement regarding the history of my regiment. The authority for organizing the 2d Arkansas infantry volunteers was transmitted by the Secretary of War to Major General J. M. Schofield, commanding the department of the Missouri, some time in the month of August, 1863, precise date unknown. In conformity with that authority, Major General Schofield, in paragraph 5, of Special Order No. 238, dated headquarters department of the Missouri, St. Louis, Missouri, September 1, 1863, delegated the general charge and supervision of the organization of the regiment to Brigadier General John McNeil, commanding the district of southwest Missouri, instructing him to appoint some officer to take the immediate charge of the organization, under the supervision of General McNeil. The order further declared that the regiment should be composed of and organized from all recruits that had already been enlisted, and from all that might thereafter be enlisted, for Arkansas infantry from citizens of Arkansas in southwest Missouri and northwest Arkansas, until the organization of the regiment was completed. The officer taking the immediate supervision of the organization was empowered to recommend, with the concurrence of Brigadier General McNeil, competent and efficient men to fill the positions of company officers, taken, as far as practicable, from the citizens of Arkansas, the recommendations to be sent to headquarters department of the Missouri for reference to the Secretary of War, the field and staff officers to be nominated by the major general commanding the department of the Missouri, "from such reliable, competent, and efficient citizens or officers as, in his opinion, had good claims to the positions to be filled."

In obedience to the above order General McNeil entrusted the organization of the regiment to me by paragraph 1, Special Order No. 170, dated headquarters district of southwest Missouri, Springfield, Missouri, August 31, 1863, directing that Springfield, Missouri, should be the rendezvous of the regiment, there being at that time no other point possessing the same advantages necessary for a rendezvous. The rendezvous was, however, ultimately changed to Fort Smith, Arkansas, by paragraph 5, Special Order No. 317, dated headquarters department of the Missouri, St. Louis, Missouri, November 20, 1863, Fort Smith having been occupied by the federal troops in September, 1863.

In the month of January, 1864, the organization of four companies having been completed, the lieutenant colonel, adjutant, quartermaster, and officers of companies A, B, C, and D were appointed by the Secretary of War, and orders for their muster issued by Major General Schofield.

The organization of the regiment was completed March 13, 1864, at which time the aggregate enlisted strength was 913; but owing to the impossibility of procuring a mustering officer there were but 11 officers and about 600 men mustered. In this condition the regiment was ordered into the field by Brigadier General J. M. Thayer, commanding district of the frontier, March 20, 1864, to take part in the expedition south, commanded by Major General Steele.

Leaving Clarksville, Arkansas, on the 24th day of March, 1864, with eight companies, the regiment reported to Brigadier General Thayer on the 27th day of March, 1864, fifteen miles west of Danville, Arkansas, and from that time forward moved with the 3d division 7th army corps in that disastrous campaign. The regiment was engaged in the battles of Prairie d'Anne, on the 13th of April, and Jenkins's Ferry on the 30th of the same month, in both of which engagements the regiment lost several men killed and wounded. The losses incurred by these battles, deaths caused by sickness, and desertions so reduced the regiment that upon our arrival at Little Rock, Arkansas, the organization was declared incomplete. The two companies (D and G) which had been left at Clarksville rejoined the regiment at Little Rock, and soon after, with the exception of myself, the officers and enlisted men were all mustered, I being at the time absent with leave, having been wounded at Jenkins's Ferry, but was mustered soon after my return to the regiment, to date from July 6, 1864.

In the month of July, 1864, the regiment was ordered to Lewisburg, Arkansas, where it remained until the 7th day of September, 1864, when it was forced to evacuate the place and return to Little Rock with the 3d Arkansas cavalry on account of the advance north of the enemy under General Price, who crossed the Arkansas river at Dardanelle, thirty miles above Lewisburg. About this time the regiment lost a great many men from desertion and deaths. Reports were continually reaching the regiment that the families of the men were being cruelly treated by the guerillas, and in consequence the regiment became so reduced that we mustered, on arriving at Little Rock, but 450 enlisted men.

We remained at Little Rock until the 18th day of October, 1864, when we received orders to escort a supply train to Fort Smith, Arkansas, with the intention of remaining there. Arriving at Fort Smith I reported the regiment to Brigadier General J. M. Thayer, commanding 3d division 7th army corps, and was ordered by him to report to Brigadier General John Edwards, commanding 1st brigade 3d division 7th army corps, for duty.

On the 31st day of December, 1864, we received orders from General Edwards to proceed to this place immediately, for the purpose of collecting together the Union people in the country with the view of moving them to Little Rock, on account of an order having been issued for the evacuation of Fort Smith and the surrounding country. Upon arriving at Clarksville a large number of the men who had deserted at Little Rock and Lewisburg voluntarily rejoined their regiment, and in view of the facts in their cases, have been since restored to duty with loss of pay and allowances during their unauthorized absence, by order of Brigadier General Bussy, commanding 3d division 7th army corps.

The order for the evacuation of the country having been countermanded, the regiment has remained at this place and has done good service to the country by ridding it of guerillas. The regiment now numbers 27 commissioned officers and 581 enlisted men.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. L. STEPHENSON, Colonel, Commanding Regiment.

Brig. Gen. A. W. BISHOP, Adjutant General of Arkansas, Little Rock, Arkansas.

On the 2d day of October, 1864, Special Order No. 240, headquarters department of Arkansas, was issued, assigning the 4th Arkansas infantry (whose history is elsewhere given) to the 2d Arkansas infantry for duty, and on the 28th day of the same month another order was issued, transferring the enlisted men of the former regiment to the latter for assignment to companies. On the 28th day of March, 1865, this last order was amended by including Ira D. Bronson as captain, and William W. Tibbs as 2d lieutenant, who, together with 73 men, were assigned to company I; the transfer to date from October 25, 1864. From this time onward this detachment constituted a portion of the 2d Arkansas infantry, and served with the regiment at Clarksville, Arkansas, and vicinity, until its muster out on the 8th day of August, 1865.

Roster of officers and men of the fourth regiment Arkansas infantry volunteers who, from death or other causes, were not consolidated.

FOURTH ARKANSAS INFANTRY VOLUNTEERS.—HISTORICAL MEMORANDA.

On the 4th day of October, 1863, authority was given by the commanding general department of the Missouri to Edward J. Brooks, of Fayetteville, Arkansas, to raise a regiment of infantry in this State to be called the 4th Arkansas infantry volunteers, he being appointed provisional colonel of the regiment, with his principal rendezvous at Fayetteville, and branch rendezvous at Fort Smith and such other places in western Arkansas as he might select. The difficulties encountered in recruiting for this regiment, and its services in the field, are detailed in a communication to this office from Ira D. Bronson, formerly captain company A, dated Hickory, Illinois, September 18, 1865, from which the following extracts are made:

"On the 10th of December, 1863, Captain H. S. Greeno, 6th Kansas cavalry, was detailed on recruiting service for the 4th Arkansas infantry, and placed in charge of the recruiting exclusive control of recruiting for infantry, and also that the 2d, 3d and 4th Arkansas cavalry, and the 2d Kansas cavalry, were recruiting in the State, and had nearly were disposed to enlist preferred the cavalry arm of the service, recruiting for the 4th Arkansas infantry was very slow and tedious.

"About the middle of March, 1864, I had fifty men recruited and stationed at Fort Smith; Lieutenant Hunter had the same number at Fayetteville; other recruiting officers had a number each, making in all about one hundred and eighty men. Brave and efficient recruiting officers were continually within the rebel lines, and many men were in this way picked up.

"On the 10th of April, 1864, Captain Greeno, with a number of recruiting officers, accompanied General Steel's expedition to Camden, hoping thereby to secure a sufficient number of recruits, with those already raised, to organize a major's command. Captain Greeno succeeded in obtaining a large number of recruits, and forwarded them with a train to Little Rock, but unfortunately they were captured with it before reaching Pine Bluff.

"The headquarters of the regiment remained at Clarksville, Arkansas, until the 18th day of May, 1864, the troops meantime acting a conspicuous part in defending the post against the combined efforts of the guerillas of western Arkansas, aided by a portion of Shelby's command that had returned to the north side of the Arkansas river. My detachment had frequent engagements with them, scarcely a day passing without our taking some prisoners.

"On or about the 20th day of May, 1864, Captain Goss, 6th Kansas cavalry, commanding the post of Clarksville, having ascertained that a large force of rebels had crossed the Arkansas river, and were threatening the post with overwhelming numbers, ordered an abandonment of the place, and fell back on Fort Smith. Upon our arrival there the detachment of the 4th Arkansas infantry was placed on duty as an extreme outpost south.

"While stationed near Fort Smith Captain Greeno received orders to proceed with a portion of his command into southern Arkansas, and move out the families of federal soldiers, who had been plundered and maltreated by the rebel troops, consisting of bushwhackers, Indians, and renegades, prowling about in that portion of the State. Several trips of this description were made, and frequent encounters with the rebel troops, occurred.

"On the 15th day of July we were ordered to Little Rock, and for a time after our arrival did outpost duty. On the 25th of July my company was mustered in. At this time there were on the regimental rolls two hundred and twenty-three names, a portion of whom were recruited by Lieutenants Hunter and Tennant, and partially so for cavalry—were unwilling to serve as infantry—and were transferred to the 4th Arkansas cavalry. Captain Greeno was also transferred, and on the 16th day of October, 1864, was mustered as a major in that regiment.

I was thus left in command of the detachment which, on the 2d day of October, 1864, was assigned to the 2d Arkansas infantry for duty. On the 28th day of the same month all the enlisted men of our regiment were transferred to the 2d Arkansas infantry for assignment to companies. This assignment was afterwards confirmed in orders from the War Department, and the officers of the regiment, though mostly retained in service, were left without a command. Lieutenant R. S. Crampton, regimental quartermaster, resigned prior to the transfer, and Assistant Surgeon B. Blanchard was mustered out, to be mustered in again as surgeon, having received an appointment as such, though he was never in fact re-mustered.

"March 28, 1865, the order of assignment was so amended as to include myself as captain, and William W. Tibbs as second lieutenant, who, with seventy-three men, were formally assigned to company I, 2d Arkansas infantry, the transfer to date from October 25, 1864.

"Out of the number recruited for the 4th Arkansas infantry forty-five (45) deserted, thirty (30) died, thirty (30) were captured, forty-five (45) were transferred to the 4th Arkansas cavalry, and seventy-three (73) as stated above.

"Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

"IRA D. BRONSON,
Late Captain Company I, 2d Arkansas Infantry, formerly Captain Company A, 4th Arkansas Infantry."

First Arkansas (six months) infantry volunteers. Organized at Helena, Arkansas, July 21, 1862; mustered out December 31, 1862.

FIRST ARKANSAS SIX-MONTHS INFANTRY VOLUNTEERS.—HISTORICAL MEMORANDA.

On the march of General Curtis from northwestern Arkansas to Helena in 1862 several hundred of the loyal citizens of the State joined the army at Batesville. The following extract of a letter from Hon. C. C. Bliss, late lieutenant governor of the State, and who was himself connected with them, gives an account of their organization:

"A few days after the arrival of the federal army in Batesville, in the spring of 1862, H. V. Gray, a loyalist from Black River township, in Independence county, with about forty of his neighbors, who, with others to the number of one hundred or upwards, had previously banded themselves together to resist, by force if need be, attempts to urge them into the rebel service, made their appearance at the headquarters of General Curtis, and tendered their services to the government. Captain Gray requested permission to recruit for a regiment of six-months men. A few months previous to this he came near losing his life at the hands of a mob, but a short distance from where headquarters then were, for saying that if he did any fighting during the contest it would be under the stars and stripes. This circumstance, with others showing the determined bravery and persistent loyalty of himself and associates, so challenged the respect and admiration of the commanding general that he complied with the request, notwithstanding he then had no authority from the War Department and associates, way came into the lines from Conway county, of Independence, and L. D. Toney, of Izard county, to recruit. In June Thomas S. Williams and George Gallo-defence, and were compelled to flee to the army, be killed, or go into the rebel service. Men recruited under the authority referred to, residing within the lines, remained at home until the last of June, no authority having been given for their muster in."

"On the last day of June, very unexpectedly to the people, General Curtis moved down White river. These recruits, with many other persons obnoxious to those in rebellion, left with the army, and so sudden and unexpected was the leaving that men about their daily avocations a short distance from home, on learning that the army was in motion, left without returning to say farewell to their families or procure a change of clothing. All believed the country was to be held, and that they were not again to be subjected to rebel violence and oppression. In this they were mistaken."

"On the arrival of the army at Helena, these recruits, with others who had been compelled to leave their homes, were mustered and organized into a battalion of infantry, of which J. C. Bundy was appointed lieutenant colonel. They had expected to be permitted to mount themselves, and for this purpose, on leaving, as well as to prevent their rebel neighbors from getting them, had taken their horses. This they were denied, and not being allowed either to forage upon the country or draw forage from the quartermaster's department, some of their animals died, and the remainder were sold for a trifle or given away. Anxiety concerning their families, who were suffering every indignity at the hands of their enemies, and could be heard from only after uncertain and long intervals; inactivity in camp, loss of property, and disappointment in not seeing their State seized and held by the strong arm of military power, so aggravated diseases prevailing in camp that in October there were not sufficient men in health for camp duty. In this condition they were ordered to St. Louis, and sent to Benton barracks, where they remained until their muster out on the 31st day of December, 1862. During the six months nearly one hundred and fifty died from disease, including Captains Gray and Turney and Lieut. Clark."

It is worthy of note that this battalion was composed mostly of men who had banded themselves together to resist the cause of treason before federal troops entered the State. "Very truly, your obedient servant,"

"C. C. BLISS."

FOURTH ARKANSAS MOUNTED INFANTRY VOLUNTEERS.—HISTORICAL MEMORANDA.

In November, 1863, authority was given by General Steele, commanding the army of Arkansas, to Elisha Baxter, of Batesville, to raise a regiment of infantry for twelve months. Shortly afterwards verbal permission was given to mount it, and recruiting was immediately proceeded with, especially at Batesville, where regimental headquarters were established. Company "A," organized and commanded by Captain T. A. Baxter, reported for duty on the 1st day of January, 1864, to Colonel Livingston, 1st Nebraska infantry, commanding district of northeastern Arkansas, at Batesville, and continued to do duty under him until the company was disbanded. Company "B" partly organized January 30, 1864, with forty-two men, by the selection of George W. Robertson as 1st lieutenant; was also, to the time of its disbandment, engaged in active service with the 1st Nebraska infantry and the 3d Missouri cavalry in the same section of country. The rolls of no other companies have been received at this office, and not even these organizations were ever mustered into the service, owing to the interruption of communication between Batesville and department headquarters.

In the month of May, 1864, the command of all recruits for the regiment was transferred to Captain T. A. Baxter, for the reason assigned in the following order:

SPECIAL ORDER No. 91.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Arkansas, May 3, 1864.

[Extract.]

VIII.—Hon. E. Baxter, recruiting officer for the 4th Arkansas mounted infantry, having been elected to the Senate of the United States from the State of Arkansas, is hereby relieved from duty with that regiment, and will turn over his command and all orders and instructions he may have received relating to the organization of the same to Captain T. A. Baxter, 4th Arkansas mounted infantry, subject to the approval of the War Department.

By order of Major General F. STEELE:

W. D. GREEN, Assistant Adjutant General.

While Hon. Elisha Baxter was in command of the regiment nearly four hundred recruits were enlisted, and after his relief other accessions were made, but the War Department refusing to confirm the authority for raising the regiment as a twelve-months organization, the following order was issued:

SPECIAL ORDER No. 121.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Arkansas, June 2, 1864.

[Extract.]

I.—The authority heretofore granted for the enlistment for one year of a regiment of Arkansas troops, to be designated the 4th Arkansas mounted infantry, not having been confirmed by the War Department, the organization is hereby disbanded. All quartermasters' property and ordnance stores in the possession of the battalion will be turned over to the proper staff officers at Duvall's Bluff.

By order of Major General F. STEELE:

W. D. GREEN, Assistant Adjutant General.

The regiment was accordingly disbanded.

BATTERY A, FIRST ARKANSAS LIGHT ARTILLERY VOLUNTEERS.—HISTORICAL MEMORANDA.

In January, 1863, Denton D. Stark, then adjutant 1st Arkansas cavalry volunteers, received authority to raise the first battery of Arkansas light artillery. April 1st the battery was full, but was not mustered into the service until August 31, 1863. Meantime and until the 25th of April, of this year, it was stationed at Fayetteville, Arkansas, (though officers and men were absent in Missouri procuring horses when the battle of the 18th of April took place,) when, by orders from headquarters of the Department of the Missouri, northwestern Arkansas was evacuated. From May 4 to September 21, 1863, the battery was stationed at Springfield, Missouri, receiving while there guns and equipments. In September, Lieutenant Robert V. Thompson, with one section of the battery, participated in an expedition under the command of Colonel M. Larue Harrison, through southwestern Missouri and northwestern Arkansas, in pursuit of Colonel Coffee's command, then raiding in that section of country, and proceeded thence to Fayetteville, Arkansas. The remaining two sections of the battery, under command of Captain Stark, left Springfield, Missouri, September 21, 1863, for Fayetteville, marching at first, however, as far north as Greenfield, Missouri, under Colonel Harrison, who was then in pursuit of General Shelby. Moving then to Fayetteville, one section of the battery took part, about October 20, in a skirmish with the enemy, under Colonel Brooks, at Cross Timbers, Missouri. The battery remained at Fayetteville until March 19, 1864, when, by order of Brigadier General Thayer, it marched to Fort Smith. On the 23d of March it joined the expedition to Camden, forming a part of Colonel Adams's brigade. It was present in the skirmish at Moscow, on or about the 13th day of April, with four guns in action, and relieved the 2d Indiana battery, under a severe fire from the enemy's artillery. Leaving Camden with the retreating force under General Steele, April 28, it reached Little Rock May 3, 1864, and moved thence with the frontier division of the Army of Arkansas to Fort Smith. In October, 1864, one section of the battery, under Lieutenant Mayes, was sent with other troops in pursuit of Colonel Gano, who had captured a supply train between Fort Scott and Fort Smith, making a forced march to Cabin creek, north of Fort Gibson, where they came up with the enemy retreating, but he escaped.

The battery occupied Fort No. 2, at Fort Smith, until the 30th day of August, 1865, when it was mustered out of the service. The men were principally residents of Benton, Washington, Madison, Crawford, Sebastian, Franklin, Johnson, and Sevier counties; were faithful, brave, and efficient, and reflected great credit upon the battery and the State.

* In the fall of 1863 effort was made at Little Rock to raise the 3d regiment of infantry volunteers, but without success. About the same time the raising of the 4th infantry was begun, in the western portion of the State, and, though the efforts to raise the 3d were shortly afterwards abandoned, the 4th underwent no change of name, while it remained a separate organization.

DOCUMENTS

RELATING TO

THE COUNTERMAND OF THE ORDER FOR THE EVACUATION OF FORT SMITH
AND ITS DEPENDENCIES.

DECEMBER, 1864.

APPENDIX B.

Documents relating to the countermand of the order for the evacuation of Fort Smith and its dependencies, December, 1864.

Advices having been received that the evacuation of Fort Smith and its dependencies had been ordered by the general commanding the division of west Mississippi, and this order being considered by the State authorities as extremely disastrous if executed, the undersigned was directed to proceed at once to Washington to procure, if possible, its countermand, and for this purpose, to act in conjunction with the members of Congress and senators elect from the State, should they be at the capital.

The documents with which he set out on the 15th of December, 1864, and which he was directed to lay before the President, as also the communications sent and received in the progress of the negotiations, are hereinafter set forth as follows :

No. .1

LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS, December 14, 1864.

TO ABRAHAM LINCOLN, President of the United States:

The undersigned, officers of the loyal government of the State of Arkansas, have learned with profound solicitude of the promulgation of an order of the commander of the division of west Mississippi, directing the immediate evacuation of Fort Smith and its dependencies, a measure that involves the abandonment of the whole western portion of the State, and our control of the Indian territories, and throws open southwestern Missouri and southern Kansas to the incursions of the enemy.

This blow is disastrous in the extreme to the suffering loyalty of this State, and unless justified by imperative military necessity, we most earnestly and respectfully request that the order in question be revoked. We are loth to believe that you are advised of the consequences of this movement, particularly at a time when the country is freer from guerillas than it has been at any period since the outbreak of the rebellion. Rebel families are almost daily moving south, and the well-nigh crushed Union men of the State were taking heart.

Your re-election, and the consequent increased hope of the recognition of their State government, inspired them, and they will now contemplate with dismay the abandonment of the homes of a large majority of them to the enemies of the government, whose hate, intensified by disaster, will utterly desolate their country.

Meantime hundreds of Union citizens will be powerless to avert this calamity. Their means of transportation are exceedingly limited, and they will be fortunate if they leave the State with their lives alone. Must these things be? General Steele says to his immediate superior that he can supply Fort Smith by the Arkansas river, and there is no difficulty in provisioning Fayetteville from Springfield, Missouri.

Not to be importunate, then, much less unseemly in our application, we again earnestly ask, in behalf of our suffering fellow-citizens, for the maintenance in whose country of the Constitution and laws of the United States armies are sent here, that this step throwing back the section of country evacuated to its condition in 1862 be not taken, or if consummated before our action in the premises and that of the legislature of the State are made known, that the reoccupation of this country be ordered.

With the highest respect, we remain, your obedient servants,

ISAAC MURPHY,

Governor of Arkansas.

ROBERT J. T. WHITE,

Secretary of State.

No. 2.

Resolutions of the general assembly of Arkansas, passed at Little Rock, December 14, 1864.

Whereas the general assembly has learned with surprise and regret that despatches have reached this city ordering the United States military forces to evacuate the district of the frontier in this department; and whereas such evacuation will leave the northern and northwestern counties of this State and southwestern Missouri, a country several hundred miles in extent, subject to the merciless ravages of the bushwhackers and robbers, and thus cause the most loyal portion of Arkansas to become a scene of ruin and desolation; and whereas there are large amounts of valuable government and private property at the posts of Fort Smith, Van Buren, and Fayetteville, that for want of transportation will necessarily be destroyed or fall into the hands of the enemy, amounting to many thousands of dollars, without taking into consideration valuable public expenditures that have been made; and whereas, above all other considerations, there are thousands of persons, members of loyal families, now under the protection of federal soldiers of that district who have no means of transportation to remove themselves or effects, who will therefore necessarily be left at the mercy of those who spare neither bedding, food, nor clothing, and thus in the rigors of midwinter will be compelled to travel on foot to the federal lines, or famish for want of the necessaries of life; and whereas the people in common with ourselves have already suffered much for our devotion to the Union of our fathers and have great confidence in the justice, patriotism and humanity of the Executive of the United States, and an abiding faith that he will fulfil his promises to the loyal people of this State, and extend to each of them all the protection in his power, consistent with the common good of the nation: Therefore,

Be it resolved by this general assembly, That in behalf of the hundreds of families of Union soldiers and of many loyal citizens, who are without the means of transportation in this time of dire necessity, we appeal to those in authority not to carry the above order into effect during the severity of winter, and if it must be executed, that this be done at a different season of the year.

Be it further resolved, That in the name of humanity and the loyal people of western and northwestern Arkansas, we appeal to the President to cause said order issued as aforesaid requiring the evacuation of the district of the frontier of this department, to be revoked, and that a sufficient number of troops remain to hold the posts now occupied in said district.

Resolved further, That we call the attention of the government to the propriety of establishing a military post at Jacksonport or Batesville in northeastern Arkansas.

Resolved further, That our delegation at Washington with Lieutenant Colonel Bishop, acting adjutant general of Arkansas, be intrusted with the foregoing resolutions.

Approved December 14, 1864.

ISAAC MURPHY,
Governor of Arkansas.

No. 3.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Arkansas, November 24, 1864.

GENERAL: It is my opinion that the Arkansas can be relied upon as a means of transportation for supplies to Fort Smith. The river is at present navigable, and supplies have been forwarded by steamers sufficient to last until there shall be another rise, when a year's supply can be sent at once. If there had been a year's supply here for Fort Smith last winter it might have been sent there by steamers. There is every indication now that we shall have a navigable river. It has been cloudy and rainy here for several weeks, which is a sure indication of snow in the mountains. The bayous and sloughs are all full and the streams high. At all events I am opposed to breaking up Fort Smith for the following reasons: It has been strongly fortified at a very considerable expense and can be held against great odds. It is a flanking arrangement to this depot and helps to cover De vall's Bluff as well as Arkansas and Missouri.

To give up the whole northwestern portion of Arkansas would be a breach of good faith on the part of the government towards the loyal citizens of that section, and to the friendly Indians of the Territories. If our troops should evacuate Fort Smith the rebels would at once take possession of it and prepare for raids.

* * * * *

If Fort Gibson should be given up, which would necessarily follow the evacuation of Fort Smith, we should lose all influence over the friendly Indians, who would be compelled to plunder the settlements of the whites or starve, or they would be plundered and perhaps driven out of their country by the rebels. There are some other considerations that I will not now mention.

Very respectfully, general,

F. STEELE, Major General.

Major General J. J. REYNOLDS,

Commanding Military Division West Mississippi.

No. 4.

MARSHAL'S OFFICE, UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
EASTERN DISTRICT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, December 14, 1864.

DEAR SIR: I have just returned from an interview with General Steele, in which he showed me General Canby's order for the abandonment of Fort Smith and all the posts in Arkansas northwest of this. During the afternoon my office was visited by men from Fayetteville, &c., army officers, in deep distress at the ruin entailed upon them, and the danger and suffering in store for their families and neighbors. It is truly a terrible necessity, if it is a necessity at all, that a fortification like Fort Smith, the key of Kansas and Missouri, built at great expense, easily defensible and well garrisoned, not to speak of other posts, must be turned over to rebel occupation without a blow.

I should not write this if I knew that the order was given with your sanction, for I should then have faith that all was well, and that the great present sacrifice was essential to the sure attainment of some greater good to come. Now, I do not so feel, and the trouble of these poor men cuts me to the heart. The order relieving General Steele does not take effect until the 25th instant, and as General Canby's order for the evacuation is dated the 5th, General Steele is compelled to perform, and is promptly now performing, a duty against the imposition of which he has protested in the strongest language.

There will be many loyal men who will be unable to get away, and of these not a man will be left alive upon whom the rebels can lay their hands.

Do not, I beg of you, consider me presumptuous. I am not speaking for myself; but without some great and good reason, something overbearing and imperative, this thing ought not to be done.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

W. O. STODDARD.

President LINCOLN.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS,

December 14, 1864.

A. LINCOLN, President of the United States:

The President, we all feel, wishes the loyal people of the rebel States to receive protection. An appeal to him will not be disregarded as we hope and trust. Oppression, wrong, and outrage we have suffered beyond the capability of expression, and now comes General Canby's order to abandon Fort Smith and its dependencies, leaving the loyal portion of the State at the mercy of the Indians and desperadoes of the frontier.

For the sake of humanity and the honor of the government, we beseech you, as President and commander-in-chief of the army, to redeem your pledge of protection. We have done all that could be done on our part. We have been true to the stars and stripes, at the risk of life and property. We ask only protection and that our devotion may meet with some respect. The bearer, Colonel Bishop, has our confidence. Will you listen to him, redress our wrongs, and save your friends from utter ruin.

With high respect,

ISAAC MURPHY,

Governor of Arkansas.

LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS, December 14, 1864.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, President of the United States:

The undersigned, officers of Arkansas regiments in the service of the United States, beg leave to represent to you some of the effects of the order for the evacuation of Fort Smith, Arkansas. It is now garrisoned in part by these regiments, and the families of the soldiers are living in the country adjacent, and even were they fortunate enough, in the great scarcity of transportation, to get away with their lives, would have to leave all their possessions behind, come to our military posts as beggars, and be the despised and contemned refugees of this war. Those who would be left behind would become the prey of rebel desperadoes.

Fort Smith is the key of Kansas and Missouri and the western frontier of Arkansas. All here and south would feel that we were losing ground, and the demoralizing effect upon Arkansas troops would be damaging to a great degree. We therefore would respectfully suggest to you the propriety of revoking the order for the abandonment of Fort Smith and its dependencies.

L. GREGG,
Colonel Fourth Arkansas Cavalry.
J. M. JOHNSON,
Colonel First Arkansas Infantry.
A. H. RYAN,
Colonel Third Arkansas Cavalry.

HEADQUARTERS DEP'T OF ARKANSAS AND 7TH ARMY CORPS,
OFFICE PROVOST MARSHAL GENERAL,
Little Rock, Arkansas, December 14, 1864.

GOVERNOR: I have heard with profound regret and surprise of the order of Major General Canby for the abandonment of western Arkansas and the Indian territory. I have been, as you are aware, in the service of the United States since the opening of the war, and on many a hard-fought field have perilled my life to secure the very territory now ordered to be abandoned, and at a time when to me it seemed for the first time firmly secured to the government of the United States. At no time has it been so free from hostile tread, and it can be truly said that no portion of the territory in dispute is so thoroughly regained. I have to-day received my honorable discharge from the service, and I feel at liberty to make some statements to you which I could not so properly have done while in office, that bear directly on this point.

I have filled the office of provost marshal general since the occupation of Little Rock until to-day, and had organized a very thorough system of secret service. The result of the information which has of late been obtained establishes conclusively the fact that since the disastrous failure of General Price's raid, the enemy had resolved on the abandonment of the State of Arkansas, and fixing their line of defence on Red river. General Magruder has ordered the country to be abandoned by the people, and announced that he will leave only thirty day's provisions to any family failing to obey his instructions to move south of Red river.

The entire strength of General Magruder's army, inclusive of the broken remnant of General Price's army, does not exceed twenty thousand men, effectives. I trust that if possible such representations may be made to the President as will induce him to direct the reoccupation of the territory named.

I am, governor, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. L. CHANDLER.

His Excellency ISAAC MURPHY,
Governor of Arkansas.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Little Rock, Arkansas, December 14, 1864.

The foregoing communication is respectfully referred to the President of the United States.

ISAAC MURPHY,
Governor of Arkansas.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
*Little Rock, Arkansas, December 14, 1864.*To Lieutenant Colonel A. W. BISHOP, greeting :

Reposing especial confidence in your loyalty, patriotism, and zeal for the welfare of the good citizens of Arkansas, and at the instance of the legislature of the State now in session, I, Isaac Murphy, governor of the said State, do, by these presents, commission and appoint you as special agent of the State for the purpose of carrying to the President the remonstrance and protest of the legislature and people thereof against the abandonment of Fort Smith and its dependencies.

You will proceed with all haste to Washington city and urge the impolicy and ruinous consequences that will follow the enforcement of General Canby's order, and will represent to the President of the United States the condition of the western section of this State as it will necessarily and disastrously be affected by the execution of the said order.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the State of Arkansas to be affixed at Little Rock, Arkansas, the day and year first above written.

[L. S.]

ISAAC MURPHY,
Governor of Arkansas.

By the Governor:

R. J. T. WHITE, Secretary of State.

While en route to Washington, a letter of which the following is a copy was received by the undersigned, and used with the foregoing communications:

No. 9.

STEAMBOAT WAR EAGLE, MISSISSIPPI RIVER,
December 17, 1864.

DEAR SIR: In reply to your communication asking information with reference to the practical navigation of the Upper Arkansas river with light-draught boats, I respectfully submit the following facts and suggestions:

I commenced steamboating on the Mississippi river July 4, 1834, and since that time have constantly followed this vocation, having at various periods been master of the following named boats, among others the Pulaski, Elizabeth Rialto, Miami, Marietta, Ed. Walsh, Flying Cloud, Wm. H. Langley, Belvidere, J. J. Cadot, and St. Cloud. I also had a license as a first-class pilot issued under an act of Congress, approved August 30, 1852, by the supervising inspector for the fourth supervising district at St. Louis, specially licensing me to act as such pilot on the Arkansas from the mouth up to the head of navigation of said river.

I first went up this river in 1840, going to Fort Smith, and have navigated it since that time at nearly all seasons of the year, going up forty miles above its confluence with Grand river in the Cherokee nation, and up this river to Fort Gibson. I have likewise navigated the Missouri to Council Bluffs; the Black to Pacahontas, in northeastern Arkansas; the White to Batesville; the Ouachita in southern Arkansas to the mouth of the Little Missouri, fifteen miles above Camden, and the Red river to Fulsom's Bluff in the Choctaw nation, seventy-five miles above Fort Towson. My present address is the Lindell Hotel, St. Louis. It is my experience that the Arkansas is navigable nine months in the year to Fort Smith for boats not drawing more than two feet.

For four months in the year there is an average depth of four feet from its mouth to Fort Smith, and during what is called the June rise it is navigable for boats of the largest draught and capacity.

At present there is an average depth of two feet between Little Rock and Fort Smith, and of three and a half feet from the former place to the mouth of the river, and on this stage of water two round trips, and perhaps more, can be made per month. Boats can be procured or constructed that will carry seventy-five tons of freight on two feet of water from Little Rock to Fort Smith, and tow two barges carrying twenty-five tons each; and such boats are now in commission on some of the tributaries of the Mississippi.

Should it be thought desirable to build others, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, offers the best facilities. These boats should draw from 12 to 15 inches light; have an extreme length of about 140 feet; 36 feet beam; $3\frac{1}{2}$ feet depth of hold; cylinders, 15 inches in diameter, with $3\frac{1}{2}$ feet stroke. Two boilers would be sufficient.

I remain, very respectfully, yours,

J. J. DAVIS.

Lieutenant Colonel A. W. BISHOP, Washington, D. C.:

You will arrive in a day or two. Exert yourself for northwestern Arkansas. Don't let government leave a thousand Union families to the tender mercies of assassins and robbers.

I write you to-day; await my letter at Washington.

M. LA RUE HARRISON.

Colonel Commanding.

On the evening of the 27th of December, 1864, an interview was had with the President by the Hon. S. C. Pomeroy, United States senator; Hon. John T. Henderson, United States senator; Hons. Henry T. Blow and Joseph W. McClurg, members of Congress from Missouri; the Commissioner of Indian Affairs; Colonel Weer, 10th Kansas infantry volunteers; Robert McBratney, esq., presidential elector from Kansas, and the undersigned, that resulted, after interviews also with the Secretary of War, in the following telegrams:

FAYETTEVILLE, ARKANSAS, December 31, 1864.

Lieutenant Colonel A. W. BISHOP :

General Thayer will wait till January 5, but must have definite orders. Work fast. Get Fayetteville included. It is the work of humanity. I will hold long as I can, but must hear in a few days. All is lost if order is not revoked.

M. LA RUE HARRISON.

January 2, 1865, the undersigned was requested by the Secretary of War to state what he knew concerning the ordered evacuation of Fort Smith, and how he, an officer, came to be in Washington, whereupon the following communication was transmitted to the Secretary :

No. 14.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 2, 1865.

SIR : I have the honor to submit the following facts in relation to the recently ordered evacuation of Fort Smith and dependencies :

General Canby's order to that effect, dated the 5th December, was received at Little Rock, on or about the 13th ultimo, and on the evening of that day was telegraphed, by order of General Steele, to Lewisburg, 60 miles west of Little Rock, from which place it was to be forwarded by messenger across the country to Fort Smith, a distance of 120 miles. By General Steele this order was interpreted to be peremptory, and such I understood from him personally, to be the character of his order to General Thayer.

On the morning of the 15th, with the knowledge of General Steele, though not at his suggestion, but accredited by the governor of the State, the legislature then in session, and variously otherwise, as will more fully appear from the documents which I had the honor of laying before the President of the United States on the evening of the 27th ultimo, I started from Little Rock for this city via Duvall's Bluff, Memphis and Cairo, to respectfully remonstrate against the execution of this order, or at least to insure, if possible, a suspension of proceedings under it until its disastrous effect upon our frontier interests, especially as concerns the Union people of Arkansas and the friendly Indians, should be brought to your notice.

Fayetteville, which controls northwestern Arkansas and aids in protecting southwestern Missouri, though in no sense a dependency of Fort Smith, (always receiving its stores and supplies from Springfield, Missouri,) is in the district of the frontier, and Colonel Harrison, in command, is fully expecting to be compelled to evacuate.

I have been on duty on the frontier since the spring of 1862, and at no time since our occupation of that country has it been so free from the enemy's presence, especially east of the Cherokee line, as since the disastrous termination of General Price's raid into Missouri; and in making this statement allow me to say, that I but simply repeat the declarations of those much higher in authority than myself.

I am here, I am frank to say, without your permission, but entirely upon the business indicated, and coming at a time when, if we acted at all, we must do so promptly. Permit me also and finally to say, that I am on duty with General Steele's consent, as adjutant general of the State, and awaiting, before resigning my position in the army, the action of the present Congress upon the application of the State for the recognition of her government.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. W. BISHOP,

Lieut. Col. First Arkansas Cavalry Volunteers.

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

On the same day a communication, of which the following is a copy, was received and placed on file in the War Department :

No. 15.

FAYETTEVILLE, ARK., December 23, 1864.

COLONEL : To-day I replied to your telegram of the 21st instant, from Cairo. I write this as a simple memorandum to guide you in your entreaties for the suffering women and children of northwestern Arkansas. There are thousands of old men, women, and children left here yet. You know their condition. I have from time to time worked to assist and protect them. Since you left I have established, at their request, post colonies at Rheas's Mill, Engle's Mill, Bentonville, Pea Ridge, Elm Spring, and Huntsville, and am about organizing others at Mudtown, Mount Comfort, Oxford Bend, Richland, McGuire's, Middle Fork, West Fork, and Hog Eye.

The plan is :

1. Fifty men, capable of bearing arms, unite and ask to be organized into a home guard company, and permission to settle on a large tract of abandoned land, which is all in one body.

2. They are organized, armed, and move their families to the place.

3. They build a block-house or small fort in the best point on the land (selected by me.)

4. They sign articles agreeing to be loyal to the United States authorities ; to abide by the laws and orders from the nearest military post ; the laws and present constitution of Arkansas ; the proclamation of the President, &c., and are mustered in as home guards.

They also agree to parcel out the land by vote, giving to each one all he wants to cultivate, but to have nothing in common, except common defence and obedience to law. Thus all persons within ten miles of these settlements are expected to enroll their names and belong to them, and none but rebels have, so far, objected.

Six of the settlements have made such progress that each will raise large quantities of corn next season, and the Union Valley settlement has agreed to deliver one thousand tons of hay next season, if needed.

Bentonville and Elm Springs are filling with people who have moved in. Winningham is going to settle Mudtown with fifty Arkansas families returned from Missouri.

All this is no chimera ; it is half accomplished now, and the other companies are forming and will be at work within ten days. Some of the forts are nearly done. The refugees have nearly all left this place and gone to the colonies.

Bushwhackers' families have, two-thirds of them, been scared to Texas, and the others are fast going. No bushwhacker can exist here next season if government gives these people a little protection. One regiment here is enough. I have excellent winter quarters just about completed for the whole regiment. You know of the warehouses and forts. The latter have been made almost impregnable with scarp, galleries, &c. You know the rest.

Say it to the powers that be—beg for this distressed people, who have so often been committed to our cause and then had their support withdrawn ; represent how few troops I have in this district; I don't ask for more; I don't even ask to stay, though I would like to do so for the sake of the people, but at all events have some troops sent here. You can say all that is needed.

Telegraph me the instant the order is revoked, and telegraph if you fail. It must be before January 1, 1865, if possible, or it will not save us.

Yours, for Arkansas,

M. LA RUE HARRISON,
Colonel First Arkansas Cavalry.

The same day the following telegraphic order was issued :

U. S. MILITARY TELEGRAPH,
Washington, D. C., January 10, 1865.

TO COMMANDING OFFICERS Fort Smith and Fayetteville :

Lieutenant General Grant has directed that Fort Smith and adjacent posts be not evacuated if they can be supplied, and if they be already abandoned that they be reoccupied as early as supplies can be furnished to them.

These orders have been sent to Major General J. J. Reynolds.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major General and Chief of Staff.

A partial evacuation had taken place before this order was received at Fort Smith, but the troops were recalled and the disasters feared mainly avoided.

The undersigned, by direction of the governor of the State, then remained in Washington until the close of the second session of the thirty-eighth Congress, co-operating with the members elect from Arkansas in endeavoring to secure the recognition of the State government.

HISTORICAL MEMORANDA.

Prior to the organization of this militia the Union citizens of the State had acted together for their mutual defence. In the autumn of 1863, in accordance with orders from Major General Schofield, then commanding the department of the Missouri, several companies of Union men were organized in northwestern Arkansas, the general government issuing arms and ammunition, and when on active service furnishing them with subsistence. These companies were commanded as follows: In Washington county by Captains Bracken Lewis and Mackey; Benton county, Captain Mizer; Carroll county, Captains Gaddy and Walker, and in Madison county by Captain John W. Bivens. There was also a very efficient company organized in West Fork township, Washington county, whose population were pre-eminently loyal, and where, perhaps, to a greater extent than in any other single locality in northwestern Arkansas, outside of a military post, rebellion was made odious and bushwhackers received severe and sudden punishment.

Captain Bivens's company was in active service more than a year, participating frequently in raids upon the enemy and in skirmishes without number. Captains Lewis and Mackey's companies took part in the defence of Fayetteville on the 3d of November, 1864; and all of these organizations rendered valuable aid to the government, for which they have received no compensation.

In the spring of 1864, while the frontier division of the 7th army corps were in the field, co-operating with General Steele, it became necessary for the defence of Fort Smith, and the Union men living in the vicinity, to organize there also a local militia. Four companies were thus formed to do duty in the surrounding country, commanded respectively by Captains Turner, Smith, Gibbons, and Thomas, the battalion by Major Charles C. Reid. Companies were also organized at Ozark and other points on the Arkansas river. At that time guerillas were unusually troublesome in this portion of the State, and in warfare with them, which was actively waged by this militia, Captains Turner, Gibbons, and Thomas, and many of their men, were killed. These companies likewise have never received pay for their services. At the same time the citizens of Fort Smith were partially organized and drilled, and precautions were taken against an attack upon the town, which was somewhat apprehended when the news reached it of the failure of the Red River expedition, and General Thayer, with the frontier division, was stubbornly falling back with General Steele to Little Rock.

Under the following circumstances the militia, the roster of whose officers is published, next arose:

After the unsuccessful attack upon Fayetteville, and the retreat of the rebel army south of the Arkansas river, in November, 1864, large numbers of the Union people, who had during the fall campaign fled to Fayetteville for protection, were left entirely destitute of the means of subsistence. In addition to this, the order for the abandonment of western Arkansas was issued in the December following, and caused until its revocation the stopping of southward-bound trains and the further importation of provisions by citizens. To prevent utter destitution and wretchedness, the danger of which was exceedingly imminent, several armed colonies were organized by Colonel M. La Rue Harrison, then commanding the post of Fayetteville, and shortly afterwards a general system, similar in character, was inaugurated by the governor of the State, with the approval of the commander of the department of the Arkansas. The object of these colonies is elsewhere more specifically set forth, and occasion will only be taken here to allude briefly to results. In northwestern Arkansas, where Colonel Harrison supervised their organization, colonies were established at various places in Washington, Madison, and Benton counties, and preparations were made by him to organize similar ones in the counties of Carroll, Marion, Newton, and Searcy, when the close of the war rendered their establishment unnecessary.

The "Union Valley Post Colony"—a type of them all—located near Rhea's mill, in Washington county, elected J. R. Rutherford, an old citizen of the county, as their captain, built a strong earthwork and stockade redoubt, erected temporary buildings for their families, and went to work earnestly to cultivate the soil. Religious services were observed; a Sabbath and a day school were established, and a blacksmith and wagon shop, and various other appurtenances of a peaceful community, soon sprung up.

As indicative also of the same spirit and necessity in another portion of the State, the following report is presented:

"WHITE OAK COLONY, Arkansas, May 20, 1865.

"SIR: I beg leave to submit to you the following report of the White Oak colony. On the 25th of April, 1865, by Special Order No. 105, I was assigned to take charge of this colony. I entered upon my duties the same date, and brought down sixteen government teams freighted with families, and organized the colony on what is known as the 'Fish Farm,' five miles below Pine Bluff, on the bank of the Arkansas river. Since then, and up to the present date, I have the honor to report the present strength of the colony ninety-six men, home guard militia, (under command of Captain James Kennedy,) forty-nine women, and sixty-two children. I have a day school in operation, with fifty scholars, under a male teacher. I have drawn forty-eight unserviceable government horses for the use of the colony. Notwithstanding the lateness of the season when I organized the colony, and laboring under great disadvantages in procuring farming implements, I have progressed well with corn crops. At this date I have 250 acres of corn planted, and by the 10th of June we will have between five and six hundred acres planted in corn and potatoes. The gardens are also late, but looking well. This colony is composed of loyal, peaceable citizens, and the home guard do their duty as soldiers on guard and picket. This colony is a success, with no expense to the government except rations.

"Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

"WILLIAM LARIMER, JR., Captain Company A, 14th Kansas Cavalry.

"Brigadier General POWELL CLAYTON, Commander United States Forces, Pine Bluff, Arkansas."
